Late papers

Due to the snowstorm last week, our newspaper delivery from the printing plant in Petoskey was a day late. Therefore, last week's Charlevoix Courier was late getting to the post office and newspaper racks by one day, causing a delay in getting the newspaper to our readers. We apologize for this inconvenience.

Miss Michigan?

Charlevoix's Tanya Wyniawskyj is going to compete in the Miss Michigan Pageant in June, following her recent preliminary win.

Winter fun

Last week's snow has given area winter recreation a boost this week. Mount McSauba is up and running and plans are moving along on building an ice rink in East Park.

Lake effect storms bring snow to area for a week

This Christmas, the "Let it Snow" carol was a perfect fit for Charlevoix as flurries doused the area.

The local weather station, located at the Wastewater Treatment Plant — in close proximity to Charlevoix's Michigan Beach — last week recorded Charlevoix has had 36 inches of snow fall, 27 of which was on the ground as of Dec. 27.

"The skiers ought to be happy," Jim Caldwell, a treatment plant employee said.

Caldwell said this was the worst Christmas storm in the last five years.

This year, on Dec. 25, Charlevoix was dusted with 2 inches, making for a white Christmas. Christmases of 1997 and 1999 saw only a trace of snow. During the Christmas of 1996, 2.5 inches fell and in 1998 no snow fell. Last year we saw only 1 inch.

But, Dec. 26 was when we really got hit with holiday snow. Over the past five years, snowfall in Charlevoix has proven to be variable on Dec. 26.

Road crews kept busy as they tried to keep up

The 2001 Christmas snowstorm tried its hardest to shut down Charlevoix and even successfully caught the ultimate snow fighters, plow drivers, off guard.

"Did anyone know it (the storm) was coming? 'Tis the season, that's just the way it is," city of Charlevoix Street Superintendent John Martin said.

Martin said the city plows were out Christmas Day and hit the roads again at 3 a.m. Dec. 26, facing a major project — almost three feet of snow on the roadways.

He said there wasn't one specific area of the city that was hit harder than another, the entire area took a beating. On Dec. 26 the street department's entire fleet of plows, which includes three plows and a sander, were out in force.

Across the county, Charlevoix County Road Commission trucks battled the blizzard.

At 5 a.m. Dec. 26 the 22 truck fleet of county plows and sanders went to work and didn't stop until 7 p.m. only to wake up to another foot of fresh snow the morning of Dec. 27.

During this period of unusually intense snowfall, county plows could

Charlevoix filled the area headlines

The year 2001 was filled with stories that captured headlines and in many cases put the Charlevoix area in statewide and nationwide spotlight.

The following are the top 10, according to the staff of the Charlevoix Courier. They are ranked in impact to the community as was determined by the staff at the Courier:

10) Adoption series — Staff writer Julie Witthoeft outlined the trials and tribulations of modern adoption in a November series that coincided with National Adoption Month.

9) Housing series — Editor Jeremy McBain showed how the Charlevoix area is experiencing a lack of affordable housing options. The series explained how average housing prices are much higher than the average household income, showed readers that there are homeless people living in the area and gave solutions to the problem according to developers, environmentalists and government officials.

8) Cruise ship comes to town — In June 2001, the cruise ship Arcadia visited Charlevoix. This was the first cruise ship to come to the city since the late 1960s. The ship was unable to navigate Pine River Channel and moored off of Michigan Beach while its passengers were ferried to the city to enjoy the area for a day. However, the ship was later given "No Sail" orders at a Detroit dock due to some health violations found by the Center for Disease Control. After making the needed fixes, the ship was back on the water by July. But, this was too late for the charter company that brought the ship to Charlevoix. It folded and filed for bankruptcy.

7) Castle Farms changes hands and is being restored — On Jan. 4, Richard and Linda Mueller, of Long Beach, Miss. and Charlevoix, purchased the Charlevoix landmark Castle Farms. The couple are working on restoring the buildings to their original beauty, a project they expect will take about five years.

6) Beaver Island plane crash — On a dark February night in the middle of an ice storm, four members of the Gault family — a mother and three children — took off from Chicago for a planned trip to their seasonal home on Beaver Island, where their father was waiting for them. On approach to the Beaver Island airport, something went wrong, the pilot lost control of the plane and it crashed in a swampy section of the island. The mother and her children miraculously survived, but the crash killed the pilot and co-pilot. After waiting in the freezing rain for 15 hours, the mother and her children were finally found by Beaver Island Airways pilot and owner Paul Welke — who was flying over the island as part of the search party looking for the plane — and taken to Charlevoix Area Hospital for treatment for minor injuries. The event thrust Beaver Island into the national spotlight.

5) Convention center — The Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau and the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce are studying the possibility of building a convention center in downtown Charlevoix. These two organizations believe this will enhance the winter business in the area.

4) Two murders in Charlevoix — The quiet town of Charlevoix experienced two murders this year. The first was in late April when 21-year-old Charlevoix resident Thomas Aryon Shulick was charged with killing 24-year-old Elk Rapids resident Scott Christopher Cook near the Charlevoix Municipal Marina in East Park. Police say Shulick stabbed Cook with a kitchen knife following a series of confrontations between Shulick and a group of people Cook was with. Shulick faces one count of first degree murder for the crime — a possible life sentence. The trial is scheduled to begin on Jan. 15.

The second was when 23-year-old Juan Antonio Barcenas was arrested for the murder of 8-month-old Carissa Nicole Kuzmik. In November, police responded to an emergency call at Pine Cove Apartments on May Street for a baby that wasn't breathing. A police report states Barcenas, a live-in boyfriend of the baby's mother, punched the baby in the stomach when it wouldn't stop crying. Kuzmik died shortly after emergency crews and police arrived at the apartment. Barcenas, who may be a Mexican national living in the United States illegally, is being held in jail without bond. He is currently undergoing competency testing.

3) School lawsuit — The new Charlevoix High School being built on Marion Center Road remained in the headlines this year. Instead of groups fighting to stop the construction of the school, lawsuits were filed this year to stop the construction of a sewer line to the school by Robert Mossman, Joseph Seidel, Ken Staley, Paul Richards and Kenneth Richard Tunison of Charlevoix. The men claim the proposed sewer line's size is unnecessary for the school and the school district is not allowed to use bond money to pay for it.

The school claims the size of the sewer line is out of its hands and is up to the city of Charlevoix, who the school is paying to construct the line. Furthermore, the school claims it will get the money it puts into this sewer line back as residents and businesses tap into the line and pay a tap-in fee. The city of Charlevoix also states that the size of the sewer line has not even been finalized, but it is considering a larger size because of possible needs by future development in the area.

The Charlevoix circuit court ruled in favor of the school district on the matter in September. However, the group appealed the matter to the Michigan State Court of Appeals where they are waiting for a ruling.

2) Marina expansion — Charlevoix citizens have been voicing their opinions on a plan by the city to renovate the Charlevoix Municipal Marina all year. Originally three possible plans were shown to the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority, in June 2000, showing docks about 440 feet into Round Lake and increases in slips from 17 to 111. Many residents responded negatively to these proposals throughout 2001, even though the city stated they were just possible plans.

The city has scheduled public hearings on the marina for this spring and summer. From these hearings, new marina plans will be drawn up, according to the city.

1) Security Increases in the wake of Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks — Charlevoix residents watched in shock along with the rest of the nation on Sept. 11 as hijacked planes crashed into the World Trade Center in New York City, N.Y. and the Pentagon in Washington, D.C. killing thousands of Americans. In response to these attacks, security tightened throughout the country as we prepared for the possibility of more terrorism. In Charlevoix, Big Rock Nuclear Power Plant increased its security and the U.S. Coast Guard buoy tender Acacia was moved from its downtown Charlevoix dock to the Coast Guard station on the channel between Round Lake and Lake Charlevoix. Additionally, air traffic out of the Charlevoix Municipal Airport was shut down at various times.

While the nation is still on high alert as we enter 2002, the alert status for the Coast Guard has been lowered allowing the Acacia to come back to its downtown dock and planes are flying into and out of the Charlevoix airport.

Driving should not be made more stressful

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

Let's talk about one of my favorite subjects this week....driving.

To be more specific, today's discussion will center on poor driving in winter weather. Now I do not mean the occasional driver that slides into the intersection due to slippery roads. This column will focus on the really poor drivers who decide since the weather is so foul they can drive worse without anyone noticing.

But, I noticed.

During the middle of that massive snow storm we experienced last week, I noticed that these fun drivers were out in force. They were the people making all the good drivers shake their heads and grip their steering wheels with white knuckles just a little tighter.

Let's start with those who do not understand what a "safe driving distance" is.

I know the weather is bad and vision is poor, but that does not give drivers the right to decide to discover how close they can drive behind me. Sure, my lights are pretty good and my truck can block a little bit of the snow and wind, but I don't think the couple of added feet to your visibility by riding my tail makes the road any safer.

Let's suppose I have to actually stop, maybe even quickly. That means the tailgaiter must stop quickly as well. If there is a little slick spot on the road, I have a new friend sitting in the bed of my truck.

Along the lines of this discussion on tailgaiters, last week several people informed me they saw drivers talking on their cellular phones while driving in the constant whiteouts.

Listen, unless you are calling 9-1-1 ahead of time, you do not need to be on your cell phone while driving, much less during a winter storm. Other drivers do not think it is cool and the person you are talking to will not appreciate you screaming in their ear as your vehicle spins into a ditch because you didn't notice that patch of ice.

Let's talk about speeding now; this section goes out to all those SUV driving people whose vehicle has great handling in the snow.

I appreciate that your truck can take those four foot snow drifts on the road and it is kind of cool that you can drive over mountains of ice without spilling your coffee.

What isn't cool is when you decide to show off your vehicle's skills by passing me at warp speed, thus covering my truck in slush and just plain freaking me out. Please, be kind. Snow makes me nervous and my system cannot take the jolt that this gives me.

Speaking of jolts, it is quite an experience to be driving along in a snow storm and see a couple of strange orange lights up ahead. After trying to figure out what these little lights are, suddenly a vehicle appears out of the snow, driving at me with only its parking lights on....eek!

Please tell me why some drivers insist on not turning on their lights in foul weather. It does not hurt your vehicle to do so, especially if you already have your parking lights on.

Maybe they are just too shy to let everyone see them coming. I say, "Be crazy....be wild...turn on those lights all the way! Wouldn't it be fun if other drivers could actually see you? Especially in a snow storm!"

Since this is northern Michigan and it is winter, I am going to include a group of people into this column that aren't normally mentioned in a driving piece....snowmobilers.

I understand you are having a good time and enjoying the outdoors, but that does not mean you have the right to drive anyway you want and wherever you want. This means stay off private property and, for God's sake, don't just zip out across the roads without looking, especially when the road is heavily used.

While your little snowmobile gets great traction on the snow, my truck doesn't. While you can stop on a dime on slick surfaces, I tend to slide. While you are small and not protected by a cab, my truck is heavy and can really hurt if it hits you.

Please remember this. There are already far too many snowmobile accidents in the winter.

The bottom line here folks is: let's be safe on those roads this winter.

We need to remember winter driving means slowing down, taking it easy and thinking of the safety of your fellow drivers on the road as well as yours. This will make all of our winters safer, less stressful and more enjoyable.

New Year's filled with history

Julie Witthoeft

Staff writer

Happy New Year is a phrase commonly expressed in greeting cards and between friends and family during the holiday season, but the modern traditions we engage in have roots that stretch well beyond champagne toasts, goofy hats and assorted noisemakers.

This year the Charlevoix Historical Society gathered early the night of New Year's Eve at Charlevoix Cinema for their traditional movie viewing. They watched a British art film called Greenfingers about cut-throat competitive gardening clubs. Other Charlevoix residents and visitors also made the trek to Cinema III on Antrim Street to ring in the New Year with Hollywood's hottest stars.

After the movie the historical society party moved to Charlevoix's defunct train station, "The Depot," a historic site that has been restored by the society.

At the Depot they spent their evening sipping cocktails and munching hors d'oeuvres. Drinks and eats are a tradition of modern society very commonly associated with New Year's Eve.

The society frosted the evening with a champagne toast at midnight filled with resolutions, hugs, smooches and best wishes for 2002.

At other homes and establishments around town similar gatherings took place. Charlevoix residents and visitors got together, ate, drank and some watched the ball drop in New York City.

What we know today to be traditions associated with ringing in the New Year, are closely related to a hodge podge of historic holiday celebrations. In fact, according to www.Wilstar.com, a personal web site that specializes in holiday hoopla, New Year celebrations started 4,000 years ago in Babylon.

The Babylonian New Year began when the first visible crescent of the moon filled the sky after the first day of spring, a time of rebirth, and lasted for 11 days, each of which was celebrated differently.

"Jan. 1 on the other hand has no astronomical nor agricultural significance. It is purely arbitrary," the site states.

While the start of the New Year no longer coincides with the harvest season and rebirth, it does have historical significance. According to Wilstar, the Romans celebrated the holiday in March but time-and-time again various emperors tweaked the calendar, throwing it out of sync with the cycles of the sun.

In 153 BC the Roman Senate said enough with the wacky dates and declared Jan. 1 the start of the New Year. Wilstar explains western celebrations are not deeply rooted to any one ancient civilization's traditional celebrations.

Over the past 400 years we have celebrated the New Year nabbing traditions from all over.

Wilstar says we borrowed a couple of Babylonian customs including the dreaded New Year's resolution.

We currently vow to exercise regularly and quit partaking in assorted bad habits. But, the site says the most common resolution way back when in Babylon was to return all borrowed farm equipment.

As we gather with friends and family some may also wonder where that came from. While Wilstar makes no mention of a specific region, it explains the custom of gathering was celebrated in many cultures to promote luck in the year to come.

New Year's Day in Charlevoix and in homes across the United States commonly involves a host of sandwiches, dips, sodas and college football bowl games, including the most notable Rose Bowl.

Wilstar says we even borrowed our hallowed football games — the Rose Bowl is a modern derivation of a back-dated Roman custom. The game started out in 1902 as part of the Tournament of Roses.

While some people are kicked back in a recliner decked in collegiate garb, others are celebrating the first baby of the New Year. According to Wilstar this is both an Egyptian and a Grecian tradition dating back to 600 B.C. The child was then, and for some is now, a symbol of fertility and rebirth for the New Year.

There are several other web sites on-line that lead users to interesting links to New Year's celebrations of the past and the present.

So, this year as many people pursued a wide range of traditional Western celebrations, we may have also recognized the folklore and customs of ancient societies.

Winter Solstice celebrated throughout world's history

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

We have just observed one of the world's great holidays.

No, not Christmas, not Hanukkah, not Ramadan, not Kwanzaa and not the New Year. Although the clustering of so many ethnic and religious celebrations at about the same time of the year is no accident.

What we have observed is a world holiday, not an ethnic, religious or geographic one. We have passed the winter solstice: an occasion that has been celebrated for almost as long as there have been human beings on earth.

For most of us in the modern world, the solstice is just a date on the calendar which is sometimes called the beginning of winter.

The word "solstice" literally means a stopping of the sun. Surrounded as we are with light at all seasons of the year, it may be difficult to understand the significance that early temperate zone humans attached to the one day when the sun, which had been inexorably moving lower and lower in the sky, stopped its descent.

Back when we believed in fickle gods who might do anything to us or for us, people built great fires and performed all sorts of rituals and entreaties in hopes of luring the sun back from its distant journey. The day it stopped moving away and began to return was probably the greatest day each year.

Long before we had calendars, months or weeks, people knew intimately the pattern of movement of the sun, the source of warmth and life. That the days began to get longer, that the sun was surely returning, must have helped make the cold of winter more tolerable for those people who had winter. And it should make it more tolerable for us.

Even if we humans do not much note the beginning of longer days, we are surrounded by creatures who do. There is not likely any native plant or animal out there in the world that is not at some level aware that the solstice is passed and that the days are getting longer.

The built-in clock which almost all creatures share, is accurate to within 10 minutes, even in the most unconscious plant. So, surely by the first week in January on our calendar, all the creatures know the solstice has passed and days are lengthening. Those little hormonal signals that guide the behavior and activities of every living thing have begun to tell them that spring is on the way and they should be getting ready.

Buds on plants are months from swelling and doing anything we can see, but deep down inside, they are beginning to make ready. Little microscopic hints of cell division and growth are already underway.

And our exalted humanness doesn't keep us from awareness that days are short.

Several of us suffer from what is called Seasonal Affective Disorder, appropriately abbreviated SAD. Depression of varying degrees of seriousness is part of winter for many of us. The cure for such depression is not surprisingly, exposure to bright light for some additional hours each day.

The Solstice might appropriately remind us that we are tied to the world and all its living things by bonds much stronger and longer lasting than any of the more recently inaugurated human holidays on our calendar.

Celebrate the Solstice.

Top 10 people who had an impact on area in 2001

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor and
By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff writer

Several people were in the Charlevoix headlines this year.

The top 10 newsmakers of the year, according to the staff of the Charlevoix Courier, were:

10) Thomas Aryon Shulick — Shulick is a Charlevoix resident accused of murdering an Elk Rapids man in late April at the Charlevoix Municipal Docks. He is currently being held in the Charlevoix County jail until his trial this January.

9) Juan Antonio Barcenas — Barcenas is accused of murdering an 8-month-old baby girl at Pine Cove Apartments in early November. Barcenas was living in an apartment with the girl's mother at the time. He is currently undergoing tests to determine his competency for a trial.

8) Marybeth Wallick — Wallick is the former director of the Charlevoix Area Public Library. She made headlines in May as she fought the Charlevoix Library Board for her position. The board was accused of trying to push her out of the position and not giving the public reasons why. Wallick ended up retiring from the library after coming to a deal with the board that also stated she could no longer comment on it.

7) Jacqueline Merta — Merta is the president of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce. This year the chamber took on many new projects that it believes will enhance business in the city. Two of the more notable ones making headlines were: Bringing a cruise ship to Charlevoix for the first time since the 1960s and working to create a convention center in Charlevoix.

6) Dan Barron — Barron is the president of the Charlevoix Venetian Festival board. The festival is always the biggest event of the summer in Charlevoix and this year's was even bigger. Under Barron's leadership, the festival increased the musical acts to include concerts at Bridge Park as well as East Park, had another two nights of fireworks over Charlevoix, brought the Michigan State University marching band to the Venetian Festival parade and increased the size and amount of activities during Kids Day, among many others.

5) Dr. John Sturock — As superintendent of the Charlevoix Public Schools, Sturock has had his ups and downs this year. While cheering on several sport teams to state finals, seeing great results in the students' state test scores and watching a new high school finally start construction, he has also had to deal with several lawsuits filed over the new high school throughout the year. While all of the lawsuits were ruled in favor of the school in local courts, many still tend to pester him as they were appealed to the Michigan Court of Appeals.

4) Robert Mossman, Joseph Seidel, Ken Staley, Paul Richards, Kenneth Richard Tunison— This group was responsible for the filing of several lawsuits this year against the Charlevoix School District over the new high school on Marion Center Road. Many of the members of this group were originally against the construction of the new school and sued to stop it. Those lawsuits were ruled in favor of the school district by the circuit court. Later they came out against the construction of a sewer line to the school and sued to stop that. The lawsuit against the sewer line was also ruled in favor of the school district by the circuit court. However, the group has taken the sewer line issue to the Michigan State Court of Appeals, where it sits waiting for a ruling.

3) The Gault family — The mother and three children of this Chicago family were on their way by airplane to Beaver Island in February to meet up with their father. However, the weather was horrible the night they left and the pilot experienced trouble over the island. The plane ended up crashing in the woods, killing the pilot and co-pilot, but the mother and children survived. The crash was covered extensively by local and national media.

2) Mike Wiesner — Wiesner is the manager of the city of Charlevoix. In 2001, Wiesner undertook several capital improvement projects in Charlevoix. Most notably, the renovation of Michigan and Depot beaches and the repaving of Michigan and Belvedere avenues. Additionally, being the point-man for the city has put Wiesner at the front of many controversial issues over the last year, such as proposed renovations to the Charlevoix Municipal Marina.

1) Keith Haske — Haske is the coach of the Charlevoix High School boys' varsity basketball team. The team took second in the state finals in March at the Breslin Center in East Lansing. Currently, the team has not lost a game this season and hopes are high they will be back in East Lansing this year.

Some tips for your home this winter

A snow covered roof may look festive, but inadequate insulation could lead to a soggy ceiling, says AAA Michigan.

The heavy December snowfall caught many homeowners by surprise. To help homeowners prepare for the worst that winter can bring, AAA Michigan has the following "winter home care" tips:

- Get your mind on the gutter. Eavestroughs that are blocked with leaves can cause ice dams to form and force water up under the shingles. Clear gutters now and periodically during the winter.
- Trim your trees. Through selective pruning, weak branches can be removed that might otherwise break in high winds and damage your car or home.
- Inspect your insulation. If necessary, add extra insulation to attics, basements and crawl spaces.
- Pamper your pipes. Make sure your water pipes are adequately protected from the cold. If you wish to install "heat tape" on your pipes, hire a professional. Improperly installed heat tape can cause fires. Do not attempt to thaw pipes using an open flame; hair dryers have been known to do a great job.
- Stay warm and safe. Only as a last resort, use alternate heat sources. Kerosene, propane and electric heaters are a frequent cause of home fires. When using, always follow manufacturer's guidelines and never leave unattended. Keep heaters away from curtains, corners and walls. Keep electrical cords off carpeting. Refuel kerosene heaters outdoors and use only kerosene recommended by manufacturers.
- Gas ovens should never be used as an alternate heat source.
- Clean your chimney and have your furnace inspected annually. These services can each range from $50 to $100 but could prevent your house from burning down. Change your furnace filter every month to 45 days.
- Do not overload electrical outlets.
- If planning to purchase a wood-burning stove, have it installed by a professional, meeting all codes and manufacturer installation guidelines. Use a humidifier to add moisture to the dry winter air.
- Use ceiling fans to distribute warm air more efficiently throughout the home.
- Install and maintain smoke detectors on all living levels and near each bedroom.
- Keep snow clear from utility meters for easy access.
- If possible don't pile snow against the side of the home.

"Spending a few hours now looking at roofs to make sure shingles are in place can save homeowners potentially expensive repairs later," Ric Phillips, director of homeowner claims for AAA Michigan said.

"In their search for comfort, many homeowners unknowingly place themselves and their families at risk. Improperly used heat sources, frozen plumbing, dirty chimneys — these are all factors that can leave you, quite literally, out in the cold."

Charlevoix grad to compete in Miss Michigan

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

> "My reaction at the time? There is absolutely no way this just happened."
> Tanya Wyniawskyj,
> On winning a preliminary to the Miss Michigan pageant

Charlevoix will have a representative at the Miss Michigan pageant this year.

Former Charlevoix Venetian Queen and Charlevoix resident Tanya Wyniawskyj will be attending the pageant in June in Muskegon. She received this chance after winning the title of Miss Greater Central Michigan on Nov. 4, in Mount Pleasant, a preliminary to Miss Michigan.

"My reaction at the time? There is absolutely no way this just happened," Wyniawskyj said of the new crown and chance to compete for the Miss Michigan title.

"It was completely and totally unexpected," she said.

In order to compete in the Miss Michigan pageant, potential contestants must win one of several preliminary pageants, which includes the Miss Greater Central Michigan pageant.

Wyniawskyj said she competed against 23 other women in the recent pageant and never thought she would win it. Most of the other competitors were 23-24 years old and had competed in other preliminaries.

Wyniawskyj, who is 18, said she just competed to get some experience.

During the pageant, contestants are scored on a personal interview, swimsuit, evening gown and talent.

Wyniawskyj's interview revolved around her platform, "Help to mend, be a friend." This is a program where high school students volunteer their time to mentor other youth in the community.

For the talent portion, Wyniawskyj sang Natalie Coles' "Orange Colored Sky," which she describes as a "fun and light" tune that she could have fun with.

To prepare for the event, Wyniawskyj — who is a freshman at Central Michigan University — said she would take a radio into a sound-proof room in her dorm late at night and sing. Plus, she said she watched what she ate and listened to Latin music to ease her stress.

In addition to her family's support while she prepared for this recent pageant, Wyniawskyj said she was fortunate to have supportive roommates in her dorm that helped calm her and give her confidence.

Now that she is going to be competing for the Miss Michigan title, she will need all the support she can get.

Wyniawskyj said she is already looking for the perfect song to perform and must buy an expensive evening gown and attend to many other pricey details.

Most contestants spend around $10,000 for the Miss Michigan Pageant, Wyniawskyj said. This means she must find sponsors to help fund this.

In addition to this, she will be making appearances as Miss Greater Central Michigan at various festivals and events throughout the state. And she must fit time in to study for her college courses — Wyniawskyj is going into special education with a major in teaching the emotionally impaired and a double minor in English and speech.

"It will be hectic," she said.

But, in the end, Wyniawskyj said the chance to compete in the Miss Michigan Pageant and represent Charlevoix will make up for all the hard work and stress.

"I hope the community is proud, proud to know they have someone going to the Miss Michigan Pageant. It is an honor to me to know that I am representing this town at the state level," she said.

If you would like to help sponsor Wyniawskyj, please contact her at (231) 547-1946 or write to her at 1113 Charlo Street, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

HEALTH

Take care of your pet's bad breath and bad teeth

Matthew Grimmel, D.V.M

'Your pet's health'

Bad breath in our four-legged companions is not pleasant to say the least, but the problem goes much deeper than that all too familiar foul odor.

Dental disease, the most common cause of bad breath in our companion animals, is a serious medical condition that affects up to 80 percent of our pet population. In this article we will review the common signs of dental disease in our pets and discuss how regular home and veterinary dental care can both treat and control this common condition.

As I mentioned above, bad breath is the most common complaint heard by veterinarians from owners of pets suffering from dental disease.

Take a moment to lift your pets lips — if it is safe to do so — and you may see other common signs such as tarter build-up (hard, brown, plaque bacterial deposits often located near the gumline), gingivitis (reddening of the gumline due to infection) or even tooth loss if the condition is advanced. In addition, pets will often lose interest in hard food due to soreness associated with gum infection.

All of these signs are unsightly, but the real problem lies in how they affect your pet's overall health. Once tarter build-up has progressed to causes gingivitis, the bacteria in your pet's mouth have direct access to your pet's bloodstream.

Often, this bacterial exposure causes a thickening of the heart valves and diseases of the brain, liver and kidneys. There is no doubt that if allowed to persist, dental disease will shorten the lifespan of our furry friends.

How can we prevent or control dental disease? The foundation for good pet oral hygiene is consistent home care.

Contrary to popular belief, most pets are very tolerant to regular (3-4 times a week) tooth brushing. Mother nature has also given us an advantage by placing the trouble areas on the outside of the teeth so we needn't even open our pet's mouth's to get the job done.

For those of you who are certain that your pet will not stand to have his/her teeth brushed or are not comfortable performing the task, many antibacterial rinses exist that need only be squirted onto the teeth and are 75 percent as effective as brushing.

These activities, along with feeding dry pet food, are very effective at removing plaque bacteria and significantly delaying or preventing the formation of tarter build-up. Unfortunately, existing tarter build-up cannot be removed with home care alone and veterinary care is needed.

When performing dental cleanings for your pet, your veterinarian uses the same dental instrumentation used by your dentist to clean your teeth. During this procedure, tarter build-up is removed completely, the teeth are polished and given a fluoride treatment, thus removing direct bacterial contamination to your pet's bloodstream, and allowing the gum infection to clear. At this point, pets with pre-existing tarter build-up would begin their homecare regimen.

If your pet is showing any of the warning signs of dental disease or you have questions regarding home or veterinary dental care, please seek veterinary assistance.

Working together we can extend the healthy lifespan of our good friends by eliminating the discomfort and illness associated with dental disease.

JAN 2002

NOTICE OF SHOW CAUSE HEARING AND JUDICIAL FORECLOSURE HEARING NON-PAYMENT OF PROPERTY TAXES

On March 1, 2001 real estate with unpaid 1997 and/or 1999 property taxes was forfeited to the Charlevoix County Treasurer pursuant to the General Property Tax Act, Public Act 206 of 1893, PA 206, MCL 211.1 to 211.157, as amended.

The State of Michigan is acting as the Foreclosing Governmental Unit in proceedings to foreclose on this property for unpaid property taxes.

There are two hearings scheduled to finalize the foreclosure process. This publication is intended to provide additional notice to parties of interest in these parcels as to the nature, time, and location of these hearings.

A Show Cause Hearing is scheduled for Jan 15-Feb 3, 2002 at 608 S Washington, Lansing MI 48933.
Any person with an interest in the property forfeited to the county treasurer may appear at the show cause hearing and redeem that property or show cause why absolute title to that property should not vest in the Foreclosing Governmental Unit.

A Judicial Foreclosure Hearing is scheduled for Feb 15, 2002 1:30 PM at 33rd Circuit Court, 301 State St, Charlevoix MI 49720.
At this hearing the Foreclosing Governmental Unit shall ask that the court enter a judgment foreclosing the property as requested in the petition for foreclosure. A person claiming an interest in a parcel of property set forth in the petition for foreclosure, who desires to contest that petition, must file written objections with the clerk of the circuit court and serve those objections on State of Michigan, the Foreclosing Governmental Unit. The docket number of the petition is 01-895-19-CZ.

If you are a person with an interest in property being foreclosed:

! You have the right to redeem this parcel from the foreclosure process by payment of all forfeited unpaid taxes, interest, penalties, and fees prior to the expiration of the redemption period. You should contact the Charlevoix County Treasurer for the amount required to redeem.
! You may lose your interest in the property as a result of the foreclosure proceeding.
! The title to the property shall vest absolutely in the Foreclosing Governmental Unit unless all forfeited unpaid delinquent taxes, interest, penalties, and fees are paid within 21 days after judgment is entered in the foreclosure proceedings.

PLEASE NOTE :

The following list represents parties that appear to have title, lien, or other apparent rights to the parcels being foreclosed by the Foreclosing Governmental Unit.

This notice is required to be given by law, even if the party no longer claims or desires an interest if it appears they hold any undischarged, apparent, or potential title or lien right to the property.

Listing of a party does NOT necessarily indicate that they are the owner of a parcel, or that they are liable for the property taxes.

This list is NOT an offering of property for sale. These parcels are NOT being sold, auctioned, or otherwise made available by virtue of this notice.

There is no procedure for purchasing these parcels from the Foreclosing Governmental Unit at this point in the foreclosure proceedings. Those parcels that are foreclosed and not redeemed may become available at public auction in July, September, and November of 2002. These parcels remain the property of their current owner until redemption rights have expired. No party should make any attempt to inspect or enter upon these parcels assuming them to be for sale. This may constitute trespassing and subject the offender to criminal prosecution. The street address of the parcels listed is based on local records and is not guaranteed to be the actual location of the property.

The amount due listed indicates the balance which was due as of forfeiture on March 1, 2001. The current amount required to redeem must be obtained from the Charlevoix County Treasurer, as additional penalties, fees, and interest have accrued since forfeiture.

Snow gives area winter recreation a boost

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Before Christmas Day, northern Michigan's winter sports enthusiasts and recreation hot spots were dreaming of snow....their dreams came true.

"This (weather conditions Dec. 25, 26 and 27) was quite a change from Sunday (Dec. 24). We got lucky. I think we got more snow than anyone in the north," Mt. McSauba manager Bo Boss said.

He said the storm helped push up the facility's opening date by about two weeks. All of McSauba's six runs and cross country trails opened for the season at 11 a.m., Dec. 29.

Also open is the McSauba sledding hill.

Boss said the run has been open since the major Christmas snowfall. He also said the run is safer this year as the parking barrier which once bordered the end of the hill has been moved off to the side.

Mother Nature hit both the sledding hill and the ski runs with over 40 inches of snow. Boss said the fluffy feet pack down to about three to four inches of a solid skiing base, which is why the facility continues to make snow.

Before the storm hit, Boss said the hill was 90 percent covered in green grass.

He said the temperature finally dropped on Christmas Eve allowing him to fire up the snow making machines.

"They (the snow makers) have been running ever since and will probably keep running the next three weeks," Boss said.

He explained last year all the hill's snow making for the year was completed before Christmas. Many people are used to the earlier opening date. In fact, anxious skiers have been flooding the phone lines at the local hill.

Boss said on Dec. 27 he had 75 calls wondering when opening day would arrive.

He added the snow delay this year meant during the first week of the Charlevoix School District's winter break kids were shining their skis and snow boards dreaming of riding the hills. He's excited for the kids.

"They can still get a full week of skiing in," he said.

In addition to the skiers, the snowmobilers are out in force.

John Ferguson, a member of the board of directors of the Charlevoix Snowmobile Club, said the 17 mile snowmobile trail that runs from Charlevoix to East Jordan was being groomed Dec. 27.

He said conditions were wet and the groomers were packing the snow down. The trail will be groomed often throughout the winter.

In Charlevoix, snowmobilers can pick the trail up by the city garage located past the Flight Deck off US-31 south or across from the intersection of Ferry Road and M-66.

While snowmobilers and skiers are soaking up the snow, Charlevoix city ice skaters could use a lull in the snowfall.

City manager Mike Wiesner said the street department will begin pouring the two city ice rinks, one at the high school and one in East Park, in the near future.

"(The rinks will be poured) As soon as we get a break from the snow," Wiesner said.

City street superintendent John Martin said work will start some time this week.

Accidents abound during recent snowstorm

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Recent heavy snowfall left roads snow covered and in some cases slick, leading cars into ditches and into each other.

"The amount of snow the county has gotten in the last four days (Dec. 24 to Dec. 28) is overwhelming. Our guys are working overtime," Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater said.

In the wake of unusually heavy snowfall, Lasater said his department's approach hasn't changed and his police officers are using "common sense as they always do."

In numerous locations across the county, roads proved precarious for drivers. Lasater reported county police officers responded to 25 property damage accidents that occurred on county roads between Dec. 24 and Dec. 28.

Aside from the chaos caused by vehicles running into each other, Lasater said there were countless cars stuck.

"There were 40 to 50 cars stuck in driveways or roads; I accounted for five of those myself," Lasater said.

He found himself spinning his wheels five times in a 48 hour period, Dec. 26 and 27.

He further reported two personal injury snowmobile accidents that happened in Charlevoix County during the storm.

As of Dec. 28 the Charlevoix City Police Department responded to four parking lot accidents and two accidents that took place on city streets. One of the two street wrecks happened at the corner of Antrim and State streets and the other at the corner of Marion Center Road and US-31 south.

Snowstorm hit area last week

SNOW

On this date, there has always been some new snow, but it ranges from light, .3 inches which fell in 1997, all the way to heavy with 15 inches that fell this year. On Dec. 26, 1998, it was a day similar to this year when 10 inches fell. But Dec. 26, 1999 and 2000 a pathetic half inch and two inches respectively fell.

According to meteorologist Bruce Smith, with the National Weather Service, the Christmas conditions felt in Charlevoix and in Emmet County this year were anything but typical lake effect. In situations of typical lake effect, he said areas will see anywhere from 3-5 inches of snow fall.

"What makes lake effect snow so challenging is it is hard to gauge how consistent the winds will be," Smith explained.

Smith said in this situation, the winds didn't vary much over the 24 hour period from Dec. 25 to Dec. 26.

"The wind stayed right there and you got the brunt of it," Smith said.

During this storm the winds were west and southwesterly. Smith said the wind traveled a long way over Lake Michigan gaining moisture and instability along the way.

Smith couldn't make a long-term prediction guaranteeing this winter would either continue on its treacherous path or divert. But on Dec. 27 he did say, "In the short term, the snow will continue over the next several days and could be locally heavy ...."

County, city fight to keep roads passable even be seen pulling each other out of deep snow that had immobilized their tires.

Pat Harmon, Charlevoix County Road Commission manager, also said his crew was taken off guard. He was informed on the night of Dec. 25 that the Charlevoix area would be dusted with 3-5 inches of snow.

And on Dec. 26 weather services predicted there would be 8 to 10 inches of new snow.

No one warned them over 3 feet would fall.

But Harmon wasn't shocked the predictions were so far off.

"Lake effect is too hard to predict," he said.

Charlevoix's lake shore communities definitely felt the brunt of the lake effect storm front clocking in over 40 inches in Hayes and Bay townships, the two places Harmon said were hit the hardest.

And the Charlevoix area was the focus of the madness. Harmon said East Jordan received 6-8 inches of white, fluffy snow and Boyne City barely saw flakes, getting a total of about 3 inches in the two day period.

As of Dec. 27, Harmon said the biggest challenge the road warriors faced was getting all the roads opened up, widened out and pushing back banks.

"It might take three to four days before things will get back to normal; this isn't a day and a half project. We need a break....We don't need 30 inches of snow at a time, that's too much to deal with at once," he said.

Wharfside funding in limbo

State appraisal comes in much lower than city's

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Indefinite funding sources for the acquisition of the Wharfside building, located at 330 and 332 Bridge Street, have delayed the city's plans to buy the building.

The funding mess lead city officials to request an extension on the purchase agreement they signed with building owners Rex and Ineke McCarthy agreeing to buy the building for $1,235,000.

"The delay is the best way to go, there are too many unknowns," Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner explained to city council at its Jan. 7 meeting.

He further explained the unknowns to be funding related.

Two local appraisals of the Wharfside property were done. The first showed the property value to be $1,113,000 and the second said it was worth $1,135,000.

Those appraisals were then sent to the state of Michigan which conducted a state review and set the fair market value of the property. But, the state recorded the Wharfside's worth at $825,000.

"That's a real problem for us," Wiesner told council.

The problem for the city is the Department of Natural Resources Trust Fund division, one of its main funding sources for the project, bases the amount of their monetary gift to the city, on the state appraisal.

The Trust Fund agreed to allocate 40 percent of the cost of the property up to $500,000 for the purchase.

Wiesner told council the city expected the state appraisal would come in close to the first appraisal done by the city, $1,113,000.

If what the city was banking on was the reality, the Trust Fund would give the project $445,200. But, based on the state appraisal, the city would be given $330,000 — $115,200 less than it expected to receive.

"So we talked to the Trust Fund individuals and are checking on the situation for us. But we have a contract (with the McCarthys) that requires us to close on the property no later than the tenth (Jan. 10)," Wiesner told council.

First baby of new year born Jan. 2

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Jesus and Ana Villarreal hold their new baby, Jesus Axel Villarreal, at Charlevoix Area Hospital, two days after his birth. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Ana Villarreal, 28, went into labor in the early morning hours of Jan. 2 and 11 hours later delivered her first child, Jesus Axel Villarreal — the first to be born at Charlevoix Area Hospital in 2002.

As of Jan. 4, all five rooms that currently make up the obstetrics unit at Charlevoix Area Hospital were full, indicating four other children were in the running for the honor of being the first baby born in the new year.

Next year, competition for the sought after title will be even greater as the obstetrics unit at the hospital doubles in size.

Ana and her husband of two years, whose first name is also Jesus, 29, of East Jordan, knew their baby could be the first.

"The doctor said the baby would be here Dec. 28 or 31. We said maybe it would be the first (Jan. 1)," Jesus said.

At around 5 p.m., Jan. 2 it became clear it wasn't feasible for the baby to be delivered naturally and a caesarian section was performed.

Charlevoix's Dr. James Jeakle delivered the baby at 5:49 p.m., Jan. 2.

The baby came into the world strong, weighing in at 9 pounds, 7 ounces and stretching 21.5 inches in length. His size coupled with his full head of soft, dark hair may lead some to mistaking him for a 3-month-old baby.

But make no mistake, this baby is brand new. In recognition of his grand entrance into the world, the baby was awarded a basket full of gifts from area merchants and the hospital, including a baby monitor.

The couple's prenatal care was done through Charlevoix Area Hospital. Jesus said they chose Charlevoix's hospital because of its close proximity to their East Jordan home.

Jesus is employed by East Jordan Iron Works.

The baby's maternal and paternal grandparents live in Mexico.

The Villarreal family was released from the hospital Jan. 5.

Milford man killed in snowmobile accident

A 49-year-old Milford man was killed in a snowmobile accident around 7:30 p.m., Friday, Jan. 4, in South Arm Township.

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's office Frederick Charles Steinhilber, 49, of Milford, was operating his 2002 Polaris 800 Edge X across a private field at night with two other snowmobilers.

The lead snowmobiler, Keith Shorr, 44, also of Milford, went over and down a 25-foot ravine embankment and crashed. Steinhilber followed and also crashed. The third rider stopped before crashing.

All three were apparently unfamiliar with the area where they were riding, the sheriff's office stated.

East Jordan Ambulance transported Steinhilber to Charlevoix Area Hospital with multiple injuries. He was later transferred to Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey where he died early Saturday afternoon.

Shorr was treated at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey for minor injuries on Saturday.

A sheriff's investigation showed Steinhilber was wearing a helmet. Contact with the landowner revealed that he had not given permission for the snowmobilers to be on his property.

The crash remains under investigation by the sheriff's office.

Children's ski class to start at McSauba

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix's Mount McSauba is offering skiers of all ages the chance to take their downhill skiing skills to the next level.

Every year Mount McSauba, the local municipal ski area, hosts a racing event for skiers of all ages. But to the dismay of many, that's the end of the racing season.

This year, Charlevoix resident Erik Lundteigen, 42, took it upon himself to make sure anyone who can get up a run using a tow rope could learn to race.

Like many avid local skiers, Lundteigen's love for life on skis was sparked at a young age when he skied McSauba. He later went on to coach the Charlevoix High School varsity ski team for 12 years.

Lundteigen is currently a third grade teacher at Charlevoix Elementary School and is the Charlevoix Middle School ski team coach.

His involvement in the Charlevoix community has always been strong and he said for years he wanted to get something going at McSauba. But, between teaching, extracurricular activities and raising a family, his time was spread too thin.

He found an opening and this winter he plans to extend the McSauba "Learn to Ski" program through the formation of a racing training group called, "Fun Racing Team."

"This fun racing program will be an avenue through which to get the kids experience and to get them involved in ski racing," Lundteigen said.

He added; "I see this as giving something back — a lot of people worked with me growing up and now, it's my turn."

From 10:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. every Saturday kindergarten through fourth grade students from all over will meet and then from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m, the fifth grade and older group will meet.

The program will kick off Jan. 12 and will run every Saturday until Charlevoix runs out of snow.

The cost to those who plan to partake is $5 a lesson. This price does not include the cost of an afternoon pass, which will also be required.

McSauba manager Bo Boss has agreed to offer equipment scholarships to those who want to be involved, but are low on money and don't have skis.

The group will learn the art of ski racing on the back hill, one of McSauba's more steep runs. Lundteigen is excited to use the run as the city has recontoured it and removed trees.

Until the back hill has a base of one foot of packed snow, skiers will practice on the front hill. Lundteigen said the snow has to be that deep so they can auger the gates in.

The program is currently in need of tax deductible donations to help fund equipment expenses which include: gates, drills, batteries and more. Included in the fund-raising effort is the sale of fleece vests with the Fun Racing Team logo.

Lundteigen has volunteered his time and hopes parents will get involved too.

To get yourself or your child signed up for the Fun Racing Team contact Lundteigen at 547-2593 or sign up at the hill.

McSauba is located at the corner of Pleasant Street and McSauba Road in Charlevoix's North Pointe area. The facility's phone number is (231) 547-3267.

All snowmobilers should be like club

EDITORIAL

Winter has fully engulfed Charlevoix and with it we are once again hearing the familiar sounds of snowmobilers in the area.

While this cold weather activity is fun for many residents and visitors, plus brings the Charlevoix area some needed income, the sound of the machines cause the tempers of some residents to boil.

While a majority of the snowmobilers are safe drivers who respect private property and the safety of others when they are riding, there are a few bad apples who are causing some residents to want these machines banned from Charlevoix.

How would you feel if someone rode a dirt bike across your lawn in the summer? How would you feel if that same dirt bike rider almost ran you down as you were walking along the sidewalk in your neighborhood? Or how would you feel if someone was riding a really loud dirt bike within earshot of your bedroom window at 3 a.m.?

You probably would be pretty angry. Maybe you would even want the bikes banned from your neighborhood.

Well, this is exactly what some snowmobilers are doing in the Charlevoix area on a daily basis. And since local law enforcement is not always there to deter it, they are causing harm to the image of snowmobiling.

But there is one group out there working on improving this situation — the Charlevoix Snowmobile Club.

The Charlevoix Snowmobile Club should be commended for its efforts to clean up this bad behavior on the trails.

The club understands that each rider represents all. Plus, since they are on the trails at all times of the week, members routinely report bad riders to the local law enforcement authorities and educate those who are new to the area.

Therefore, we urge all snowmobilers to be like those in the club and remember they are representing a much larger group than themselves when out riding. Please respect private property and the residents of the area you are riding in.

Remember, one bad apple makes all snowmobilers look rotten in the minds of many.

A lot to do in Charlevoix

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

Several snowbirds have told me, "Next year we're going to stay in Charlevoix for the holidays! We didn't know there is so much going on here!"

Yes, it has been a fun filled season this year — more so than usual. Perhaps it is to relieve the Sept. 11 tensions or whatever.

Of course, festivities always start with the Vacation Property Christmas party, including nametags, coat check attendants and lots of refreshments where everyone stands elbow to elbow.

This popular affair was followed by the Susan and "Brownie" Flanders and Lindy and Greg Smiths Christmas Eve party at the Smith's home. Their house was brightly decorated with a gorgeous Christmas tree and a wide swath of greens and shiny ornaments over the dining room entrance. They invited 100 people, who all brought their special salads, casseroles and desserts, augmented with turkey and filets of beef.

The dining room table looked like a typical sketch of a Dickens feast, covered with a dark red damask tablecloth, tall silver candelabra, decorated with sprigs of pine and red bows.

Old St. Nick came down my chimney and walked to the corner to be greeted by 18 adorable boys and girls, who were all dressed up, sat on Santa's lap and received presents. Talented Janna Winn played holiday songs on her keyboard. Guests wandered freely, eating, drinking and chatting together.

Fortunately our green lawns received several inches of snow just before Christmas Eve.

On Christmas Day, local families gathered at home with their visiting children and grandchildren. Many summer people returned to their cottages with family and friends, and they were delighted with the two foot snowfall of fresh white powder, perfect for snow shoeing, cross-country or downhill skiing at the Boynes or Nuh's Nob. Mt. McSauba opened on Dec. 29.

Mona and Mike Bergeon gave a lovely brunch, and there were more after-ski parties and friendly casual gatherings in front of a wood fire.

The singles crowd went dancing at the Villager Pub. Everyone took a ride around town to see the beautifully decorated lights in the shops on Bridge Street, cruising past brightly decorated private homes, winding up of course by Marilyn and Dale Boss's annual extravaganza. Here literally thousands of cars from far and wide stop and gawk at the Christmas scenes.

What about New Year's Eve? There were numerous choices for everyone. The fancy restaurants were packed and I heard that some people had lobster at the Rowe Inn. The Charlevoix Country Club offered a five course, gourmet dinner. The Charlevoix Historical Society started off again this year with a "black tie optional" affair beginning at 7:30 p.m. with a delightful British comedy titled "Greenfingers" at Cinema III, followed by a dinner of hors d'oeuvres, a pasta bar, and dessert crepes made to order.

The Depot was beautifully decorated with greenery and Italian lights. A live band brought everyone out on the dance floor, including some of us who put on a memorable floor show with Linda Weston's white feather boa!

Finally, for the past 10 years, about 40 guests have looked forward to Renny and John Rieckers annual New Year's Day party in their charming "Christmas House." Friends are torn between looking through the birch trees at the view of Lake Michigan or gathering in front of the huge TV to watch football and enjoy the buffet dinner — highlighted with hot onion soup, followed by spiral cut ham, spiced pears, salmon and home made bundt cakes.

As we turn the page leading into the next chapter of our lives, we can look forward to receiving all those sunny postcards from our peripatetic friends.

Letters to the editor

Thank you to the community

Editor:

To the Charlevoix community:

Almost one year ago my life, as well as the lives of all of those who knew Luke, was changed by his death. This has been a difficult year for all of my family. It has been a mix of challenges and obstacles, triumphs and happy moments, all touched with a shadow of sadness without Luke. I would like to thank all of you who reached out to my family. Maybe you sent a card, placed a call, said a prayer, cleaned the barn, baked a dinner, plowed our lot, attended the service or made a financial contribution to Luke's memorial fund. You touched us deeply and gave us the inner strength to face each new day.

Elijah said that Luke was the balance in our lives. He filled our lives with laughter and love. He was my partner in all of my endeavors from bottle returns, computer fixing, stargazing, three legged walking and trail rides. We shared a passion for animals and music. He was a companion for each of us in whatever we did. Although we carry on, there is a great void in our daily lives without him.

Talking to so many people over this last year I have learned how much he meant to all of those who knew him. I understand now, that if you had an encounter with Luke you never forgot him. He hated to see people sad, thus he became a clown. He did not like to see his friends fight so he became a peacemaker. He loved music, so he played his trumpet. He enjoyed the outdoors, so he found adventure in the fields and learned to fly fish. He was passionate about animals and tried to learn their language and be their friend. He appreciated the individuality of others and expected you to recognize his. His favorite color was clear, because, "it was a rainbow in disguise," and when he lost his temper — well, you had better get out of the way!

I will always wonder what kind of influence he would have had on this world as a man. And I will forever be amazed at the impact such a small boy had on so many people in his short life.

I cannot say that the pain of his passing has lessened for me over the past year and I do not know if the day will come when a memory does not bring a tear or a smile for me. I just wanted to take the time to say thank you again for all of your support and for sharing your memories of the "little dude" with me.

Thank you

Editor:

I would like to thank Marilyn Boss for her beautiful tribute to my father, Bob Miles, that appeared a few issues ago (Dec. 12). It was entirely coincidental that her article and the publicity concerning the publication of the second edition of his Bob Miles' Charlevoix should appear in the same Courier.

He was a prime factor in the saving of so much of our history, especially the photographic part of it, and Marilyn's acknowledgment of this is greatly appreciated. The proof of his efforts will become apparent when the book appears later in 2002.

Snowmobilers coming to Charlevoix

Editor:

I just wanted to touch base with you on the city's proactive position on snowmobiling.

This past week over 10 percent of our business was snowmobilers. This was the largest single group of guests we had over that time period.

I really feel after years of hard work by our local club, the Charlevoix Visitors & Convention Bureau and the city, including Police Chief Dennis Halverson, that we're on our way to having Charlevoix as a destination with snowmobilers.

General Manager

Resource Center to have parenting class

A parenting workshop, based on the best-selling book, "How to Talk So Kids Will Listen & Listen So Kids Will Talk," is starting soon.

The six-session workshop is sponsored by the Women's Resource Center and will be lead by Betsy White.

The first session will be from 6:30 to 8 p.m., Jan. 9, at 423 Porter Street in Petoskey. Other meeting dates include: Jan. 16, Jan. 23, Jan. 30, Feb. 6 and Feb. 20.

"Parents are on the firing line seven days a week. Yet, few of them have had any training for this demanding job. No wonder even the most well-intentioned parents often find themselves feeling frustrated, bewildered, guilty or alone," Adele Faber and Elaine Mazlish, award winning authors of the book and the program said.

Parents will learn proven skills including how to set limits while maintaining goodwill, coping with their child's negative feelings, expressing anger without hurting, engaging their child's willing cooperation and helping their child become caring and responsible. Parents will also learn how to resolve conflicts peacefully and create a family atmosphere of love and respect.

"The How to Talk So Kids Will Listen workshop gives parents a chance to learn practical new skills and exchange ideas and experiences with each other," White said.

Hundreds of thousands of parents and professionals have benefited from the "How to Talk So Kids Will Listen" workshop. In studies in Wisconsin, Colorado and North Dakota, researchers found that parents who attended developed skills that significantly and lastingly improved the quality of their family life. They also found these new skills worked equally well with children of all ages.

The cost of the workshop is $75 per person or $80 per couple, materials are included. If you are receiving any Family Independence Agency funded service, including daycare or food stamps, you may be eligible to receive a scholarship for this class.

Certificates of completion will be awarded at the conclusion of the program. Advance registration and payment is requested. Space in the class is limited.

To register, call the Women's Resource Center at (231) 347-0067.

Ice rink waiting for the weather

City of Charlevoix street superintendent John Martin said the ice rink in East Park can't be poured until the temperature drops to where the water will freeze quickly. Other conditions that make ice rink pouring favorable include no snow and low winds. Above, the parcel to be used for a downtown rink sits vacant, waiting for the conditions to improve. Charlevoix merchant Kirby Dipert said the downtown merchants have raised money to build a warming hut for the site. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Ride-In to be in East Park

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Snowmobile lovers from all over will congregate from noon to 4 p.m. Jan. 12 in Charlevoix's East Park for the Third Annual Charlevoix Snowmobile Ride-In.

The event is sponsored by the Charlevoix Snowmobile Club.

This year Charlevoix City Council approved a new destination for the ride-in. Rather than having snowmobilers meet at the former location, Ferry Beach, it will be in the heart of Charlevoix's downtown, East Park.

"We wanted to bring the event downtown so the business community can see some benefits," John Ferguson, a Charlevoix Snowmobile Club Board member, said.

The two previous Ferry Beach snowmobile ride-ins included bonfires and hot dogs, but this year things will be a little different: Hot dogs won't be provided in an effort to encourage riders to use the local restaurants and establishments.

And the bon fire will most likely be replaced by space heaters in the band shell.

"We'll see how it all goes. We (the club) need the support of the business community," Ferguson said.

Many local businesses have offered their support to the club, including promotions for the event like discount room rates at local hotels.

Those who attend will be offered the opportunity to win door prizes and raffles.

City police chief Dennis Halverson said he is not nervous about the ride-in taking place in town this year. He explained the city and the Snowmobile Club work well together.

"The local snowmobile association has been extremely active in making Charlevoix a safe destination for snowmobiles and this would include being of great assistance to the police department. They've done a lot of work and our complaints as a whole are down because of their active involvement," Halverson said.

For more information about the ride-in visit the club's web site at www.chxsnowmobile.com. For information about Charlevoix trail routes visit www.ci.charlevoix.mi.us.

Middle School collects cans, cash

A Charlevoix Middle School canned food drive before the holidays raised 8,448 cans of food and about $6,000 in cash for the Charlevoix Food Pantry.

Gretchen Britton, teacher at the school, said students started collecting cans for the annual drive on Nov. 26 and finished up on Dec. 19. Students participating in the drive went to neighbors, friends, relatives and Charlevoix businesses for donations.

One student, eighth-grader Michael Greyerbiehl, collected 2,613 cans alone, Britton said. Greyerbiehl gathered the cans for two hours a night after school for a week.

He collected the most food out of all of the students who took part in the drive, Britton said.

"He is a good kid. He cares about others," she said.

With the help of the Charlevoix Varsity Boys' Basketball team, the students took the cans and money to the Charlevoix Food Pantry, located in the First Congregational United Church on State Street, just before Christmas break.

Meals on Wheels a beloved program for seniors

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

If you lived alone, or live alone and weren't able to leave the house, what would you do when your stomach started to grumble?

It's winter and that's just the dilemma many Charlevoix seniors face.

After speaking with three local women over the age of 70, it's clear there's no reason to face an empty stomach alone — there is help out there.

The three women interviewed — Arloa Ferguson, 78, Helen Phillips, 86, and Viora Baker, 89 — are all in some way homebound.

Many area seniors are finding help through "Meals on Wheels" programs made available by both the Charlevoix Senior Center and the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging.

During the 2001-2002 year, the Commission on Aging delivered 15,393 meals to 128 clients across Charlevoix County.

During the summer, the senior center delivers 20 meals regularly and currently delivers 14 meals.

The three women interviewed accept the local senior center's helping hand. Each week day Ferguson, Phillips and Baker are able to stay home and eat a nutritious meal.

Sandy Knack, head chef at the Charlevoix Senior Center, said, "The meals can mean the difference between seniors staying home and going to a nursing home. We try and keep them home as long as it is safe."

Ferguson said she stays inside her Pine River Place apartment because she has no transportation of her own and because she suffers from chronic arthritis.

She explained she's capable of taking care of herself but she doesn't like to cook and has no way of independently getting to the grocery store.

Ferguson has been using the Meals on Wheels service for almost a year. She raved about Knack's skills in the kitchen and the center's kind delivery volunteers.

"I appreciate the food. The people at the center are lovely. I've made friends. You know, you need to talk sometimes," Ferguson said.

Baker is Ferguson's neighbor, who recently returned home from a hospital stay.

Friends will often take Baker to the store and she looks forward to getting out again this spring to hear music at the senior center, but she counts on the meal service.

Phillips is a homeowner who stays in Charlevoix year-round. She said her kids insisted she receive the Meals on Wheels service. Even though she struggled with the idea of it, she said she appreciates the fresh bread, milk and potatoes.

Phillips said she can't easily grocery shop and the service has been a big help.

Menu's for the Meals on Wheels program are inspected by the Area Agency on Aging. Meal providers are required to include 3-4 ounces of protein, one cup of fruits and veggies, bread, dessert, milk, one serving of vitamin C, one serving of vitamin A three times each week and only one high sodium meal a month.

Those who are delivered meals through the senior center are charged $3. A $2 donation is suggested for those who partake in the Commission on Aging program.

For more information about the senior center's Meals on Wheels program contact the center at 547-5361 or for information about the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging program contact the Sue Bergmann at 237-0103

Wharfside still planned to be torn down in spring

WHARFSIDE

The contract with the owners is a purchase agreement. The city put a $10,000 deposit on the property which now could be lost.

Wiesner said he has spoken with the McCarthys and suggested a four week amendment be made to the purchase agreement extending the closing to no later than Feb. 7, 2002. The city hopes to have an answer from another possible funding source, the Grand Traverse Tribe in the next four weeks.

"I talked with the Realtor today and the answer to signing the amendment was 'I'll have to think about it,'" Wiesner said.

He explained that there is a risk if the amendment is not signed by the McCarthys.

Wiesner said, "If they don't sign, the conditions of the sale are no longer binding."

However, he still recommended council approve the amendment that slates the closing date for Feb. 7, 2002.

Wiesner said the time extension will give the city, "a clearer picture of the complex funding situation."

Council agreed.

Second ward councilman Bill Bellows said, "I think we should take the four weeks and get some things ironed out."

Bellows then made the motion to approve the contract. First ward councilman Norman "Boogie" Carlson abstained from the vote due to his involvement in the future demolition of the building and third ward council member Shirley Gibson approved of the amendment.

After discussing the high cost of this project to the city, second ward councilman Gabe Campbell voted against the amendment.

First ward councilman Bill Haggard and third ward councilman Sherm Chamberlain were not at the meeting.

Granting agencies partaking in the purchase of the building include: the Department of Natural Resources' Trust Fund and Waterways Commission, the Charlevoix Community Foundation and the Frye Foundation.

Waterways has guaranteed the project a $500,000 donation, but the environmental department's Trust Fund is the funding agency in question.

The Frye Foundation pledged the project over $60,000, if the city was able to come up with the same amount from other sources, not including the city coffers.

Wiesner said in effort to meet the Frye challenge the city has applied to the Grand Traverse Tribe for $28,500.

Two Charlevoix residents, former mayor Josh Barnes and Waterways Commission member John Winn are trying to raise private money for the city in an effort to help meet the challenge too.

Barnes said he has raised over $6,000 from Charlevoix community members, many of who are also members of the Charlevoix Yacht Club. Barnes said he too is planning to donate money to the city to meet the Frye challenge.

"I feel strongly about this project. Particularly about the break wall — it needs to be squared off to make a more usable park. I think it's time I put my money where my mouth is," he said.

The Charlevoix Community Foundation donated $5,000 to the project.

Last week, city manager Mike Wiesner said, "We are working with the funding people and the title company, (Charlevoix's Preferred Title,) to get ready for closing."

The city plans to purchase the building by Feb. 7 and in the spring of 2002 tear it down to open up the view corridor in East Park. The park will later undergo a major renovation.

The amount the city will have to expend has not yet been decided. Wiesner said the local share will be determined once the Trust Fund has set their donation in stone.

After closing, the McCarthys have 90 days to move out.

In a previous interview Rex McCarthy said the businesses located inside the building will be relocated to a building north of their current location that once housed "The Bridge Street Bizarre."

After the Wharfside has been torn down the band shell, which currently abuts the Wharfside, will likely be left standing. But Wiesner said this is a decision for the park renovation planners, Pollack Design Associates of Ann Arbor.

City puts a lot of time in purchase of Wharfside

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A property purchasing project the city of Charlevoix has been pursuing for over 100 years will take another big step forward with the purchase of the Wharfside building.

Charlevoix city manager Mike Wiesner explained that in 1896 Charlevoix's city administrators recognized there was no publicly owned land between the highway, Bridge Street and Round Lake. So, rather than letting private development persist, our forefathers started buying land.

Today the land that has been bought by the city since 1896 is East Park, Veteran's Park, Coast Guard Park, Bridge Park and Chamber Park.

In the early 1990s the Parkside building was purchased and demolished by the city, another step toward opening up the lakeside of Bridge Street. Now, almost a decade later, the Wharfside will fall too.

However, with the steadily increasing value of lakefront property the city paid top dollar for the building making the process anything but simple.

Below is a summary of the events that lead up to the acquisition of the Wharfside property:

- Oct. 16, 2000 Charlevoix City Council approved a grant application to permit tearing down the Wharfside in Charlevoix's central business district to allow for park improvements.

The purchasing price of $1.1 million for 330 and 332 Bridge Street. These funds will be used to initially acquire the property and subsequently tear the structure down.

- Dec. 11, 2000 the Charlevoix City Council gathered at a special meeting to approve the submission of a grant application to the Michigan Department of Transportation by the application's Tuesday deadline.

The grant application is an effort to acquire funding for the local cost incurred in the acquisition and demolition of the Wharfside building at 330 and 332 Bridge Street.

The grant itself is called the Michigan Transportation Enhancement Grant (T-21.) According to council's resolution to support the grant agreement, the granting agency commonly supports projects dealing with landscape, streetscape and grants that contribute to scenic acquisition and improvement.

The city has requested this grant before, but Harsch said that the point system used by the granting agency is more in their favor this time around.

- Sept. 3, 2001 the city of Charlevoix entered into a purchase agreement with Charlevoix residents Rex and Ineke McCarthy to acquire the waterfront property, "the Wharfside," for $1,235,000. This figure includes a $1,150,000 purchase price, an $80,000 relocation fee for businesses located in the building and what Wiesner calls "incidentals." This figure is $135,000 more than was estimated in December of 2000 when the DNR grant applications were filed.
- Sept. 17, 2001 council voted to approve the Michigan Department of Natural Resources grant agreement by a vote of 5-1. Second ward councilman Gabe Campbell voted against it.

The grant will fund 40 percent of the purchase price, $1,150,000, which is $460,000.

- Jan. 7, 2002 Charlevoix City Council voted to amend the purchase agreement made Sept. 3, 2001 to extend the opportunity to close on the property to Feb. 7, 2002.
- Feb. 7, 2002 the city's final day to close on the Wharfside property based on the agreement of sale it made with the McCarthys.
- Spring 2002 the Wharfside building is scheduled to be demolished.

Quality Farm to close store

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Quality Farm and Country store on M-66, near Kmart, will be closing its doors soon.

The store's owner, Quality Stores Inc., was recently bought by several other companies and is being liquidated. Quality Stores had previously filed for bankruptcy and was placed on the auction block where it was bought by Tractor Supply Company, Great American Group, Gordon Brothers Retail Partners, LLC. and DJM Assent Management, LLC.

Employees of Quality Stores were informed of the liquidation on Dec. 28, 2001. Signs announcing the closing of the Charlevoix store were put up last week.

"It is a pretty bad mood here. No one is happy," Clint Houtteman, Charlevoix store manager, said.

The store is expected to sell its inventory within eight to 10 weeks, he added. There are 11 employees that will lose their jobs at the Charlevoix store.

Houtteman added he is hoping Tractor Supply Company will open a new store in the Charlevoix area and rehire the Quality employees. However, he does not know if that will happen.

Tom Weiland, local farmer and customer of the Charlevoix Quality Farm and Country store, said its closing will be somewhat of an inconvenience for him. He said he was usually able to get various tools and parts that he couldn't find anywhere else at the store and he liked Quality's late hours.

"I hate to see them leave myself," he said.

Weiland said after Quality closes, he will probably have to shop outside of Charlevoix in order to find the items he needs for his farm.

According to a press release from Tractor Supply Company, the company gained about 85 stores from Quality Stores, Inc. with the purchase. The release stated the company will liquidate all of the stores and reopen about 85 Tractor Supply Stores by the middle of 2002.

Tractor Supply Company operates 323 stores in 28 states, concentrating on farm and ranch maintenance, part-time and full-time farmers and ranchers, as well as suburban customers, contractors and tradesmen.

Quality Stores was created in 1999 with the merger of Quality Farm and Fleet, out of Michigan, and Central Tractor Farm and Country. Quality Farm and Fleet was started by brothers Jack and George Hilt in 1962 near Grand Rapids.

After the merger, the company had 360 stores in 30 states. However, the company experienced tough financial times and filed for bankruptcy two months ago.

Some safety tips for traveling on the ice

The U.S. Coast Guard is warning everyone to keep it safe when out on the frozen lakes.

With the sudden burst of snow and falling temperatures throughout the Great Lakes, snowmobilers and ice fishermen are excited to begin their winter activities. Lakes and waterways are beginning to freeze, but most are only slightly covered by a layer of thin ice and snow.

This snow-covered ice is unstable and unpredictable, deceptive to the eye and potentially deadly from the weight of a person or snowmobile, the Coast Guard said. Often, beneath what appears to be solid ice hides near-freezing water, which can inflict hypothermia in a matter of a few minutes.

"Ice fishing and snowmobiling are great winter traditions on the Great Lakes," said Rear Admiral James D. Hull, commander of the Ninth Coast Guard District. "They can be a lot of fun, but along with this fun must come a sense of responsibility and safety for the cold water and dangerous ice."

Ice fishing, duck hunting, snowmobiling, ice skating, cross country skiing, for example, can all be as safe as they are enjoyable.

The Coast Guard offers the following advice to increase safety when out on the ice:

- Never venture out onto the ice alone — always use the "buddy" system.
- Wear a lifejacket whenever you're out on the ice.
- Wear bright colored clothing with a waterproof outer shell and thermal layer(s) close to the body.
- Scout the ice — look for cracks in the ice and pay attention to the weather, especially the wind and water currents as they may shift and create "islands" of ice.
- Make sure a friend or family member knows your exact location and expected time of return.
- Always carry a marine band radio — and also take a cell phone as an extra form of communication (seal them in a plastic "zip-style" bag.)
- Carry a pair of ice picks or screwdrivers tied together with a few yards of strong cord to "claw" your way out of the water and up onto the ice, then roll away from the opening in the ice.

Clean up

City workers were out in force last week cleaning up after the late December winter storm that left the area buried under feet of snow. Crews pulled the large snow mounds off of the curbs with a tractor and then used a snowplow and dump truck to move it out. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

Rayders remain undefeated in conference

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

> "People might not realize how much these guys are sacrificing individually to help the team."
> Keith Haske, Charlevoix varsity basketball coach

East Jordan might have thought that if Charlevoix's 6-foot-7-inch first team All-Stater Scott Parrish scored only 10 points, they'd have a chance to win.

Well, he did .... but they didn't.

Parrish had only 10 points, all in the first half, but the "other Scott", 6-foot-6-inch sophomore Scott Friske scored 22 points to lead the Rayders to an 88-48 shellacking of the Red Devils in Lake Michigan Conference action.

The depth and talent on this year's Rayder team have forced star players to accept less playing time and more modest individual stats.

"People might not realize how much these guys are sacrificing individually to help the team," coach Keith Haske said.

"Parrish and Jim Shepherd scored only 10 and 8 this game, but on most teams they'd be scoring over 20 points a game. Patrick Gowell is getting less playing time now as a senior than he got as a sophomore. It's tough to get them a lot of playing time when we are winning like we have been.

"The other thing is that the game of basketball isn't like it was years ago where teams were built around one star getting 30 points a game," Haske said. "Now whether it's on the high school or college level, what you see now is more balance."

The Rayders jumped out quickly on the broad shoulders of 6-foot-5-inch Rob Boss, who scored the game's first four points and a total of eight in the first quarter. Later, Scott Friske scored six straight points to put Charlevoix ahead 22-8 with 2:50 left in the stanza.

East Jordan rallied with an 11-4 run to trim the lead to 26-19 at the end of the period.

In the second quarter, the third-ranked Rayders left no doubt who was in charge with a 31-7 explosion for a 57-26 lead. Scott Friske scored 15 in the first half.

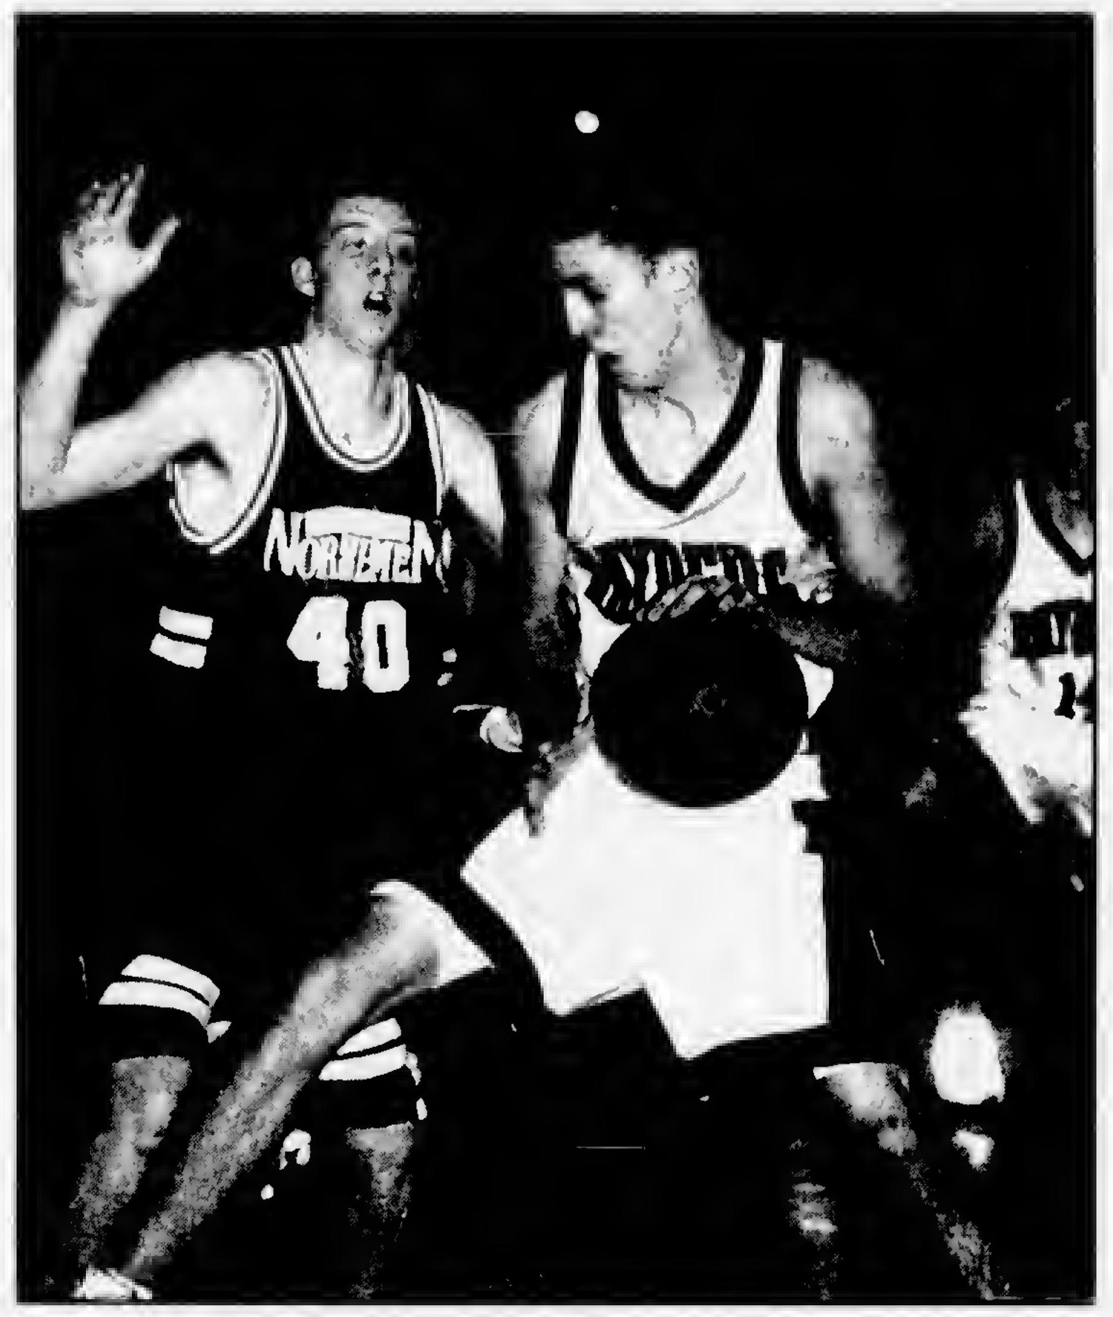
Despite the offensive outburst in the first half, the Rayders were held under 100 points by what is becoming a familiar foe — the mercy rule mandating that the clock not stop for any reason once a lead reaches 40 points.

Charlevoix led 75-38 after three quarters and pulled to an 80-40 advantage early in the fourth quarter, but "only" scored 13 points in the abbreviated final period.

In addition to his 22 points, Scott Friske pulled down 11 rebounds. Parrish grabbed six boards and blocked three shots. Boss tallied 14 points.

"We emphasized getting the ball in the paint because we thought we had an advantage down there," Haske said. "I thought our perimeter guys did a good job getting the ball into the post and the post players did a nice job finishing."

The Rayders (5-0 overall, 2-0 conference) host Elk Rapids this Friday in a conference tilt and traveling to Petoskey next Tuesday.



Scott Parrish fights for a shot in a previous game. Parrish was held to 10 points against East Jordan. (File photo)

Volleyball team has its ups-and-downs

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

After routing East Jordan in conference play last week, Charlevoix's varsity volleyball team couldn't overcome an early deficit and lost a close match with Boyne City Monday night, 3-15, 17-15, 13-15.

"We just need to be ready to play as soon as we step on the court," coach Liz Grunch said. "We seem down at the start of games and need time to get going."

Against the Ramblers, Krista Swenor and Natashia Kleiber led the offense with 12 kills each. Grunch named Kleiber and Shayna Drost as the passing leaders. Serving standouts were Becca Kanine and Kelly Reed, according to Grunch.

The previous week, the Rayders trounced East Jordan, 15-12, 15-0.

Jenny Miller led the attack with six kills while Krista Swenor and Kleiber each had five. Grunch praised the defensive play of Miller and Kleiber, the serving of Drost and the setting of Kanine.

Charlevoix also placed 3rd in the Petoskey Tournament over the weekend. The Rayders opened with a split with eventual tourney champ Petoskey, 5-15, 15-13. They followed that up with a win over Ellsworth, 15-8, 15-7.

The team split with St. Ignace 15-11, 7-15; beat Grayling 15-9, 15-6; lost to second place finisher Gaylord, 8-15, 11-15; and beat conference foe Harbor Springs 15-12, 17-15.

Kleiber was named to the all-tournament team. Grunch indicated that Miller played very well overall and Drost was outstanding on defense as well.

Charlevoix (12-9-2 overall, 1-2 conference) travels to Elk Rapids, Thursday, Jan. 10 for a Lake Michigan Conference match.

NOTICE OF SHOW CAUSE HEARING AND JUDICIAL FORECLOSURE HEARING
NON-PAYMENT OF PROPERTY TAXES

On March 1, 2001 real estate with unpaid 1997 and/or 1999 property taxes was forfeited to the Charlevoix County Treasurer pursuant to the General Property Tax Act, Public Act 206 of 1893, PA 206, MCL 211.1 to 211.157, as amended.

The State of Michigan is acting as the Foreclosing Governmental Unit in proceedings to foreclose on this property for unpaid property taxes.

There are two hearings scheduled to finalize the foreclosure process. This publication is intended to provide additional notice to parties of interest in these parcels as to the nature, time, and location of these hearings.

A Show Cause Hearing is scheduled for Jan 15-Feb 3, 2002 at 608 S Washington, Lansing MI 48933.
Any person with an interest in the property forfeited to the county treasurer may appear at the show cause hearing and redeem that property or show cause why absolute title to that property should not vest in the Foreclosing Governmental Unit.

A Judicial Foreclosure Hearing is scheduled for Feb 15, 2002 1:30 PM at 33rd Circuit Court, 301 State St, Charlevoix MI 49720.
At this hearing the Foreclosing Governmental Unit shall ask that the court enter a judgment foreclosing the property as requested in the petition for foreclosure. A person claiming an interest in a parcel of property set forth in the petition for foreclosure, who desires to contest that petition, must file written objections with the clerk of the circuit court and serve those objections on State of Michigan, the Foreclosing Governmental Unit. The docket number of the petition is 01-895-19-CZ.

If you are a person with an interest in property being foreclosed:

! You have the right to redeem this parcel from the foreclosure process by payment of all forfeited unpaid taxes, interest, penalties, and fees prior to the expiration of the redemption period. You should contact the Charlevoix County Treasurer for the amount required to redeem.
! You may lose your interest in the property as a result of the foreclosure proceeding.
! The title to the property shall vest absolutely in the Foreclosing Governmental Unit unless all forfeited unpaid delinquent taxes, interest, penalties, and fees are paid within 21 days after judgment is entered in the foreclosure proceedings.

PLEASE NOTE :

The following list represents parties that appear to have title, lien, or other apparent rights to the parcels being foreclosed by the Foreclosing Governmental Unit.

This notice is required to be given by law, even if the party no longer claims or desires an interest if it appears they hold any undischarged, apparent, or potential title or lien right to the property.

Listing of a party does NOT necessarily indicate that they are the owner of a parcel, or that they are liable for the property taxes.

This list is NOT an offering of property for sale. These parcels are NOT being sold, auctioned, or otherwise made available by virtue of this notice.

There is no procedure for purchasing these parcels from the Foreclosing Governmental Unit at this point in the foreclosure proceedings. Those parcels that are foreclosed and not redeemed may become available at public auction in July, September, and November of 2002. These parcels remain the property of their current owner until redemption rights have expired. No party should make any attempt to inspect or enter upon these parcels assuming them to be for sale. This may constitute trespassing and subject the offender to criminal prosecution. The street address of the parcels listed is based on local records and is not guaranteed to be the actual location of the property.

The amount due listed indicates the balance which was due as of forfeiture on March 1, 2001. The current amount required to redeem must be obtained from the Charlevoix County Treasurer, as additional penalties, fees, and interest have accrued since forfeiture.

Residents honored by Chamber

Hoffmann named 'Citizen of the Year '

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix resident Elizabeth "Betty" Hoffmann had no idea she would be named outstanding citizen of the year at the 43rd Annual Meeting of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce Jan. 10.

She described the recognition as, "an unexpected honor."

Roger Nesburg, chairman of the chamber board of directors said the award recognizes an individual or individuals who, over a number of years, have given freely of their time, talent and resources to make the Charlevoix area a better place to live.

The award presentation, made by Jacqueline Merta, director of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, reviewed the many contributions Hoffmann has made to the Charlevoix community.

Merta's description of Hoffmann pinpointed the generosity and selfless spirit that accompanied her quiet, anonymous donations of time and money.

"I just see things that I'm interested in that need doing and I do it," Hoffmann said.

Roloffs honored at annual meeting

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce named Charlevoix residents and city emergency medical technicians Bob and Audrey Roloff the Ambassadors of the Year at its annual meeting Jan. 10.

"It was quite an honor and a real surprise," Bob said of the award.

Audrey added, "It was pretty surprising. It was a real nice honor."

Bob said he did not know he and Audrey were getting the award, even when he went to the Chamber's dinner and meeting on Jan. 10 at the Grey Gables Restaurant on Belvedere Avenue.

"I knew something was going on when I got inside the restaurant," he said.

John Campbell, vice chair of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, presented the award to the Roloffs.

"There is absolutely no question in my mind that they are one of the quiet couples in this community who proudly give service to the community and its visitors 365 days a year," Campbell said.

Wind generators debated in Eveline

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

> "Income from the wind turbines allows me to continue to operate my farm and provides a monthly income."
> Ralph Richardson,
> Eveline farmer wanting to put wind turbines up

The prospect of wind turbine generators moving into Charlevoix's Eveline Township has a group of over 20 township residents angry — but those proposing to place them say they're just trying to generate clean energy and keep their farms.

"I'm interested (in wind turbine generators) because it allows me to keep my farm. Income from the wind turbines allows me to continue operating the farm and provides a monthly income," said Ralph Richardson, an Eveline Township resident who is proposing to place two wind turbine generators on his property.

Father and son developers, Dawson and Barney Way, said their plans to locate the wind turbine generators on the 160 acres of family owned land located close to Richardson's property, will allow them to utilize the space without breaking it up.

On Jan. 8 the Eveline Township Board moved to table a request made by Steve Smiley of Bay Winds Energy located in Suttons Bay, for a special use permit. Bay Winds Energy is the company Richardson and Way propose to lease their land to for construction of the wind turbine generators.

Don Hayden, Eveline Township supervisor said the delay was to allow residents time to gather information supporting their opposition to the wind energy generators.

Sheriff announces start of snowmobile patrol

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office recently announced the formation of a snowmobile patrol under the care of Deputy Bill Church.

Deputy Bill Church

According to Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater, the patrol was formed due to a grant from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR). Currently, the patrol consists of Church and a part-time deputy who will be patrolling the county's snowmobile trails along with DNR officers.

The future expansion of this program depends on any other grants available to the sheriff's office, said Lasater. He added the DNR determines how many officers are eligible for the grant based on the number of snowmobiles registered in the county.

Unfortunately, there is a large number of snowmobilers who visit the Charlevoix trails and do not have their snowmobiles registered in the county, Lasater said.

According to Lasater, there were 98 snowmobile related complaints made to the sheriff's office in 2001. The top two were operating on a roadway and trespassing.

Of the 98, 15 were injury accidents and three concerned property damage.

The top five townships with the most snowmobile complaints were (in order from most to least): Boyne Valley, Marion, Chandler, Eveline and Hayes.

Church has been with the department since last summer, when he was hired as a part-time deputy on Beaver Island.

In the snowmobile patrol, he will be cruising the trails to stop reckless driving, operating under the influence and trespassing, among others, by snowmobilers. Church reminds snowmobilers they must have a permit for the trails and they cannot ride on any major roads, such as: US-131, M-66 and M-72.

Church said he has been getting good cooperation from the snowmobilers he comes across on the trails.

"They understand why I am stopping them," he said.

For those making a report to the sheriff's office about a snowmobiler, Church suggests they give a good description of the snowmobiler to the officer. Call 547-4461 to make a complaint or 9-1-1 for emergencies.

Church is originally from Midland and graduated from Lake Superior State University with a degree in criminal justice in 2001. His father was a farmer and a deputy for the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

Proper snowmobile operation

The following are the snowmobile laws as of Jan. 10, 2002, courtesy of Charlevoix County Sheriff's Deputy Bill Church:

- If someone is riding a snowmobile on your property without permission, that is trespassing. If they are injured while riding on your property, then you are liable, even if you did not give them permission.
- Every snowmobile must have a registration certificate attached to it.
- Any child 12-17 years of age may operate a snowmobile only after they have received their safety certificate, which they must carry whenever they are operating a snowmobile. They must also be under the direct supervision of someone 21 years old or older.
- A snowmobile must have a trail permit sticker displayed either above or below the headlight.
- All snowmobiles must have one headlight, one taillight and operating brakes.
- General rules for snowmobilers: do not operate at a speed unsafe for conditions; do not operate within 100 feet of a dwelling between 12 and 6 a.m. at a speed greater than the minimum required to maintain forward movement; do not operate within an area for public hunting during firearm season; do not operate while transporting a bow or gun, unless the bow or gun is encased and the gun does not have ammunition in it; do not operate across a cemetery or burial ground; do not operate within 100 feet of a slide, ski or skating area; and do not operate on a railroad or railroad right of way.
- Bring your snowmobile to a stop when told to by a law enforcement officer. Failure to do so is a misdemeanor.
- A snowmobile may be operated on a roadway or shoulder when necessary to cross a bridge or culvert, if the snowmobile is brought to a complete stop before entering the roadway. Also, the snowmobiler must yield the right of way to an approaching vehicle.
- Snowmobiles may be operated on a county road that is not normally snowplowed for traffic and on the plowed right of way or shoulder when no right of way exists on a snowplowed highway in the county road system.
- The operator of a snowmobile involved in an accident resulting in injury, death or damage to a snowmobile that is estimated to be of $100 or more must be reported to the sheriff's department, state police or local law enforcement by the quickest means of communication possible.

Ride-in cancelled due to bad weather

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Last week, warm temperatures and rain turned Charlevoix's winter wonderland into a slush zone forcing the cancellation of the third annual snowmobile ride-in.

The ride-in, sponsored by the Charlevoix Snowmobile Club, was scheduled for the afternoon of Jan. 12 in East Park.

According to John Ferguson, Charlevoix Snowmobile Club board member, downtown Charlevoix isn't the only place where snowmobiles didn't travel this weekend.

"Actually we (the snowmobile club) are closing the entire Jordan Valley Trail. It's a mess," Ferguson said.

The Jordan Valley Trail runs from Charlevoix to East Jordan.

This year, the ride-in was moved from Ferry Beach to East Park to bring riders' business to the local merchants. Two years ago a city ordinance was passed allowing snowmobile users to travel down Ferry Road, to Belvedere Avenue, into town where they could shop and eat.

Merchants who spoke at the Jan. 7 Charlevoix City Council meeting commented on the number of snowmobiles that have been in town spending money following the Christmas snow storm that hit Charlevoix.

Ferguson said without snow, businesses may feel the loss of snowmobile spenders, but Charlevoix has been luckier than most.

"We've been fortunate here. In the U.P. (Upper Peninsula), the Curtis and Manistee area, there hasn't been a major snow yet," he said.

The snowmobile club's board of directors is meeting next week to discuss what date the ride-in should be rescheduled for. Ferguson said it will most likely be in the first part of February.

In the meantime, he suggested residents perform a snow dance.

'Just a thought'

Sweat drips from the contestant's brow as the host calmly takes a question out of the envelope.

The audience sits in silence, afraid to breathe lest they miss the moment. At home, the television viewer sits on the edge of his chair, not wanting to crunch the potato chip in his hand because it might mask the sound of the glowing machine in front of him.

With a crisp voice, the host asks the $1 million question. The silence is unbearable as the contestant desperately searches his mind for the answer.

"The answer is the Battle of Waterloo," the contestant states confidently.

The host slumps a little with a mournful look on his face. "No, I am sorry. The answer is blue," he replies.

The contestant screams out, not in agony for losing the $1 million, but in fear of the punishment for getting the answer wrong. Writhing in his chair, he cannot escape, for he is tied down.

Before him stands a firing squad. They take aim. Shots ring out. It's time for a new contestant to take the stage.

At the same time, a television producer proudly proclaims the show has received the top ratings for that week.

What I have described is an imaginary game show of the future. One where contestants answer questions for increasing amounts of money, but if they get one wrong they suffer increasingly painful types of torture, eventually leading up to a $1 million prize or a firing squad.

This sounds a little far fetched, doesn't it? I mean, there is no way a television show could go to this kind of length to get higher ratings. Our country is too civilized to want to see televised death in the form of a game show. Or is it?

I found myself thinking about this Sunday night during the premier of a new game show called, "The Chamber," on FOX. In this show, contestants are tied up and asked questions. At the same time, various environmental "distractions" are thrown at them, like fire, water and high winds.

Basically, the contestants are tortured for a television show.

I stopped watching after two minutes. I've seen enough bad things in my life.

But, this is not the only show on television using this premise. Another major station is planning a game show similar to this one, plus we are in the midst of "reality" television popularity. Almost every night you can see a group of people placed in potentially dangerous situations in the hopes of winning money, all for our entertainment.

To me, this all sounds like the old Roman Gladiator days. A time when crowds cheered to see the bloody death of another human being.

Apparently, we are not like this anymore.....at least that is what we tell ourselves. In reality, our televisions are filled with shows that are one step away from those good old Roman gladiator days, complete with audiences waiting in anticipation for "something bad to happen."

But, who is to blame for bringing this entertainment junk? The television networks? They are the ones putting this junk on the boob tube for all of us to see. They are the ones enticing us to watch.

No. They are really not to blame. I argue that we are.

It is the audience that determines what gets on television in the end. Just like with all media, the audience tells those who put it out what they want. For some reason, our nation has taken a liking to these types of shows and so many of us are watching them they are getting top ratings.

Therefore, it is our own desire for this "entertainment" that is sending our television stations down a sorry path. A path that will eventually lead to televised torture.

It is my hope that our nation comes out of this blood-frenzy soon, before our television is filled with visions of gladiatorial-like combat and death.

This will only happen if we don't watch these shows. But, we are still too primal in our thinking to look away.

The value of going south

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

Edith Gilbert has clearly explained the advantages of staying in Charlevoix for at least part of the winter season. Even so, the urge to migrate is strong for much of the non-rooted part of the natural world.

We know pretty clearly why people might wish to visit Cancun, Naples or the Texas Gulf Coast this season, but why would birds or other creatures without condos do the same thing? Why would a Red-eyed Vireo make an annual winter trip to the Amazon rain forest? Why would Michigan's most famous and rarest bird, the Kirtland's Warbler, risk its 2 ounce body in a flight across the Florida Straits to the Bahamas?

Survival is what most of the biological world is about, so the long distance migration we see in the non-human world must somehow aid survival. Maybe the real question to ask about the warbler is why does it leave the Bahamas and spend its summer nesting in the jack pines of north central Michigan?

The experts tell us that such long distance migrations can provide an advantage for the birds by getting them to a summer place where there is more food available to feed their growing young or that by not staying in one place year-round, they can confound predators who cannot move with them. It's not about the cold.

If a chickadee or a nuthatch can survive the Michigan winter, then clearly other birds would be able to. It's that the migratory animals do better over the long-term if they spend the energy it takes to fly several thousand miles annually.

The study of ecology in the past few decades has made it clear that the living world is necessarily interconnected. The person who said several centuries ago that one cannot pick a flower without troubling a star had an inkling of that scientifically verified interconnectedness.

Considering that migrating birds and other animals confront us clearly with those linkages, if someone builds a new resort complex in the specific winter habitat of the Kirtland's Warbler in the Bahamas, none of what we might do in Michigan to preserve the rare bird would be of any use. If they don't survive in the Bahamas, they cannot come back to Michigan each spring.

Red-eyed Vireos are as dependent on the survival of the Amazon rain forest as they are on our Michigan activities to save the forests they nest in. As the rain forests are fragmented and removed, the birds will have no winter food or quarters and what is the most abundant songbird in our deciduous forests may very well become as rare as the Warbler.

Our summer Monarch butterflies spend the winter in a few places in high altitude forests in central Mexico. The forests are being endangered by commercial logging. If the forests are cut down, the butterflies are not capable of moving and they will mostly die. All of our care of them here in Michigan will be to no avail if they have no place to spend the winter.

The relationship of survival to migratory activity can even work the other way around. Snow geese are now the most abundant kind of goose in North America. There are so many of them that their summer nesting areas around Hudson's Bay are being destroyed by their feeding activity. Other creatures that depend on those nesting areas for their year-round food and shelter are being depleted and eliminated.

Why are there so many snow geese? Changing agricultural practices in Louisiana and Mississippi, where they spend the winter have provided them with an unusual abundance of food. More of them survive the winter in good health and more of them return to Canada to nest and to raise even more young.

Too many can be as great a problem as too few.

Next summer, when you hear the song of a Vireo in the local maple woods, think of the rain forest half a world away. And, when you see the orange and black wings of the Monarch butterfly, consider the importance of a few acres of fir trees in the Mexican mountains.

Letters to the editor

Do as I say, not as I do

Editor:

As a parent of three grown children I often remembered the old saying, "Do as I say, not as I do." Don't smoke, but I smoked. Don't hate, but I hate. Be honest, but I lied to my boss. Children are taught by what they see, not by what they are told.

We allow the government into our classrooms teaching the children "conflict resolution." They have told the children not to strike back, trust the process of resolving their differences through some type of peaceful problem solving. Trust the process, it's fair. Try to find out why others are angry with you and resolve those differences. This is what they are saying in the classroom, but they are teaching what?

On an international level, we show our children that street justice is the answer to our anger. When the Trade Towers were destroyed on Sept. 11, our government wrapped themselves in its colors of red, white and blue and struck out with great fury. Did the government attempt using "conflict resolution?" Did the government ask, "Why do they hate us?" No, street justice was the answer.

They told Osama bin Laden and the Taliban, come to America for our judicial process. A process, on paper, that states you are "Innocent until proven guilty." They do not trust our judicial system. Is that a surprise to Americans? Ask any minority — whether by color or political minority — we do not trust the judicial process either. If charged by the federal government, and being in the minority, means guilt. The reality is you are guilty and must prove your innocence.

Our government rejected an international court. They could not trust that. So this government that teaches "conflict resolution" lashed out, to get even. Street justice was the answer and the government is delivering. So what do the children learn?

Most large cities are filled with gangs. They protect their turf. When one of their members is harmed, they lash out. As they have taught them, by example, they cannot trust the judicial process. They wrap themselves in their colors and strike back with great fury.

In rural America, they tell children "conflict resolution." If these children do not fit in the sports program and if they do not excel in their studies they are in the minority. They believe there is no justice for them. What happens when they are wronged? They wrap themselves in their colors — trench coats — and strike back with great fury.

As parents we are shocked with such violence. We are at a loss on how this could happen. We tell our children to use "conflict resolution" to solve their problems, but show them, street justice. We have forgotten, children learn by what they see, not by what we tell them. Perhaps, this is why our government wants to disarm the American people. They believe this is the only way to stop the street violence.

Next time a child strikes back with great fury, don't be shocked — understand the government has taught them well.

Students show school's benefits

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Seniors enrolled in Rich Bachus' Modern Communications IV English class at Charlevoix High School recently got a taste of big business promotion.

Bachus explained modern communications to be a blend of traditional English classes with applied units. In this case the applied unit was promotional writing.

The morning of Jan. 8, the class of 27 students organized and presented a half hour look into the modern amenities that will be available at the new Charlevoix high school.

The school, currently being constructed off Marion Center Road in Charlevoix's Marion Township, is expected to open its doors for the 2002-2003 school year.

The idea to make the school the basis of promotion began when Bachus asked the students what they knew about the project.

He said most of their responses were about lawsuits and sewer lines.

But after completing the project some of the students changed their outlook.

"There's a lot more to our new school than sewer lines and law suits," said Lee Barrett, a student in the communications class, to over 100 of his fellow students and members of both the school staff and school board when he opened the presentation.

The students toured the facility in hard hats with members of Christman Company, the construction team steering the project.

The presentation of their tour discoveries included: power point highlights boasting the modern mechanics of the auditorium and band facilities, the media center, classrooms and the sports complex.

Other information covered included the security system.

Some groans came from students in the crowd when the transition to a closed campus was mentioned and a 35 minute lunch break was discussed.

But the mood lightened when the prospect of music in the lunch commons came up.

Drama class performs at Northwest Academy

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Northwest Academy, Charlevoix's charter school, is laying the foundation for a strong drama department.

Northwest drama teacher Joyce Wardwell and over 30 students in the Northwest Academy Drama Troupe are coordinating monthly "Coffee House Events." Each month the students plan to prepare and execute creative performances for the community.

"We have a lot of really talented kids in our class and I wanted to give them an opportunity to put together their own acts," Wardwell said.

On Jan. 12 the students pulled off the first Coffee House Event, "A Variety Night." The night featured original comedy sketches, musical acts, short skits and open microphone.

Wardwell said the open microphone was included in the program to give members of the community a forum to express their talents.

"Our goals are to have a good time, to have an enjoyable evening, to make sure everyone is laughing and hearing good music and to make sure the kids get stage experience," she said.

On Feb. 2 everyone is invited to the second event at the school, the troupe's rendition of William Shakespeare's Twelfth Night. Doors open at 6 p.m. and the show starts at 7 p.m.

The night will also feature a silent auction of items donated by Charlevoix merchants.

A second performance of Twelfth Night is scheduled to take place at 2 p.m., Feb. 3 at the school.

Northwest Academy is located at 115 West Hurlbut in Charlevoix.

Tickets for Twelfth Night are $5 in advance and $6 if purchased at the door. To buy tickets in advance call the school at 547-9000.

Future events are also being brainstormed.

The group is currently researching a gaming night where assorted card and board games are set up, a fashion show and "School Aid," featuring bands.

Wardwell said the Coffee House line up will enable students to come away with knowledge of event organization. She said their knowledge will go beyond the performance itself into backstage responsibilities and the business end of event coordinating.

Funds raised from the Coffee House Events will be used to build an updated stage in the theater hall at the school.

Burns Clinic to continue giving back patient records until March 29

The Burns Clinic Medical Records campaign is still returning records to patients of the former Petoskey Burns Clinic.

About 21,000 of the more than 300,000 records that exist have already been returned to patients who must come to the former Petoskey clinic location to obtain their records. The record return program will end March 29, 2002.

The program extends to patients of the Petoskey branch only and does not include records from satellite locations of the former clinic.

Former patients of the Burns Clinic or parents of former clinic patients still under the age of 18 may obtain the records on the first floor of the former Clinic building at 560 W. Mitchell Street in Petoskey. Individuals requesting records will be asked to complete a release form and present photo identification. Sorority gives Home Tour funds to hospital

The Kappa Sigma chapter of Beta Sigma Phi recently donated nearly $9,000 in proceeds from their 2001 Charlevoix Home Tour to Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The funds will benefit the hospital's expansion project and the Sue DeYoung, Judy Edger Breast Cancer Walk for Cancer Research. The money was donated to the two organizations by Kim Molter and Ellen Jenson, co-chairs of the Home Tour.

The Kappa Sigma Home Tour is an annual summer event hosted by the members of the sorority and over the years has raised thousands of dollars for the Charlevoix Area Hospital and other local charities. This year the money given to the hospital was designated for the expansion of the obstetrical department.

The hospital is currently completing a drive to raise money for an expansion of its Emergency, Obstetrical and Intensive Care departments. Funds from the home tour were donated specifically for use in the obstetrical expansion.

Those interested in information about how to support the hospital's building and renovation project should call the hospital's development office at 547-8502.

County jail using computers to help prisoners

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Returning to work after serving time in jail can be a daunting task, so the Charlevoix County Jail has decided to take a proactive approach to helping their inmates assimilate.

"The way our society is, today you need to be computer literate," Don Schneider, undersheriff at the Charlevoix County Jail said.

"When someone is incarcerated we need to try and help them, give them skills to go back into society and function as regular people. That way, they're better off and we're better off."

Aside from television and Ping-Pong, the jail has brought in four complete computer work stations and a teacher, Linda Johnson, who works for the Charlevoix and Emmet Counties Intermediate School District.

One inmate, Eric Giff, 36, a trusty at the jail, said the class may help him reach his occupational goal.

"I have no computer experience really at all. I would some day like to start my own small business and use the computer to keep records," he said.

The class is open to four people per session to allow for more individual attention. All the inmates are eligible and the course is voluntary.

Six weeks ago, when the course was first offered, 20 inmates applied.

Three of the four currently enrolled in the class had never been exposed to computers before. Those currently enrolled are one week away from completing the six week course.

For one evening each week they met for a two hour session. The students were also encouraged to practice typing skills on their own time.

Dave Howard, 34, a trusty at the jail, said he foresees the skills he learned helping him strengthen his relationship with his daughter, who was given a computer for Christmas.

"I'm completely computer illiterate. She's 10 and she knows more," Howard said.

The two women in the program, Angela Devers, 23, and Donzell Anthony, 39, both hope to be eligible for a secretarial job after they've completed their sentence.

The program is supported by the "inmate fund" which is paid into when inmates purchase commodities at the commissary. A portion of what they pay goes back to the jail and is collected in this fund.

So, the computer program comes at no cost to the taxpayers.

As for encouraging the cultivation of other skills, Schneider said they are working on it.

"We are working on offering other classes, but that's in the dream stage. But this started out in the dream stage too," he said.

New school highlighted in student presentation

SCHOOL

discussion presented were stacked on a table near the entrance to the gym where the presentation took place. Also included is a web site the students made which is in its final stages of construction.

The site, www.rayder.net presents an overview of what the new school offers.

"I think it was good for them to put themselves out there and do work others will see and pay attention to," Bachus said of the project's benefit.

Following the presentation the audience was invited to ask questions.

A student in the bleachers asked if the gym would seat more people. High school principal Gary Grundman said the current gym seats between 1,300 and 1,500 and the new facility will seat 2,000.

Other queries were about the prospect of "senior lockers." At the current high school seniors are given larger lockers.

Grundman told the audience all the lockers at the new site are senior size.

Boy injured while being pulled by snowmobile

A 15-year-old East Jordan boy was injured in a snowmobile related accident around 1:30 p.m. on Jan. 13 on Wilson Road in Wilson Township.

The accident occurred in a field behind a residence.

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office, Matthew Richard Huver, 15, of East Jordan was being pulled in an inner tube behind a snowmobile. The snowmobile was being driven by Huver's friend, Shane Joseph Tisron, 15, of East Jordan.

Tisron was coming down a hill and heading back towards the residence and made a gradual turn to the left, which sent Huver up towards a tree. Huver struck the tree and injured his right leg, the sheriff's office stated.

Huver was then transported by East Jordan Emergency Medical Service to Charlevoix Area Hospital where he was treated for his injury.

Both Huver and Tisron were wearing their helmets at the time of the accident.

Money for piano donated by art council

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Snow covered streets make it hard to think about summer and festivals, but the Charlevoix Art Council, which coordinates the annual, summer Waterfront Art Fair, recently had a winter surprise for the community.

The council donated $15,000 to the Charlevoix School District for the purchase of a Yamaha conservatory grand piano.

The shiny, black piano is currently being stored at the Charlevoix Elementary School, just waiting for the auditorium being built at the new Charlevoix High School, in Marion Township, to be completed.

"We believe in the arts and putting money back into the children and the community," Marina LaBlance, art council member and Charlevoix Elementary School music instructor, said.

Members of the 12 person, volunteer council attended the Jan. 14 meeting of the Charlevoix School Board to present the board with a check.

Charlevoix Elementary School principal Richard Swenor thanked the council for their gift.

"They (the council) have a passion for what they do that transcends through our students. Thank you for what you do for our kids. And, as you can see, your work echoes into the community too," he said.

Mary Beth McGraw, president of the council and Charlevoix Elementary School art teacher, said the group wanted to enhance programs at the school and performances the community will participate in.

The council started brainstorming ideas for its community donation in the spring of 2001 and came up with the piano donation last fall.

Other programs the council has brought to town included: the Grand Rapids Symphony, the Ohio Ballet, Authors and Artists in Residence and museum trips for students in the school district.

"The whole aim of the Waterfront Art Fair is to enrich and develop the arts," McGraw said of the council's work.

The Waterfront Art Fair is the second oldest art fair in the state of Michigan. It will mark its forty-fourth year in Charlevoix Aug. 10.

The council plans for the annual summer event year-round.

Wind generators the subject of controversy

EVELINE

Information gathered by the residents will be presented at the township board's Feb. 12 meeting at the township hall, located at 898 Advance Road North.

If approved, the permit would allow the company to locate an anemometer tower on the Way property.

"The anemometer would be installed to determine if it is feasible to install wind turbine generators at that location and what would be the best height," Hayden explained.

He added, the anemometer would run for up to six months.

The tower the instrument would sit on is 162 feet tall.

Hayden said Richardson and Way propose to locate seven wind turbine generators on their property, five on Way's and two on Richardson's 80 acres.

Richardson said when he "signed on" with the energy company, he had no idea Way was planning to locate five on his property.

Hayden said the proposal for the windmills may not be possible.

"They asked for seven of them, but I don't believe they can get that many because of the area where they plan to install them," he said.

Revisions to the Eveline Township zoning ordinance that opened the door for wind turbine generators were approved Oct. 12, 2001.

The ordinance stipulates one wind turbine generator per 30 acres of land. Under the ordinance the generators are permitted to reach 400 feet in the air.

The township has not yet considered placement of wind turbine generators. It is currently looking only at the special use permit submitted for the anemometer tower.

But, residents believe if the anemometer proves the land is a viable location for the generators, the future could mean a cluster of them.

Nancy Ferguson, a resident of Eveline Township said, "No one is against green power, but windmills aren't safe and they don't produce electricity as well as they say they do."

Ferguson sited dangers including lighting strikes, lost rotator blades and tower collapse. She further discussed pollution issues including noise and visual distractions.

Barney Way disagrees.

He said the safety concerns residents are addressing are associated with wind turbine generators of the past.

"It's just not true. They are comparing a Model A to a 2002 Cadillac, these things have progressed over the years. I don't understand the safety issue. The blades don't fly off — the company is paying $1.5 million to put one of these things up, they're not built poorly," Way said.

"This will be a huge asset to the community. How many power plants have shut down here in the last five years? We all like to turn the light switch on and someone has to generate that power. They (the wind turbine generators) would generate enough power to power the county," he added.

Business in 2001 had its ups-and-downs

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The year 2001 had varying results for Charlevoix area businesses.

While restaurants and hotels seemed to report slight profits, retail in Charlevoix didn't seem to fair very well, according to interviews with various Charlevoix business professionals. But; business overall in Charlevoix seemed to be better than in the rest of the recession plagued nation.

"One thing that is so great about Charlevoix is we are so close to major metro areas," Jacqueline Merta, Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce director, said. This means visitors can drive to the area, rather than fly.

Another plus for the area, is the large number of people who own second homes in Charlevoix and come to the area year-after-year, she said.

Charlevoix has a history of bucking the economic downturns of the rest of the country, Merta added.

In the late 1970s, the nation was suffering a gas crunch and the economy was bad. However, in Charlevoix, business was doing well because people still wanted to take their vacations, but not travel too far.

"I don't want to say we are recession free, but I want to say we are recession resistant," Merta said. "I think the economy is still good or people would be getting rid of those second homes."

She added Charlevoix businesses did have some hits, especially in manufacturing, with the example of the closing of Hoskins Manufacturing, located on M-66, last summer.

However, Merta pointed out while Hoskins closed, Harbor Industries expanded the size of its facility and created almost as many jobs that were lost to the closing of Hoskins. Harbor Industries is located near the intersection of Bridge Street and M-66,

Steve Bennett, president of the Charlevoix Convention and Visitor's bureau and owner of the MacDougall House — a bed and breakfast — added while business was light in 2001, many area hotels and motels are reporting "OK to good" years.

"I think we had a good summer. Traffic was lighter this year, but I know our lodging all reported good business," he said.

He added their were a lot less "long distance" travelers in 2001. Generally, Bennett gets travelers from Europe and Asia, but this year, he saw more travelers from downstate areas.

"This would mean people were not traveling out-of-state," he said.

However, Bennett said customers were very cautious this year. While he was able to fill his bed and breakfast every weekend in the summer, he said he did not have the advance reservations he usually gets.

"People were waiting until the last moment. They were much more hesitant," he said.

But, perhaps it was also that hesitancy that made this a bad year for local retail.

Jacqueline Mabee, owner of the Clothing Company in downtown Charlevoix, said she was down this year, but was happy it was only by 2 percent.

"I thought it could have been a lot worse, that is why I am happy," she said.

Mabee said the apparel business is having difficulties across the country, with stores closing up "left-and-right."

The problem is, many people are not spending money on clothing because publicity on the recession is making them tighten their belts, she said.

Luckily for Mabee, her store and many other small retail stores do not carry many big ticket items that people are putting off purchasing, thus she is able to survive. Added to this, she said, was a great December that made up for a slow year.

"This was the best December in 26 years," Mabee said.

Kirby Dipert, owner of Charlevoix Wear, also said this was a bad year for the retail clothing business, especially "resort sports wear" — which is what Charlevoix Wear specializes in.

"It was not an awful year, but there were no increases," he said. He said the summer heat and high gas prices kept many people out of the stores and the economic problems in the fall made things worse.

"I don't think there was any fewer number of people that came, I just think they were a little tighter with their discriminatory spending," he said.

While retail was having its problems and lodging businesses were not seeing early reservations, the restaurant business in Charlevoix seemed to be good according to Dudley Marvin, president of Staffords Hospitality — which owns the Weathervane Restaurant in downtown Charlevoix.

"We had an excellent year," he said.

What helped out the business was a busy fall season in the wake of the terrorists attacks on Sept. 11.

"What happened was kind of unique to Charlevoix. We did see a decline at our other properties, but Charlevoix and Petoskey were kind of immune," Marvin said. "It probably was the sense of security, an availability of hotel rooms and in interest in northwest Michigan from those large cities south of us."

People were looking for a place near them that "had it all" as far as activities, he said.

Local businesses getting ready for a good summer

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

While area businesses recover from a turbulent 2001, indications are the, summer of 2002 will be good.

"I am optimistic about this summer. Everyone seems to be hooking orders pretty heavily for this summer," said Kirby Dipert, owner of the downtown clothing store Charlevoix Wear.

Jeannine Wallace, owner of the downtown business Shop of the Gulls, said she is also optimistic for summer. Wallace has been a business owner in downtown Charlevoix for 38 years.

"I am hoping it will pick up. I am buying like it will," she said.

Wallace reported flat sales for 2001.

Jacqueline Mabee, owner of the downtown store The Clothing Company also said she is looking forward to summer.

"I think locally, northern Michigan will do fine. People will still come up here," she said.

Steve Bennett, president of the Charlevoix Convention and Visitor's Bueru and owner of the MacDougall House — a Charlevoix bed and breakfast — said he is already getting reservations for this summer. He said he did not have a high number of early reservations last year.

To make things even better, Bennett said the reservations are being made by new customers, not his usual summer visitors. This means in addition to visitors Charlevoix gets year-after-year, a new crop are interested in the area as a vacation spot.

As for restaurants, Dudley Marvin, president of Staffords Hospitality — the company that owns the Weathervane Restaurant in downtown Charlevoix — said he is "cautiously optimistic."

"I think this winter will be pretty tough, but the travel season will be pretty normal," he said.

Rayders basketball team remains undefeated

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders (7-0 overall, 3-0 conference) rolled up two more victories last week, beating St. Ignace, 95-62 and Elk Rapids, 78-52.

Charlevoix, the number three team in Class C according to the Associated Press, has beaten its opponents this season by an average score of 84-53.

Since a mid-season loss to St. Ignace last year, the Rayders have won 26 of 27 games, losing only in last year's state finals to Kalamazoo Christian.

In the past two seasons, Charlevoix's closest conference game was a 75-57 win over Traverse City St. Francis last season. The Rayders beat conference foes by an average of 34.5 points last season. This year the average margin of victory in the conference has been 31.

Last Friday against Elk Rapids, the Rayders were tested for a half, leading only 36-30 at the intermission. Charlevoix opened the second half with a 12-3 spurt, keyed by three-pointers by Jim Shepherd and Ryan Rafacz and four points scored by Scott Friske.

Following an Elks hoop, the Rayders reeled off eight straight points, including four straight by Scott Parrish, to push the lead to 56-35 with 2:32 left in the third quarter. Charlevoix outscored Elk Rapids 24-12 in the pivotal third stanza.

"I told the team (at halftime) that these guys (Elk Rapids) had come on to our own floor and challenged us," coach Keith Haske said. "I wanted to see how they would respond."

The Rayders extended the lead to as much as 30 points in the fourth quarter at 74-44 and 76-46.

Shepherd led Charlevoix scorers with 19 points, 13 coming in the second half. Scott Friske scored 15. Rob Boss and Parrish each had 10. Pat Gowell scored nine, all in the first quarter. Rafacz finished up with eight points in a balanced Rayder effort.

"The intensity went up in the second half," Haske said. "That's what you'd expect to see from an experienced team like ours. We are working on developing certain habits. We need to have a certain level of intensity every night when the ball gets thrown up (for the tip-off)."

Earlier in the week, Charlevoix rode a hot shooting start to a win over a pesky St. Ignace squad. The Rayders jumped out to a 30-15 first quarter lead keyed by Neil Friske's nine points.

The Saints held their own in the second quarter, trailing 48-30 at the half, but Parrish, took over in the second half, scoring eight in each of the third and fourth quarters to put the game out of reach.

Parrish scored 12 points during a decisive run that spanned the end of the third and start of the fourth quarters during which Charlevoix outscored St. Ignace, 22-8 to push the lead to 84-53.

"They're tough kids who know how to win. They have a good team with a great tradition and we knew they were not going to give up," Haske said of the Saints, who came into the game with a 6-1 record.

For the game, Parrish led all scorers with 22 points. Boss tallied 12, Shepherd 11 and Scott Friske 10.

The Rayders return to conference action at home Friday against Boyne City. On Tuesday, Charlevoix traveled to Petoskey, but the results were unavailable at press time.

Volleyball team has a 2-2 record

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix girls volleyball team evened its conference record at 2-2 with a 6-15, 15-13, 15-10 victory over Elk Rapids.

Despite the win, coach Liz Grunch was somewhat disappointed in the team's effort. The slow start followed a pattern that has plagued the Rayders recently.

"It was not a very good game for us. They (Elk Rapids) had their chances to win," Grunch said. "The girls need to play together a bit more. They seem divided at times, like they don't want to work together."

Natashia Kleiber led the offense with seven kills. Krista Swenor and Jenny Miller had six and five kills respectively.

Becca Kanine led the passers, as she has all season long, with 16 assists.

"Becca and Krista played well and showed good leadership," Grunch said. "Even though Becca is a sophomore. That doesn't matter much out on the court."

Shayna Drost led the defense with 12 digs while Kleiber led the servers with three aces.

The Rayders (13-9-2 overall) travel to Midland on Saturday, Jan. 19 for a tournament at Northwood University. They return to Lake Michigan Conference play on Jan. 21 at Kalkaska.

Ski team takes second in Petoskey Invitational

The Charlevoix Boys ski team, led by sophomore Chad Johnson, finished second behind defending state champion Petoskey in the Petoskey- Harbor Invitational Jan. 8 at Boyne Highlands Resort in Harbor Springs.

The meet, which featured 10 of the top teams in northern Michigan and included 11 All State skiers from last season, is considered one of the top meets of the season.

In the morning Giant Slalom, the Rayders were paced by freshman Kelsey Barnard who posted a fifth place finish after starting in the sixth seed. Chad Johnson followed with ninth, York Smith twelfth, Roscoe Serrels thirteenth, Taylor Fisher twenty-third and Mike Dupuis fifty-third.

HEALTH

Ski helmets: Are you wearing your brain bucket?

Daniel Mann, M.D.

'Your health'

Helmets, also called brain buckets or brain cases, have been proven to reduce the number and severity of head injuries in many sports, including hockey, snowmobiling, football and bicycling.

However, in skiing and snowboarding, only recently have helmets become popular. In these two sports, head injuries account for approximately 14 percent of injuries each year and up to 22 percent in children younger than 15. Still, only one in five people wear helmets and even less in children.

Do you wonder if you or your child should be wearing one?

Most head injuries in skiing and snowboarding occur when one falls and hits the ground and/or their equipment. The majority of these are minor injuries, with low impact and low speeds, such as mild concussions, lacerations and bruises. Thus, it seems common sense that helmets would protect the wearer from these types of injuries.

Much less common, but more dangerous, are the injuries sustained when one hits a fixed object, such as a tree, another skier, slope barrier or lift pole at high speeds. But, are these injuries reduced or prevented with the use of a helmet like they are in other sports?

When in doubt, perform a research study.

The United States Consumer Product Safety Commission conducted a study in 1999 stating that more than 7,000 head injuries could be addressed each year by the use of a helmet. Unfortunately, like most studies, this one added more fuel to the fire. Opponents argued that the small study of only 124 head injuries involving 59 skier days was not large enough to draw any meaningful conclusions on a large population scale.

Others argue helmets provide a false sense of security, urging one to ski and ride faster.

A child's neck is more flexible and 30-40 percent weaker than an adult's. So, some contest that the added weight of a helmet to a child's head may increase the risk of neck injuries.

Others argue, why should we bother with helmets when serious head injuries account for less than 5 percent of total head injuries and often involve multiple potentially fatal injuries. No current helmet would help when one hits a tree or lift pole going 50 miles per hour.

Those are all valid arguments. But, what we do know is helmets do reduce the risk of mild injuries which occur every winter day on every ski slope.

Furthermore, sales have soared in recent years, with over .5 million helmets sold last year and many organizations endorse helmets. For example, the American Medical Association supports the voluntary use of helmets in both adults and children.

The USSA, the governing body for skiing, requires helmets for all National and Olympic teams and competitions. Helmets are also mandatory for Michigan high school teams. Furthermore, most neurosurgeons support the widespread use of helmets in rental packages for beginning skiers and snowboarders.

Skiing is safer with a helmet

If you do choose to purchase a helmet for yourself or your child, make sure it's fitted properly. It should be snug and comfortable without gaps. When you try to roll it off your head, the skin on your forehead should move. No hat should be worn underneath. Measure the distance around your head, just above your eyebrows to determine the correct size.

Helmets are relatively inexpensive starting around $25-$50.

Choose one that is warm, lightweight, comfortable and with good venting. Include goggles as poor depth perception and visual acuity are major contributing factors to falls.

However, helmets should be secondary to safe skiing and snowboarding — preventing head injuries is not falling in the first place. This includes staying in shape and having properly sized and tuned equipment.

If you are a beginner take lessons when you get started. Wear protective gear, such as wrist guards, wrist fractures are a common injury in snowboarding. Don't ski alone or on the edge of runs where snow is unpredictable and hazards abound, such as trees, rocks, poles and hoses.

Finally, don't use drugs and alcohol as they only impair your judgment and slow reaction time.

Personally, I wear a helmet. It has helped me on several occasions and provides me with an extra sense of security.

Perhaps helmets are where seat belts were 20-30 years ago. There are ongoing studies that will be available in the near future.

Until then, have fun, be safe and let it snow.

Holiday fun

The seventh annual Teddy Bears and Eggnog fundraiser took place Dec. 16 at Mahogany's Fine Dining at the Charlevoix Country Club.

This event was successful in gathering over 150 Christmas presents for distribution to less fortunate children in the community.

Children participated in activities such as a limbo contest and musical chairs, while the adults relaxed and enjoyed complimentary eggnog and hors d'oeuvres by the fireplace.

Admission to the festivities was one gift donation per person. (Courtesy photo)

slalom event, Charlevoix trailed Petoskey by 17 points.

As in every high school ski race, the team that does well in slalom usually wins the meet; Jan 8 was no exception.

In slalom run number one, Petoskey opened the door but the Rayders could not capitalize. After slalom run one, Charlevoix occupied third, fourth, fifth and twelfth positions and things were looking good. But, then the wheels fell off.

In slalom run two, Johnson posted a solid time and ended up finishing third. Serrels, who was sitting in fourth, walked out of his ski at the start and was a "did not finish." Smith did his job and moved up to fourth spot. Fisher skied next and ended up fifty-sixth. Depuis was fifty-ninth.

The final racer of the day was Kelsey (Shoes) Barnard who was tenth after run one. However, the thigh high ruts proved to be too much for the young freshman and he finished forty-second.

Just like last year's state finals, Petoskey's slalom skiers proved to be the difference.

The final score was Petoskey in first with 61, Charlevoix in second with 136 and Traverse City Central in third with 153.

Regular Pap tests can help detect cancer

Every year in Michigan more than 400 women are diagnosed with cervical cancer. More than 100 Michigan women die each year from the disease.

Yet, cervical cancer is essentially preventable and almost no one should die from cervical cancer.

Regular Pap smear testing is the key to preventing deaths from cervical cancer.

The Pap test is still the most commonly used cervical cancer screening method and have proved to be effective in decreasing the number of cervical cancers by 50 percent over the past 60 years. Most cancer of the cervix is slow growing, starting with changes in the cells of the cervix; these changes can be detected easily by a Pap test, then removed by a health care provider.

Women should obtain Pap tests regularly for the rest of their lives.

Women under 40 may obtain Pap testing through their health care provider, at Family Planning clinics available through Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency or at Planned Parenthood of Michigan affiliates located around the state.

Women without insurance between the ages of 40 and 64 may be eligible for free Pap smears through the WOMANCARE program. Interested people may call (800) 432-4121 to find out the location of the nearest WOMANCARE screening site.

If the Pap test is abnormal, additional procedures must be done in a provider's office to determine if the changes seen on the Pap test might be the beginning of cervical cancer.

The WOMANCARE program will also provide further diagnostic testing for women of all ages who qualify for the program.

In addition, women diagnosed with cervical cancer or pre-cancerous conditions through the WOMANCARE program may apply for Medicaid to pay for the needed treatment.

For more information you may call Teresa Vanas, the WOMANCARE Coordinator at Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency at 547-6523.

Senior Center can serve more meals due to donation

A proposed expansion that will allow the Charlevoix Senior Center to serve more meals to Charlevoix County senior citizens recently received a $10,000 Great Lakes Energy People Fund grant.

The People Fund grant brings the Center halfway toward its goal of raising an estimated $20,000 to add more kitchen space and equipment at the Center building on Norwood Road. Plans call for construction to start in the spring with an expected completion by next fall.

"Due to the rapid growth in retirees moving to this area, we need to expand the present kitchen to better prepare meals for the people we serve," said Earl Muma, center director. "Since the number of meals we prepare continues to increase, we need more space so we can add a desperately needed commercial stove and dishwasher."

The center dishes out more than 4,300 meals a year, which doesn't include the over 4,000 meals-on-wheels delivered annually to homes in the county. Meals are also prepared in advance to serve senior citizens on weekends, holidays and during bad weather when the Center is normally closed.

The center is a private, non profit organization that offers services to Charlevoix County residents age 50 and older. In addition to the meal program, the Center provides arts and crafts, woodworking, health and recreational activities.

The People Fund's sole source of revenue is Great Lakes Energy customer-owners, who allow their monthly electric bills to be rounded up to the next highest dollar with the extra cents going into the Fund. All funds are returned to charitable and nonprofit groups within the communities where they are collected, since there are no overhead or administrative costs.

Hoffmann honored by chamber with award

HOFFMANN

One such contribution is her commitment to the students of Charlevoix.

Hoffmann taught in the Charlevoix School District for 45 years, retiring in 1996, and has continued to work with the schools into her retirement.

Aside from her dedication as a teacher, Hoffmann has worked to improve the education environment for students. She helped to develop the Charlevoix Elementary School's playground where kids are often seen hanging from monkey bars and soaring on swings.

She also donated funds to the school district's enrichment foundation and is currently a board member with the foundation.

Hoffmann explained that in 1984, after her husband Walter passed away, she looked for an appropriate place to establish a memorial to him.

Walter was interested in performing arts and was even an amateur actor with the Milwaukee Players, a theater group, when he lived in Wisconsin.

In 1988, the enrichment foundation was founded and she thought its aim of bringing arts and cultural outlets to the students of Charlevoix would be an appropriate memorial fund for Walter.

Aside from the students, she has also worked with adult members of the community, contributing to the Charlevoix Area Pool and the Charlevoix Senior Center.

She has also worked to preserve the history of the Norwood village area and has been active in protecting the environment. Her environmental work includes establishing scholarship funds for Earth Day activities at the schools, donating to Keep Charlevoix Beautiful and efforts with the soil and conservation district.

Her love for nature also flowed into the landscape of downtown. Hoffmann Park, located along the channel off Park Avenue in Charlevoix, is made up of land she and Walter donated.

In recognition of these and many other of Hoffmann's accomplishments she was given a framed photo of Charlevoix taken from a plane.

"It's already on the wall and is a lasting reminder (of the award)," Hoffmann said of the memento.

The awards presentation took place at Grey Gables restaurant in Charlevoix.

Roloffs honored for their service

ROLOFFS

"I think that is what makes them really true ambassadors for the community. They just do an outstanding job and are always prepared."

The annual award is given to the Charlevoix resident who "promotes the spirit of Charlevoix." The nomination process starts in October.

The Roloffs are known in the community for their tireless service as city EMTs and have helped saved the lives of many people over the years.

They are so dedicated to serving the community, the chamber almost could not get Bob to the annual meeting.

According to Campbell, Bob responded to a call for an emergency transport from Charlevoix to Petoskey on the evening of the annual meeting. However, when he arrived at the station for the transfer he was told it was taken care of and ordered to go to the chamber meeting.

But getting Bob to take a break from serving the community for even one night is a tough job.

"It took his sister, his mother, (city manager) Mike Wiesner, (Charlevoix mayor) Alvin "Butch" Russell and the EMTs and firemen at city hall," Campbell said. "We even had to get Audrey involved just to get him there."

Campbell added, "He just wants to do his thing and thinks that he doesn't do anything special — Audrey too. Which is why the award went to both of them."

Sewer costs going up

Change in design going to cost district

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A change to the design of the city sewer extension proposed to travel up Marion Center Road may quell concerns raised by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) but it will cost the Charlevoix Public School District.

"I think the design we had would have worked, but the DEQ was being more conservative than normal because of the pressure put on them. The revision will work also. It will cost a little more, but under the circumstances it apparently had to be done this way," Mike Wiesner, Charlevoix city manager said.

If the project goes through as planned, the sewer will initially provide sanitary service to the new Charlevoix High School being built along Marion Center Road. Other properties will be allowed to tap in later.

A letter was written to Wiesner by David R. Porter, environmental engineer with the surface water quality division of the MDEQ, Jan. 4. In the letter, Porter reveals the proposed sewer system's design flaws and sources of pressure on the MDEQ.

Porter informed the city its initial design failed to meet Michigan's standards for proper operation and maintenance of wastewater facilities. The standards used by the MDEQ are called "Ten States Standards."

He explained, fluids would not move quickly enough through the pipe to clean it. The minimum velocity considered to provide cleansing of sewage solids in an eight inch pipe, as is proposed, requires over 300 gallons of fluid per minute to flow through it moving two feet per second.

Porter's concern was that without this movement of sewage, accumulation of solids would occur, which would lead to a myriad of problems.

"Accumulated solids will decay and release hydrogen sulfide which dissolves concrete and causes odor problems. After decomposition, the solids will become a concretion-like solid that will require mechanical means for removal," Porter states.

He added, "I would much rather see a design that minimized the accumulation of solids."

Fire crews fight blaze at local business

By JULIE WITTHOEFT

Diligence and teamwork saved a Charlevoix motel from being classified a total loss when a kitchen fire broke out in the early morning hours of Jan. 19 at the Silver Birch Motel located at 1530 Bridge Street in the city of Charlevoix.

"It was cold and nasty. The firemen went up the stairs to the second floor time and time again but the heat and the chance of a back draft drove them back down. They really tried hard," Charlevoix City Fire Chief Doug Carver said.

Carver said the firemen were restricted by the building's double roof construction. The fire was trapped between two roofs.

There was a flat roof originally in place on the second floor and a pitched roof was later added. Roof construction of this sort is legal and Carver said it's not uncommon as it is the cheaper way to make the change from a flat to a pitched roof.

'Toxic' Charlevoix site already addressed

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

According to a report issued by a coalition of environmental groups, three schools in Charlevoix are located next to a "hazardous" waste site.

However, the site in question, an old dry cleaning business on Hurlhut Street, was identified over seven years ago and is already being cleaned up by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality. The schools in question are Charlevoix High School, Charlevoix Middle School and Northwest Academy.

"I was concerned when the issue was raised seven years ago," said Gary Grundman, Charlevoix High School principal. Environmental studies at the time indicated none of the schools were in danger of contamination from the site.

"I feel our kids are very safe," Grundman added.

In the April 18, 2001 edition of the Charlevoix Courier, it was reported that the site, now the location of Bradford Cleaners, is being cleaned up by the MDEQ due to contamination of perchloroethene (a cleaner used to get out stains in garments) by a previous dry cleaning company at the site.

In the article, Bob Wagner, environmental manager for the MDEQ, said the contamination was of no risk to the public. As of Tuesday, Wagner said the site's clean should be complete in July 2002.

According to Megan Owens, spokeswoman for Public Interest Research Group in Michigan — a member of the coalition — the report was based on "very limited" information from the MDEQ. Members of the organization were not able to evaluate each site listed, she added.

"These toxic waste sites are dangerous. It sounds like in your site that that is not the case and that is great," she said.

The organization is pushing for laws in the state legislature about "toxic" sites near schools.

"We want to make sure school district officials look at this as an issue when they decide to build schools," she said. "We want to see this addressed and one way to address this is through the legislature in Lansing."

Owens added the group didn't want to panic anyone and many of the sites near schools are being addressed.

Grundman added environmental pollution issues have already been taken into account with the new Charlevoix High School being built on Marion Center Road. An environmental study conducted before the district bought the site showed it was free of contamination, he said.

The environmental group released the information about Charlevoix and many other school districts in the state of Michigan on a web-site, which was quoted by various other local media. However, the web-site did not state what the toxic site in question was, how it was contaminated, what it was contaminated with or even if the issue was being addressed.

The site is located at www.childproofing.org.

Only after calls to the organization was the Charlevoix Courier able to confirm that the site indicated in the report is the now, almost cleaned up, dry cleaning site.

The report stated 64 schools in 27 Michigan counties are near what it believes are "toxic" sites.

Resident's trial for murder gets underway

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

While the family of Scott Cook sat in mournful attendance, Charlevoix County prosecutor Mary Beth Kur gave her opening statements in the Charlevoix County Circuit Courtroom Jan. 26 alleging Cook was killed by a 22-year-old Charlevoix man.

Kur said testimony will show Cook was stabbed in the early morning of April 29 at the Charlevoix Municipal Marina by Thomas Aryon Shulick with an 8 inch butcher's knife. Cook died later that day at Charlevoix Area Hospital from the wound.

"This is the case about an uneven contest between a man with an 8 inch butcher knife and an unarmed, unsuspecting, undeserved victim....," she said. Shulick is facing a charge of murder in the first degree, which would mean a life sentence if convicted.

Shulick's attorney, Ardjen Greydanus, reserved his opening statements until the prosecution finishes it case.

However, Kur's opening statements hinted at the possible defense Greydanus will use.

In her statements, Kur mentioned that the defense may say Cook was highly intoxicated that night and unable to reason, which under some circumstances is a usable defense.

"Drinking in and of itself is not a trump card," Kur said.

She said before Shulick stabbed Cook, the assailant went to his home, got the butcher's knife and walked or ran back to the Charlevoix Municipal Marina where Cook was staying on a boat.

Kur said this distance was three-tenths of a mile, during which Shulick could have thought about what he was doing.

Kur also said there were no defensive wounds on Cook's body when it was examined, just one "in and out wound." This wound was so severe, Kur said the medical examiner will testify "even if he had been stabbed in the emergency room, he (Cook) would die."

However, before he died, Kur said Cook told witnesses that he was stabbed by a man named "Tom" who had been pestering them earlier. According to Kur, Shulick had pestered Cook and the group he was with at the marina three times that night in a period of about an hour.

Correction

In a story titled "Wharfside Funding in Limbo," that ran on the front page of the Jan. 9 edition of the Charlevoix Courier, it should have stated that first ward Charlevoix city councilman Norman Carlson abstained from the vote because he is involved in renovating the Bridge Street Bizarre building where Kilwin's will be relocated to. He is not involved in the demolition of the Wharfside.

Lack of questions leaves bad image

'Just a thought'

The world is usually not black and white, but shades of gray.

In the journalism business, you learn this saying when working on a story. We are taught to always look a little deeper with an issue or story and get a little more information, because the truth is gray.

A prime example of this is a little item we call "press releases." This is written by an individual or group with that individual or group's best interest in mind and from their point of view.

Generally, good journalism means not taking this information as fact and trying to find out a little more, especially if the release is a larger news item — usually anything that alleges something bad about another individual or group. It is times like this when the truth of the matter is very important and the truth just isn't found in a release.

Now, this information that is sent to us isn't necessarily bad. It is meant to give the journalists an idea for a story and somewhere to start.

It is up to the journalist to expand on this release.

At the Charlevoix Courier we take pride in the research we do for our stories, thus giving our readers the best information with both sides of the matter. This is something many newspapers provide to their readers and something readers should expect.

It is unacceptable to not question a press release or report. Not only does it look bad for the newspaper, but it also does not give the reader a full story, thus doing an injustice to them.

When I see this happening, I tend to get very angry. The people working in the Courier office will tell you my face turns various shades of red and steam can actually be seen coming out of my ears.

Well, on Monday the steam was coming out of my ears. I think I filled the office with a hazy fog.

The steam was due to a report in various newspapers, locally and statewide, about a report issued by a coalition of environmental group stating that many schools were located near "toxic sites," including three schools in Charlevoix.

But, the report did not say where the toxic site was located, how it became contaminated, what chemical was making the site toxic or even if the site was being addressed by officials.

Many of the stories about the report only guessed where that site was in Charlevoix. No one bothered to confirm where the site was. Plus, the stories — except one, in the Petoskey News-Review, which did its homework — did not even say if the Charlevoix site was being cleaned up.

I can understand if a newspaper or other media outlet makes a mistake once in a while, but to not question the findings of a report and actually make guesses in the story instead of checking up on it are unacceptable.

This got me so angry that I personally took responsibility to find out the truth. With two telephone calls I had a member of the environmental groups telling me the site was the location of an old dry cleaning company on Hurlbut Street and that the report was made with "limited information" from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ).

The group had not evaluated the Charlevoix location and did not even know if the information was completely correct.

The site, which I found with one trip to our 2001 archives of the Charlevoix Courier, was already in the process of being cleaned up by the MDEQ and had been since April of 2001.

Plus, according to an April 2001 story in the Courier, the MDEQ stated contamination was not a danger to people in the area.

Furthermore, during my telephone interview with the representative of the group, I discovered the group was pushing for a new law dealing with "toxic sites" near schools. The basis of this report was to raise awareness of the issue, not really the individual sites.

This is a noble cause and one I hope they succeed with. And thanks to a media unwilling to question the facts a story got out to the public with many holes in it.

The problem is, if you only read the story in one of these other newspapers, you would be left thinking Charlevoix's schools may not be safe and the city has a toxic waste site in it. Not good images for our community.

I don't know why some other media outlets decided to not question this report as they should have been. Maybe by finding out that the sites in question were already being taken care of would make the story less exciting or maybe they were too busy working on other stories to pick up a telephone and double-check information.

I hope the story in the Courier clears up the misconceptions reported by other news outlets. We do our best to give you the most accurate and truthful news about your community.

We just wish others would do the same.

Letters to the editor

Thank you for your generosity

Editor:

I would like to thank the northern Michigan community for their generosity during the Women's Resource Center's (WRC) Safe Home Harvest Food and Supply Drive.

Community support is a vital part of running our Domestic Abuse and Sexual Assault Program which provides safety and assistance to families in crisis. Hundreds of area businesses, churches, schools, service groups, clubs and individuals exemplified the spirit of contributing locally by donating food, supplies, gifts and financial support to the WRC.

Thank you all for making a positive difference in the lives of many families in our community.

Thank you for your donations this season

Editor:

The Salvation Army would like to thank everyone who gave so much to make the holidays a happy occasion for needy families and individuals in our area.

Thank you to all the churches, businesses, schools, radio stations, service organizations and individuals for the many toys and food items. Also for the monetary gifts you so graciously donated, which allowed us to reach our goal of $110,000.

Thank you also to the many volunteers who assisted with the gift shop, packing food baskets and organizing the programs to make everything run smoothly. We were truly blessed with many gifts of time, items and contributions. A special thanks to everyone who rang bells, and to the businesses who allowed a kettle stand at their location.

We truly appreciate the generosity of so many which will assist the less fortunate, not only at Christmas but throughout the year.

We wish each and every one a blessed and prosperous New Year.

Weather hampers ice rink efforts

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

City of Charlevoix street department workers have been hosing down the ground for two city ice rinks, but warm mid week temperatures have turned dreams of skating into slush.

"We've been hitting it (watering the rinks) every chance we get — every day it's cold enough. But the warm weather takes several days off from it (ice making efforts)," John Martin, superintendent of the city of Charlevoix Street Department said.

Martin explained ice making requires clear, cold weather. He said once we get a couple of consecutive cold, snow-free days, skaters will be able to work their moves at the rinks.

The street department is making one of the rinks at Charlevoix High School and the other is being built in East Park.

Martin said if cold weather rolls in over the next couple days the high school rink should be ready for skaters soon.

But other factors related to Mother Nature could further delay the opening of the East Park rink.

He said the high school rink's distance from the lake helps it freeze faster. Soil conditions at the high school are also better suited for ice making. The ground at the high school is clay, which Martin said freezes faster than the sand base at East Park.

The dense layer of grass in East Park has also hampered ground freezing efforts.

Once fully operational, the high school rink will be used for hockey and general skating while the park rink will be used only for general skating.

The city plans to construct a snow fence between the downtown rink and Round Lake as a safety precaution.

The rinks will be staffed from 3:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. and again from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday. Skaters can start earlier on Saturday and Sunday when the rinks will be staffed from 12:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. and again from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Martin said skaters can use the rinks during hours when city staff is not on site but the warming huts will be closed.

Because of the late start, the $20,000 price tag that was initially estimated for construction, operation and maintenance of the East Park rink will be dropped.

City manager Mike Wiesner explained the high number is assigned to meet demands of ideal winter skating conditions.

Library expands selection with computers

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Public Library now has the resources of four libraries in one.

A new electronic cataloging system called iBistro allows local public library users the opportunity to search the databases of the Alpena Public Library, the Petoskey Public Library, the Cheboygan Public Library and Charlevoix's Public Library.

Anyone with a library card from any of the four aforementioned facilities can access all four libraries.

"This quadruples the number of books available to them (library patrons), in a timely manner, at low cost," Valerie Meyerson, director of Charlevoix Public Library, said.

The iBistro system has been up and running since Dec. 17, 2001 and Meyerson said it has been a hit.

"We just got 10 books in from other libraries for our patrons. So, people really are using it," she explained.

Not only can you see what the other libraries have on their shelves, but you can check out the books and pick them up in Charlevoix. After checking them out, you can drop the books off at whichever of the four libraries is the closest for you.

Meyerson referred to the network of libraries as a consortia and said the new system allows library patrons greater flexibility.

Any internet connected computer can search the libraries catalogs by linking to iBistro from the Charlevoix Public Library's website, www.charlevoix.lib.mi.us.

Users can even hold books from home. All you need is a Charlevoix Public Library card and a pin number from the library staff.

Research has also been made more convenient by the new system. Full text articles from periodicals and newspapers can now be accessed using Infotrac.

Children's searches have been simplified using icons, like large crocodiles. Kids can click on the animal and be led to a mirage of books about reptiles.

Or, if you are less into research and more into the latest bestseller, that information is also listed. The local list of bestsellers and the New York Times listing of widely read literature are all at your fingertips.

Other changes at the library include new furniture in the kids section and new policies.

A "Noah's Ark" chair was donated by the Friends of the Library and a computer work station was donated by the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club.

Check out periods for books have been extended a week from two weeks to three. This policy does not include videos, back issues of magazines and new fiction.

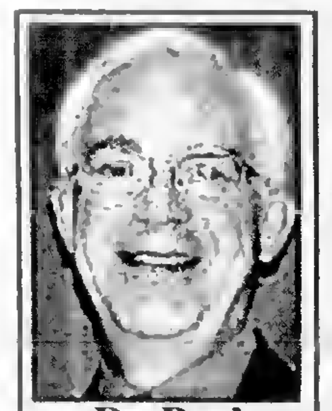
Ziemer named by president to serve on board

President George W. Bush has selected a member of Consumer Energy's Big Rock Point's Restoration Safety Review Committee (RSRC) to chair a national advisory board.



Dr. Paul Ziemer

Dr. Paul Ziemer will chair the Advisory Board on Radiation and Worker Health. The board will meet for the first time on Jan. 23, in Washington. Up to 20 board members will advise the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services on safe radiation exposure levels and use dose reconstruction models to determine the levels potentially reached during past government weapons projects.

"It's an honor to be appointed by the president," Ziemer said. "I'm looking forward to this new challenge."

Ziemer has served on Big Rock Point's committee since it was formed in 1997. The independent board reviews and provides guidance on restoration activities. Ziemer focuses on industrial and radiation safety reviews.

Ziemer is a professor emeritus and head of the School of Health Sciences at Purdue University.

Ziemer holds a bachelor's degree in physics from Wheaton College, a master's degree in radiological physics from Vanderbilt University and a doctorate in bionucleonics from Purdue University. He is a former president of the Health Physics Society and American Academy of Health Physics.

From 1990 to 1993, Ziemer took a leave of absence from Purdue to serve as the assistant secretary of energy for environment, safety, and health during the first Bush Administration.

"We invited Dr. Ziemer to be a member of the independent safety review board because of his expertise in radiation safety. He has been a great asset to us," said Big Rock Point site general manager Kurt Haas. "We are very pleased to see Dr. Ziemer's expertise recognized with a presidential appointment to the national advisory board."

Big Rock Point was the world's first high power-density boiling water reactor and an important research site for the nuclear power industry. The plant was shut down on Aug. 29, 1997, after 35 years of service, making it the nation's longest running nuclear plant. Due to its many contributions to the nuclear and medical communities, the American Nuclear Society named Big Rock Point a Nuclear Historic Landmark.

Consumers Energy, the principal subsidiary of CMS Energy Corporation, is Michigan's largest utility providing natural gas and electricity to more then six million of the state's nearly 10 million residents in all 68 Lower Peninsula counties.

Coalition has classes on home ownership

Tired of Renting? The Charlevoix Emmet Housing Coalition is sponsoring classes for potential home ownership under HomeLINKS.

These classes are offered under the Michigan Affordable Housing Fund (MAHF), authorized by the governor and established by the Legislature to use Federal monies received by the state. MAHF is administered by the Michigan State Housing Development Authority via an inter-agency agreement with the Family Independence Agency to support programs that increase homeownership opportunities for low income families.

HomeLINKS was designed to ensure successful homeownership by screening candidates for purchase potential, providing pre- and post-purchase counseling and down payment assistance of up to $10,000.00 It also provides credit repair to qualify for a MSHDA mortgage, maintenance training, and pre-purchase home inspections.

Families with at least one adult member and related minor child (or a pregnant applicant/co-applicant) whose annual income is less than 80 percent of lowest income in a non-metropolitan county may be eligible. The classes will be at least seven weeks long, in two-hour sessions.

Classes are at Northern Michigan Hospital Community Health Education Building in Petoskey.

Sessions are held at different times, three times a week, to meet individual schedules. The new classes will begin the week of Jan. 28.

If you are interested in attending, please contact Yvonne at (231) 535-5166. Space is limited.

Resident publishes poetry book at 72

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Most people aren't interested in adding a second career to their portfolio at age 72 but Charlevoix resident Chuck Kerner recently did just that.

Chuck and his wife of 50 years, Ethel, run an adult foster care home, Pincherry Haven, out of their residence off Pincherry Road in Charlevoix's Hayes Township. The in-home business keeps them busy and presents challenges but, Chuck has still found room to become a self-published author.

About two years ago, someone asked Chuck if he could lend him money and told Chuck, "I'll pay you back Friday."

Rather than drawing up a contract or pulling out his checkbook Chuck grabbed a notebook and a pen and captured the moment in poetry.

"I just sat down one day and wrote. It came so easy, and I never knew I could do it. It seems to be natural and it took me 70 years to find out," Chuck said.

The poem, "Sound Familiar?," about borrowing money, is now on page 40 of Chuck's self-published book of poetry, The Best of Rhymes.

The book is made up of 70 poems about "everyday occurrences." Other subjects include the holidays, members of the Kerner family and oddities Chuck has run into over the last two years.

He came up with the name for the book when reading Charles Dickens' A Tale of Two Cities. The book opens with, "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times."

He said the printing process was time consuming and costly. But the Kerners persevered and the book was printed in Detroit and in their hands almost a month ago.

Chuck said he may publish another book of poetry if all 1,000 copies of The Best of Rhymes sell. Chuck said he has a stack of poetry ready to go.

"It all depends on how these turn out. It costs a lot to do them (print the books) and we aren't exactly money people. Maybe we'll print another one if these sell halfway decent," Chuck said.

The book is currently on sale at Horizon Books in Petoskey, Traverse City and Cadillac and can also be purchased by contacting the Kerners at 347-3359.

City changes design of sewer line

SEWER

Wiesner and John Adams and Associates, the city's Ann Arbor based engineering group for this project, have since redesigned a portion of the line.

Wiesner said, "The bottom line is that as a result of the Department of Environmental Quality's review, we (the city) will add a four inch force main to the project for 1,050 feet."

The eight inch line will be maintained down the hill that peaks around Clark Road. Wiesner said gravity will carry the solids down the pipe. The city has also planned for three manhole areas where the street department will access a valve to flush the system.

Wiesner said the four inch force main will be installed alongside an eight inch pipe in order to move waste through the system in the short term when the flow is less. The plan is to connect to the eight inch line once the necessary flow is achieved.

Wiesner said the city is operating under the assumption the school will pay for the addition of the four inch pipe.

He said the bid price is $19 per foot. This price includes the cost of digging the trench, which would already be open. Wiesner expects this addition to the project to cost under $20,000.

In the letter, Porter also said counsel for the Up North Green Party and the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association had been in contact with him.

During the project planning process, several members of the Charlevoix community have claimed the eight inch pipe the city plans to install is 66 times the size needed to service the school. They also believe the over-sizing could bring in unwanted growth.

Wiesner said by extending the sewer the city is planning for future growth.

He said, "The school asked for the city to provide sewer service. It is the city's position that we are willing to serve them. It is up to Marion Township if growth takes place or not; the city of Charlevoix has no control over their zoning."

The citizens further claim the school's use of bond money to pay for the extension is unconstitutional as it will be used for private development.

These citizens have brought a lawsuit against the school district which is currently pending in the Michigan Court of Appeals in Lansing.

Progress of this project is expected in the next week.

"We're hoping within the next week to have dotted our I's and crossed our T's," Wiesner said.

He doesn't expect to have signed contracts with the Charlevoix Township Board and the Marion Township Board until the project is ready for site plan approval.

Dr. John Sturock, Superintendent of the Charlevoix School District said, "I think we are just in the process of trying to get sewer out there. Right now, some things are still up in the air."

Sturock is waiting for the city to finalize plans, permits and approvals to nail down the project's cost to the district.

Charlevoix man faces first degree murder

SHULICK

She summed up the evening's events saying Cook had come to Charlevoix on April 28 from Traverse City with some friends. That same night, Shulick had a party with some friends at his home at 212 Antrim Street.

Around midnight, Kur said Shulick, his girlfriend and two other friends decided to go to some local bars. First they stopped at the Villager Pub for about an hour, then started walking to the Townhouse Bar.

However, Kur said testimony will show Shulick was quarreling with his girlfriend and went inside Whitney's Oyster Bar, where he was refused service. While in Whitney's, some of the members of Cooks group were also coincidentally there.

They noticed Shulick and one of those in Cook's group mentioned how he was bothered by the way "he (Shulick) looks," she stated.

Shulick finally arrived at the Townhouse Bar around 1 a.m.,. ordered one drink and left without saying anything to his girlfriend or his two other friends, Kur said.

At that time, Kur said Shulick had gone down to the marina and was pestering Cook and his group. During the first exchange, Shulick was asked to leave one of the boats in Cook's party.

He was escorted off of the dock by a friend of Cook's and during this hit the friend in the eye. The friend chased Shulick down and started to beat him up, but the fight was broken up by Cook, Kur said.

The second time he was at the boats, the testimony will state he was seen leaning over one of the docks and left when the group said they were going to call the police. On the third trip back to the boat, Kur said Shulick had gone home beforehand and got the butcher knife.

During this third time at the docks, Shulick and Cook met and Cook was stabbed, Kur said in her opening statement.

A witness chased a man running from the scene but could not catch up with him and Cook walked up to Bridge Street where he collapsed.

In the meantime, Shulick arrived at home out of breath, dropped the knife, locked the door, shut the lights off and told those at his apartment that he thought he "might have killed someone," Kur said.

Cook turned himself in the next day to Charlevoix police after writing a note apologizing to his girlfriend, Kur said.

During the trial, Charlevoix City Officer Paul Ivan was called to the stand and stated he found Cook in the street with a witness. He said Cook was complaining about the pain from the wound in his abdomen and was going in-and-out of consciousness.

During an interview in the hospital before he died, Ivan said Cook told him he was stabbed by the same person that had visited his boat earlier in the night.

Throughout the prosecution's opening statements and the questioning of Ivan, Greydanus objected several times over many different issues. One issue was the inclusion of a portrait of Cook taken when he was alive.

Greydanus said the jury should not see that picture because it shows Cook alive and smiling and may prejudice them against his client, Shulick. However, Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas ruled the picture was admissible.

Testimony in the trial recessed on Jan. 16 until 9 a.m. yesterday.

Unemployment rate rose in Charlevoix

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

(Editor's note: This week's Charlevoix Courier contains three stories on unemployment as a one edition series. The stories appear on pages 11, 12 and 13.)

Due to an increase in unemployment in the area, many displaced workers from local manufacturing companies and businesses flooded an already tight job market in the Charlevoix area in 2001.

Dan Lopez, a labor market analyst with the Michigan Department of Career Development, said Charlevoix's unemployment rate has increased over 2 percent since last year.

"There are very few places in the state where the unemployment rate has not gone up," he said.

Lopez explained shut downs at Charlevoix area manufacturing companies including, Hoskins Manufacturing in Charlevoix and East Jordan's Dura, the nationwide economic slowdown and winter weather conditions are driving up the unemployment rate.

He said closings at manufacturing facilities are "no doubt related to the automotive industry."

The winter weather affects what Lopez referred to as, "non-professional services." He defined these services as resorts, hotels and golfing areas.

Charlevoix is not a winter ski destination and, while our local accommodations are hopping in the summer, winter is not a time of high tourism, he said.

December 2001 figures are not yet available. But, a comparison of November 2000 to November 2001 shows an increase in the unemployment rate.

In November of 2001 the unemployment rate was 5.9 percent and one year later it climbed 2.2 percent to 8.1 percent.

The unemployment rate is determined by calculating an estimate of the unemployed and dividing that number by an estimate of the labor force.

Lopez said January, February and March are months when the northern Michigan economy tends to take a dive.

During the winter in northern Michigan areas, unemployment rates tend to go up. In the summer rates drop dramatically.

His argument was backed up by figures calculated last year. The rate hit an annual high in March 2001 when unemployment climbed to 8.2 percent in Charlevoix and an annual low in July 2001 when it dropped to 4.4 percent.

However, Lopez said the unusually high rate of unemployment that was calculated in November 2001 could mean the rate will continue to increase in Charlevoix until March.

"Charlevoix will most likely be hit harder in March this year (as opposed to last year)," Lopez said.

The state rating doesn't fluctuate as much as the local rate. In fact, where our rate in July was the lowest of the year, July across the state was the highest rate of unemployment.

Lopez said July of 2001 was when large layoffs in the automotive industry occurred.

As for the future, Lopez said he refers to the University of Michigan economic forecast for the state of Michigan.

"They're (the University of Michigan) predicting the state has already started to recover. But recovery for the state should start in earnest during the second half of the year. This won't be evident in employment statistics which are generally a lagging indicator of the economy," Lopez said.

Unemployed getting help with college courses

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

> "This is an opportunity for me to get into a designated career versus having a job."
> Larry Nunemaker,
> Program recipient taking college courses

Last year, Charlevoix resident Larry Nunemaker, 39, was laid off twice by two different Charlevoix employers, but now, it seems his luck is changing.

With help from the state of Michigan and the federal government, Nunemaker is making the transition from a laid off manufacturing worker to a full-time student.

"It (the unemployment program) changed my life. It (going back to school) was something I never considered until the opportunity was presented to me," he said.

Nunemaker was laid off from Charlevoix's Hoskins Manufacturing in the spring of 2001 for a week, resumed work and in June of that year quit, just before the company shut its doors.

He picked up another manufacturing job with Harbor Industries in Charlevoix for about a month and then went to work for Grand Bay Marine from where he was also laid off in November of 2001.

Being laid off from Hoskins in the spring and his recent lay off from Grand Bay Marine, made Nunemaker eligible for benefits from the government.

"Low and behold even though I quit working at Hoskins, I still qualified because I was laid off during the one qualifying week and was laid off again," Nunemaker said.

Representatives from Northwest Michigan Works came to Hoskins while Nunemaker was still working there to let the employees know what benefits are out there for displaced workers.

He went to the unemployment office in Petoskey and inquired about what was available to him.

"I chose to separate myself from the manufacturing community and get into a new career. The opportunity presented itself and it was too good of an opportunity to turn down," Nunemaker said.

The program he is participating in, the Transitional Adjustment Assistance Program, is an off shoot of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA).

The program has offered Nunemaker 52 weeks of income support in conjunction with approved training.

The training is a two year nursing degree through North Central Michigan College.

He is currently taking 12 prerequisite credits to qualify for the nursing program. If accepted, he will start as a nursing student in the fall of 2002.

"This is an opportunity for me to get into a designated career versus having a job," he said.

Nunemaker hopes to become a surgical nurse stationed in a hospital's emergency department.

His aspirations for future employment fit well with his current part-time work as a Charlevoix Emergency Medical Service driver and an on-call volunteer city firefighter.

The Transitional Adjustment Assistance Program will pay for his schooling, including the cost of books.

After 22 years out of the classroom, Nunemaker finished his first full week of classes last week.

"It was interesting getting used to where things are at and how things have changed," he said.

Nunemaker added that he has run into several of his Hoskins co-workers on campus, many of whom are also getting into degree programs.

For further information about this and other programs call the Petoskey unemployment office at (231) 347-5150 or contact the Charlevoix Northwest Michigan Works office at (231) 547-5083.

Many programs available to unemployed

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Over 280 workers in Charlevoix County have been laid off or let go of due to plant closings and or a downturn in the economy.

Charlevoix's Northwest Michigan Works is a free employment service that has helped many of these displaced workers find jobs, partake in job training and in some cases go back to school.

Bill Woodrow, manager of Northwest Michigan Works, said last year in Charlevoix County there were two major factory closings — East Jordan's Dura and Charlevoix's Hoskins Manufacturing. The closings accounted for the loss of 280 jobs.

He added that in other sectors the economy forced reductions left many unemployed who may not be called back when the economy picks up.

While this reality may appear bleak, Woodrow reviewed several programs offered through the Petoskey and Charlevoix Northwest Michigan Works offices for those left unemployed.

He explained most people who are laid off for the winter season in Charlevoix go through the unemployment office in Petoskey called Consumer Industry Services.

"These people are laid off in mid-fall and expect to go back, but have no winter focus for employment. Our economy is based on tourism and seasonal activities — so, there is a certain population of people that work in seasonal employment in this area," Woodrow said.

In the case of seasonal workers the unemployed worker is permitted to draw "unemployment," monetary compensation, up to $300 per week for up to 26 weeks. Woodrow said the maximum of $300 may be upgraded, as it has been stable since the mid 1990s.

In order to receive unemployment the recipient has to be able, available and seeking work. Woodrow said the "seeking work" criterion can be fulfilled by electronically posting your resume on the Michigan Talent Bank.

"Michigan Works can help a wide variety of individuals. People come in to use the Michigan Talent Bank to see what jobs are available in the community," he said.

The talent bank is part of the State Labor Exchange and is composed of two sides, one, the job seeker and two, the employer. The job seeker posts his or her resume electronically with the system. This can be done from an at home computer with Internet access or at the Michigan Works office.

Employers who have been screened to ensure upstanding credentials, can then access information about the job seeker and can contact that individual directly.

Woodrow said as of Jan. 17 there were between 25 and 30 open job orders in this area.

Statewide, there are 500,000 resumes on the system and 30,000 open job orders. Woodrow characterized the open jobs as mainly day labor and professional positions.

The huge number of resumes verses the small number of open jobs may seem disheartening but, Woodrow said in many situations, employed people post their resume just in case the perfect opportunity pops up.

"You don't have to be unemployed to post your resume — people who are thinking of relocating, wanting to upgrade from their current employment and those who want to see what's out there often will post their resume," he said.

The job seeker can then access job orders placed on the system by an employer.

Those wanting to look at open orders, and employers wanting to find the perfect candidate, can search by county, by job title or by key word.

Additional programs include three state and federally funded options administered through Michigan Works.

Woodrow said the Work Force Investment Act (WIA) can help people with their job search and with training. This option is open to low income workers, those who lost their job to force reduction or to dislocated workers, like those who worked at Charlevoix's Hoskins Manufacturing.

Under the Work Force Investment Act, the state will fund training which includes education. It will pay for tuition and books through certified education entities, like North Central Michigan College, for all vocationally oriented classes.

Dislocated and or low income workers can also take advantage of the acts on the job training opportunities. The act offers employers fund reimbursement for wages or additional training for employees.

"This is ideal when an employee is interested in a position but they don't have the skill or education background for the job," Woodrow said.

Another option for dislocated workers is the North American Free Trade Act of 1974 (NAFTA).

When a plant closes, as Hoskins and Dura did, or when there is forced reduction due to foreign competition or a factory relocating outside the United States, workers who lost jobs can be certified under one of two federally funded programs that allow them a wide variety of re-employment options.

One option includes funding of job interviews outside the area, whereby the government will pay up to 90 percent of your expenses. The program may also pay your relocation expenses to move your family outside of an area.

In some cases NAFTA will also pay for retraining.

A program funded by the state, the Work First Program, is a structured re-employment program through the Charlevoix County Family Independence Agency and the Friend of the Court.

Individuals who partake in the Work First Program document their job search activities and support services are made available to them. This could include possible work clothes, tools and car repairs.

Some schooling and on the job training can also be provided through the work first program.

"The idea with work first is to move the individual toward self-sufficiency," Woodrow said.

"Right now we are getting five to 10 people each week referred to us under work first through the Family Independence Agency. The numbers seem to be increasing because of the general economy. It could also be fallout from plant closures," he added.

Woodrow said the most widely used of the aforementioned programs depends on the season and the state of affairs with the economy.

"Program use depends on the economic climate and the needs of employers. When Harbor Industries did its expansion there were many people leaving Dura that were looking for employment. We helped Harbor Industries with on the job training for these people," Woodrow explained.

The facility also has career advisors on hand and workshops available to help the public tighten up resume writing skills and to help match background abilities with the prospective employee's vocational direction.

Michigan Works' career advisors are Tom Dionne and Bill Damsgaard.

Initially these programs are federally funded, the money then filters down to the state level which then filters into the hands of workforce development boards who then allocate the money to places like Northwest Michigan Works.

Charlevoix's Northwest Michigan Works office is located at 12075 US-31 North, next-door to the Marathon gas station. You can contact the office by calling (231)547-5083.

Fire proves to be a tough one for crews

FIRE

It was between these two roofs that the fire raged out of control and firefighters had no way of getting to it.

"That's why we were there so long. With a fire between two roofs you have to cut the top part away to get in between there — it's very hard and dangerous work," Carver said.

Charlevoix resident Kevin Swanson arrived at the scene with a back hoe which was used to peel back the roof.

Smoke was carried throughout town and parts of US-31 were closed to allow fire trucks and emergency personnel access to the scene.

Carver said city firefighters responded to the building fire at 6 a.m. When they pulled up, flames were billowing out of the upstairs kitchen window. Two hours later, at 8 a.m., the crew of 25 city firefighters and approximately 12 Charlevoix Township firefighters stopped squirting water on the building.

"The fire should have been out in a short period of time; we were there until 9:30 a.m. or 10," he said, citing the complex roof situation as the reason for the delay.

Carver said the fire started in the second floor kitchen area of living quarters at the Silver Birch Motel owned by Patricia Christ. The kitchen was located in the southeast corner of the second floor.

He said Christ was the only one living in the two-story dwelling at the time. She was unharmed.

The fire did not spread to the first floor but the damage to the second floor was extensive.

"The second floor has to be replaced and there is water damage on the first floor," he said.

There were three motel guests staying at the Silver Birch at the time of the fire, all of whom were evacuated by Christ before firefighters arrived at the scene.

The motel has eight units available for rent.

In the end, the work of the city police and firefighters, and the work of the township firefighters and the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, was enough to tame the flames.

"We saved the building and that's what we were after," Carver said.

The motel fire is still under investigation.

The state of Michigan's Fire Marshall is scheduled to come to Charlevoix this week to review the fire in an effort to determine its cause and origin. The city fire investigators are also working on the case.

Basketball team looking like contenders

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

Even their rivals have to admit it, the Charlevoix Rayders look like a team headed hack to the Class C state finals.

A sign in the Boyne City fan section at last Friday's game read, "Tickets to the Breslin Center — $6, Gas to get to the Breslin — $20, Watching Charlevoix get killed hy Detroit Rogers — Priceless."

If Charlevoix (9-0 overall, 4-0 conference), ranked no. 3 in Class C by the Associated Press, and Detroit Rogers, ranked no. 1, continue their unbeaten ways, they would indeed hook up in the state finals at the Jack Breslin Student Event Center.

The Rayders continued to look like a team ready to return to the state finals, demolishing Boyne 81-47 and Petoskey 71-47 last week.

When asked if he expected the blowouts to continue throughout the regular season, Charlevoix coach Keith Haske admitted, "Yes, if we're playing up to our capabilities."

"Now that we're halfway home (through the season), I think the seniors will take care of things," Haske said. "They see that their high school careers are almost over and they will give it all they've got."

Senior Pat Gowell set the tone against Boyne City opening the game with a three-pointer. Charlevoix then stole the inbound pass followed by a Jim Shepherd hoop for a 5-0 lead and the Rayders never looked back.

The Ramblers played a deliberate, slow-down style on offense and a rough and tumble physical game on defense but were no match for Charlevoix.

"I was pleased with how we responded to their play," Haske said. "We kept our heads in the game and kept playing basketball."

An 18-6 Rayder first quarter lead was expanded to a 49-19 halftime score largely on the sweet shooting of All-State forward Scott Parrish who scored 14 in the second stanza and 19 in the half.

While most of the starters rested on the bench for the last quarter and a half, Keith Daly put on a show of his own in the second half. Daly scored seven points in the third quarter and six in the fourth, including a three-point shot from the corner and two conventional three-point plays.

"Daly stepped up and played a real nice game for us," Haske commented. "He gave us a spark off the bench and showed real good shot selection."

Charlevoix's largest lead was 39, at 79-40 with 2:14 left in the game.

Parrish led the Rayders with 19 points. Daly added 13. Scott Friske chipped in with 10 while floor general Gowell had nine points, seven assists, six rebounds and four steals.

"I thought Gowell had an outstanding game," Haske said. "He just goes out and keeps doing it every night. He's as steady a point guard as I've ever coached. He had a great all-around game."

Earlier in the week, Charlevoix embarrassed Class B rival Petoskey in its own brand new gym.

The Rayders fell behind early due to cold shooting, trailing 5-0 and 7-2 and didn't take the lead until there was only 2:05 left on a Scott Friske basket for a 12-10 lead. Up to that point, Parrish had scored all 10 Rayder points.

A Gowell steal and layup pushed the lead to four and Parrish scored off a Scott Friske feed to get the Rayders up 16-12. Following a Northmen free throw, Daly hit a free throw and Scott Friske scored again to push the lead to six where it stayed at the close of the first period.

Charlevoix took the game over in the second quarter as Petoskey closed to 21-17, the Rayders went on a 17-1 run, sparked by 11 points hy Shepherd. Charlevoix led at the half, 42-23.

Parrish picked up where he had left off earlier by scoring the first six points of the third quarter to push the advantage to 48-23. Following a Petoskey basket, the Rayders then scored nine straight points, capped by a Ryan Rafacz three-pointer to extend the lead to 57-25.

At the end of three, Charlevoix led 62-33. In the fourth quarter, Petoskey stayed primarily with their starters against the Rayders' third string, allowing the Northmen to outscore Charlevoix 14-9 and make the score appear closer than the game actually was.

Parrish again led the Rayders with a season-high 26 points and 10 rebounds. Shepherd scored 16 points. Scott Friske added eight and two blocked shots. Gowell again ran the show with seven assists and five steals.

"Parrish played an unbelievable game," Haske said. "He definitely got us going early on, hitting when we were pretty cold. He got the team pretty peppered up."

Haske termed the Petoskey effort "defensively one of our best games of the year."

The Rayders travel to Traverse City St. Francis for a Lake Michigan Conference tilt after hosting Kalkaska on Jan. 22. Results were unavailable at presstime.

Charlevoix's Nate Teuscher dodges a Boyne City elbow in a very physical game last week. The Rayders beat Boyne City 81-47. Earlier in the week, they faced Petoskey and won 71-47. Currently, the Rayders are undefeated on their march to the state finals. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

Ski team has high ranking

Ranked number two in the state in the latest coach's poll, the Charlevoix boys' ski team continued to get strong individual performances from several of their racers Saturday night at the seven team Boyne-Charlevoix Invitational Jan. 19 at Boyne Mountain.

On a night where the Austrian Ski School honored the late Everett Kircher with a torch light parade down the fabled Hemlock, the Rayders got a sensational performance by double winner Kelsey Barnard and finished third, just behind Gaylord and Boyne City.

They also did this despite racing without two key members who were at a FIS race in Minnesota.

Following Kelsey's win in GS was Chad Johnson in tenth, Taylor Fisher in eighteenth and Mike Dupuis was thirtieth.

In SL Barnard was first, Johnson had a good performance and finished fourth, Fisher continued to be solid with a twelfth and Dupuis improved to twenty-third.

Coach Sue Miller was extremely happy with how her boys skied as a team and noted the improvement of Taylor Fisher and Mike Dupuis, who they are going to need if they are going to contend for a state title.

Volleyball team impresses conference leader Kalkaska

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

If there is such a thing as a moral victory in sports, the Charlevoix Rayders volleyball team earned one this week.

The Rayders (2-3 conference, 14-13-2 overall) fell in a hard-fought loss to undefeated conference leader Kalkaska, 18-16, 15-9.

"The Kalkaska coach said after the game that we were the toughest competition they've faced so far," Charlevoix coach Liz Grunch said. "We played one of our best games of the season. Kalkaska has a very good team."

Natashia Kleiber led the Rayders as she has all season, both defensively and with nine kills on the attack. Krista Swenor had six kills and three blocks. Becca Kanine ran the offense accounting for 20 assists. Kate Madison had three blocks. Kelly Reid was also instrumental on defense, according to Grunch.

"I was disappointed with the loss, but not in the way they played," Grunch said.

Last weekend, Charlevoix participated in the Northwood Invitational in Midland.

The Rayders made it out of pool play, but fell to Mason County Eastern 15-9, 15-9 in first round action.

In pool play, Charlevoix defeated Bendle, 12-15, 15-7, 15-11 and lost to Class A Bay City Central, 15-10, 15-8, 15-5 and Stephenson, 15-8, 9-15, 15-11.

The Rayders host Traverse City St. Francis this Thursday, Jan. 24.

A Lively Fire

Charlevoix had a narrow escape from a disastrous conflagration Christmas night about five o'clock. The building next to the Fountain City House on the east, owned and occupied by J.W. Campbell, took fire in the rear part, and when the alarm was blown at the water works the flames were coming through the roof. There was very little wind, and what there was blew from the southwest, which allayed the first fears for the Fountain City House, 12 feet west of the burning building. Both fire companies were on the ground promptly, but after the tow lines of hose were attached to the hydrant it was discovered that a section of hose was frozen. This caused a delay of 10 minutes and the fire was making rapid headway, the entire roof being ablaze. But when the deluge came from the two nozzles, darkness came inside the building in the space of time taken to write this, which demonstrates the fact that with unfrozen hose the fire department can extinguish anything in the shape of a blaze. But the inside of the structure was completely gutted. Most of the household effects were saved. Damage covered by insurance. We shudder when we contemplate the possible result of a heavy wind and frozen hose, and we are constrained to criticize the ones responsible for it. We are inclined to acquit the fire department, when we recognize the fact that in no town in Michigan, of the size of Charlevoix, does a fire department receive so little official recognition as here. The fire department is "taken for granted." They are paid an insignificant stipend for risk to health and spoiled clothes, at fires, and who can be expected to give their time to drain and dry hose. We hope this will not be permitted to occur again.

FOUR DAYS IMPRISONED.

Hazardous Trip and Trying Experience of the Mail Tug Violet — Ice Threatening and Food Scarce — Final Rescue

In local marine annals there is not a case involving more hardship or greater peril than that of the last trip of the tug Violet, owned by R. Beutel Co. and hailing from this port.

Her crew was Ed Martin, master; Barney Martin, engineer. On board was one passenger, Charles Cross of St. James, on his way home from Chicago. She arrived here with the island mail Thursday afternoon making a good run. At one o'clock Friday afternoon she started out for the Island with fair prospects, but encountered a large field of ice about five miles this side of the harbor, which she could not force herself through.

Saturday morning found her still there, and from time to time all day the cable operator at St. James informed Charlevoix she could be seen. But, on Sunday morning nothing could be seen of her from that port. At nine o'clock Sunday morning the information came by telephone from Cross Village that she laid four miles off that place, inside a field of ice, and unable to extricate herself.

Meanwhile, the tug Margaret McCann started out from St. James, soon locating the Violet but was unable to reach her. The same evening the McCann was joined by the Parmelee, from this port, but both tugs were obliged to abandon their efforts. One very important task of the expedition however, was accomplished — a liberal supply of food was sent to the Violet in a boat shoved over the ice by members of McCann's crew. The question of food was the one causing most anxiety on both sides of the channel. It was found that the crew was well toward the bottom of a box of canned tomatoes — the only edible article left on board. Both the relief tugs returned home Tuesday morning. The strong steel tug Berger, of Manistique, left that port yesterday morning, and, as we go to press, it is safe to say that the Violet is rescued. She is reported to be in good condition, with a ton and a half of coal on board.

An interesting phrase of the affair is that W.D.C. Germaine, Mayor of Traverse City, came here intending to go visit St. James on the Violet, on important business, and only at the last moment before the tug left did his friends here prevail on him not to take the chance.

The wind power debate

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

While Eveline Township residents claim the windmills in Mackinaw City have created a slew of problems, thus proving they should not be used locally — Mackinaw village administrators say they've been a blessing.

According to Steve Schnell, community development director for the village of Mackinaw City, complaints following the construction of the windmills have been isolated. In fact, he said the windmills have been well received.

And, Steve Smiley, vice president of Bay Windpower — the Suttons Bay company that put up the generators in Mackinaw — added, "I'm an environmentalist and am very concerned about the environmental impact of burning fossil fuels. We need to balance society's needs with its interests."

But, a group of about 20 Eveline Township residents claim this will not be the case in their area.

Nancy Ferguson, an Eveline Township resident fighting the wind turbine generators, said the spinning of the blades will result in a strobe effect in nearby residences and the wind turbines would add 24 decibels of sound to the rural area. She said the change in the visual landscape coupled with the "drone and buzz sound from the blades" may result in adverse health effects to humans.

Mike Kiteley, co-owner of Kiteley's Farm Market in Charlevoix, agreed.

"I'm not partaking because of the eye and noise pollution and the long-term effects it could have on the community," Kiteley said.

Defendant takes the stand in murder trial

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

In what would be very emotional testimony for all in the courtroom, Thomas Aryon Shulick, 22, of Charlevoix, took the stand in his own defense Monday on charges he murdered Scott Cook, 24, of East Jordan on April 29, 2001.

Shulick sobbed as he recounted some of the night's events in the Charlevoix County Circuit Courtroom, saying he did not mean to kill Cook and did not remember much of the evening due to the high amount of alcohol he had consumed. Shulick said he had about 11 alcoholic drinks in a 5 to 6 hour period.

"I never wanted to kill him. It never crossed my mind that I could be capable of that," he said.

Both the defense and prosecution rested their cases on Monday. The case was expected to be put before the jury for deliberation on Tuesday. A verdict was not known before press-time.

Corrections

In last week's edition of the Charlevoix Courier, a story on page 3 about the murder trial should have said the defense may say (Thomas Aryon) Shulick was highly intoxicated on April 29 and unable to reason, which under some circumstances is a usable defense.

Also, on page 23, in the cutline for the basketball team from 1924/25 one of the player's name was misspelled. The names should have been: Harold Jones, Floyd Brown, Murray Glasgow, Chuck Dagwell, Earl Harrington, Leon Solomon, Pete Hallett and Orlin Cunningham. Weather kills plans for ice rink

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Dreams of ice skating in East Park have been squashed by temperamental weather.

Charlevoix's Downtown Development Authority (DDA) rescinded $20,000 in funds it had allocated to build and maintain an ice rink in East Park this winter. The decision was made at the authority's Jan. 28 meeting after authority member Dan Barron asked city manager Mike Wiesner if the city was still trying to implement the ice rink.

Wiesner said the city was attempting to freeze the ground at the site but the 50 degree temperatures this past weekend didn't help the effort. But, he added, if cold temperatures roll in for an extended period of time it was still possible.

Wiesner said the $20,000 the DDA had initially awarded the project was a high number budgeted by city administrators for the perfect winter skating conditions — a far cry from what Charlevoix has seen so far.

As Wiesner explained the process, DDA member Janine Wallace spoke up.

Wallace said, "It's unfortunate, but I think it's almost too late."

Women's investment clubs becoming popular

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix women have found financial success in stocks.

The National Association of Investors Corporation (NAIC) has documented a trend in investment clubs showing women's groups are becoming more prevalent and more successful than their all male club counterparts.

And a group of Charlevoix women are some of the trend setters.

Women's investment clubs in Charlevoix have become increasingly popular over the past 20 years — dozens of local ladies are currently participating in two of the clubs.

The longest running of the two established Charlevoix clubs is associated with the NAIC called the Charlevoix Women's Investment Club.

The other is operated through Edward Jones Investors in Charlevoix and does not have a name.

The Charlevoix Women's Investment Club was established in 1986. It accepts 15 members and is currently full. But there is a waiting list for those interested. The club's membership ranges in age from 30 to 80.

Martha Strawbridge, 80, of Charlevoix, joined when her friend Marge Dinwiddie, an original member, encouraged her to.

Each month, the ladies gather in Charlevoix Area Hospital's conference room where they ante up their membership dues and get to work.

The concept behind an investment group involves the collection of monthly dues from members and pooling the money to buy stocks in researched companies.

Each member has a duty to collect data about the stocks in the portfolio to track and record.

They participate in a study program which allows them to look at the performance of new stocks. From there, Strawbridge said the women vote to buy and sell as they see fit.

When asked why she joined, Strawbridge laughed and said, "To make money of course."

She added, she has since achieved her objective and exceeded her expectations.

"We are doing well because our portfolio is diverse," she explained.

The Edward Jones group was started in October of 2001 by Charlevoix resident and Edward Jones investment representative Derek Chowen.

Chowen said, "I found a demand for a women's investment group. Investment groups like this are a good way for people to learn how things work."

"Today, more than ever before, women are taking advantage of the financial benefits of long-term investing in stocks. Many women view participation in an investment club as a sound way to gain knowledge about investing and to help secure their financial future," a report authored by the NAIC states.

The investors corporation said over the past 10 years (1990-2000) it has witnessed a leap in the number of women's investment clubs. Annual surveys of NAIC investment clubs revealed a 25 percent increase in the women's clubs in the 10 years from 1988 to 1998.

The group states much of this growth occurred between 1995 and 2000.

Over this same 10 year period, the traditional category of all men's investment clubs decreased from 26.9 percent in 1988 to 10 percent in 1998.

Today, NAIC's total membership is almost 70 percent female.

Beyond the prevalence of women participants, the NAIC has also found women's investment club equity accounts often out perform all male club accounts.

During 1999, the average compounded annual lifetime

Why are residents against these wind turbines?

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

Maybe you can help me figure this out.

I am confused over the stance that some members of our community are taking on the issue of wind turbine generators. I thought that wind power was a much better alternative to coal-burning power plants, but apparently they are the worst thing for Charlevoix according to some members of the community.

These generators have been big news lately. Throughout Charlevoix County, some farmers are requesting zoning permits to place them on their properties, thus providing the community with a source of new power and giving the farmer added income.

And lately, any added income for a farmer is great news. Farming is a tough business and many are finding themselves forced to sell their land and get out. In order to make ends meet with the land sale, they usually sell to developers who then turn this agricultural land into sprawling housing developments, industrial complexes or some other cluster of buildings.

However, in Charlevoix, some of the farmers want to keep their land by putting up some of these wind turbine generators to raise some needed funds.

The wind turbine generators create electricity through the wind. They do not use coal or nuclear energy to create electricity, but the renewable and clean wind that blows through Charlevoix.

The downsides to these are their size; some can be very large, and every so often a bird can hit a propeller and die.

When compared to polluting electrical plants, wind turbine generators seem to be a great alternative. Coal can pollute the air we breathe and water we drink. As for nuclear power, the waste will just kill you outright if you are exposed to it.

So you would think local environmentalists and residents would support these wind turbine generators with open arms. That is not the case.

Instead, every time a farmer wants to put up one of these generators they find themselves the center of controversy. Residents get angry because they don't want to see the generators "in their backyards" and some so-called environmentalists scream about the lives of birds that hit the propellers or say they are "too loud."

They argue the wind turbine generators will negatively impact the wildlife and tranquil setting of their area, even more so than a condominium or large scale development, which could be put on these properties instead of large windmill type structures.

But, in many cases the generators are too far away to hear and actually are more pleasing to look at than, say, an industrial park or boat storage yard.

In fact, I visited a similar wind turbine generator in Mackinaw City recently to see what it looked like and to hear exactly how loud these things are. They were so loud that I had to turn off the car because I couldn't hear them over the engine.

Even then, I wasn't sure if I was hearing the sounds of the wind blowing through the trees or the wind turbine generator.

So I have been trying to look at this issue from both sides, however, I have been having problems seeing one of the sides. Here we are in an age when we need alternative sources of power and here is an alternative source of power from the wind.

People love to use electricity in Charlevoix and the rest of the nation, but around here, we don't want to see the machinery that makes it. We would rather get our electricity from coal burning plants and nuclear waste producing plants that are far away from us, than from a wind generator located on a local farm.

I just don't get it.

If you do, feel free to send in a letter to the editor. It may help those of us confused on the issue, understand it.

What a wonderful world if we couldn't hide the truth

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

In 1622 Pope Gregory XVIII organized a group of Cardinals to assist in the propagation of the faith. In Latin that last is propaganda fide.

Gregory had unknowingly added to the language a noun that we still use today, although not in precisely the way it might have been originally imagined.

Most often, "propaganda" has come to mean misleading, deceptive, distorted language designed to promote a particular idea or ideology. In short, lying to get your point across to as many people as possible.

I was in grade school during World War II when propaganda was the word we used to describe what our enemies were distributing to promote the cause of fascism or nazism. We understood it to be lies and falsehoods meant to promote the Aryan ideals of Adolph Hitler and his associates. Hitler's minister of propaganda was reported to have said that if a lie were repeated often enough and loudly enough, it would come to be considered by many, if not most people, as truth.

We have come a long way since then. We hardly use the word propaganda anymore and I think I know why.

Propaganda is what we expect to hear and do hear on a daily basis from political parties or any other organized group promoting its own agenda. We expect the choice of language to support the ideology of the group making the statement, even if it means hiding or shading the truth.

Palestinians and Israelis produce almost perfectly opposite descriptions of what actually happened. We may never know what actually happened because our information often comes from powerful groups with the means to widely promote the view most favorable to their agenda.

And, Hitler's minister was correct — if we hear it often enough, many of us will come to believe it is true, and will repeat it as true to others. The "it" we believe may be that abortion is murder, that all Democrats are liberals, that Republicans invariably favor big business against the "common people," or that the media is so biased we cannot believe anything that it reports as fact.

What if there was no such word as propaganda?

What we used to describe with a curled lip as "propaganda" has become the ordinary political and social discourse of our day.

I wish I knew what to do about it. No one would spend money on advertising if we were not pretty much biologically built to believe what we hear repeatedly.

In the college where I taught, I had a colleague in the Psychology department who tried to do something about it. Professor Weilgart had escaped from Nazi Germany. He came to us with facility in 14 different languages and he saw that in all of them it was possible to produce lies in support of an agenda.

He set out to make a new language in which that would not be possible.

From his point of view, he succeeded. He developed a language in which slogans and bumper stickers were impossible and in which truth to fact was central. I never understood the language and not many other people did.

Professor Weilgart died some years ago and his "better" language died with him. I sometimes wish he had succeeded for all of us by producing a language in which we would almost be required to avoid the shading of language to our favor. We wouldn't have to speak the truth but we would all know when there were lies.

Maybe most of the problems with using language as propaganda would go away if we just paid attention to what our mothers told us when they said, "If you can't say anything nice, don't say anything at all."

Or, there is my favorite academic translation of that motherly advice, "Hyperbole is the mother of contention."

Letters to the editor

Generators a bad idea

Editor:

Reading your article about the wind turbine generators, we thought what a wonderful idea. However, after investigating the whole subject we feel all we would be doing is subsidizing a few property owners and the electric company. Therefore the noise and unsightliness would in no way be justified because the energy saving is very slim if at all.

On-site septic better

Editor:

As you reported last week, the Up North Green Party (UNGP) wrote the state Department of Environmental Quality in December opposing the city's plan to build an oversized sewer in Marion Township to service the new high school. We and others have proposed instead an on-site septic system.

Though the school will have science labs, a cafeteria and locker rooms, we take the parties at their word in the draft contract of November 2001 that the building would generate sewage equivalent to only seven homes.

According to your article, the city now wants to build not one, but two sewers to make sure sewage moves over the hill at Clark Road down to the city's system. The city says the school should pay for the second sewer.

The sewers will be able to accommodate 1,067 homes. Why would the city and school want sewers for 1,067 homes when the school will only generate enough sewage for seven? City manager Mike Wiesner answers we should plan for "future growth."

The future growth would be in Marion Township, out of the city's jurisdiction. As an afterthought, Wiesner concedes the township might not want growth.

There are good reasons the township would oppose growth. We don't see any of the landowners along the road favoring the sewers.

Marion Center Road is a township-designated scenic corridor in an agricultural preserve with nationally recognized unplatted prime farmlands. The sewers will entice developers to build factories, restaurants, gas stations and parking lots — all with impervious surfaces — in the area around the school. Hundreds of new wells would follow, impacting the water table and providing pathways for groundwater contamination. These will be significant impacts on the ecology, soils, rural character and aesthetic and scenic values of the area.

An on-site septic system is feasible, would be cheaper, and can be built before the school's scheduled opening this fall.

Readers concerned about these developments should contact the city, township and school immediately to stop them before it is too late. Or attend one of our monthly meetings for more information. For details call 547-2626.

There is a gentleman in our community I would like to recognize. That gentleman is Ron Winchester, owner of Winchester Funeral Home, an asset to Charlevoix.

Many of us have needed his guidance, his caring, in our time of need.

Ron is a man of humor and his presence among us is special!

Can you imagine having to help us face the reality of death, day after day? His smile and kind words have made our journey easier.

When you are received into his funeral home it is a comforting feeling. His staff is also special.

God bless you Ron, your dear family and your staff.

Stormwater officer hired

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The next time you want to dramatically alter the earth around your home or business you'll need to talk to Marc Seelye.

Seelye, 46, a Boyne City resident of 36 years, has replaced Wendy Armstrong as the new Charlevoix County Soil Erosion Officer. A soil erosion officer deals with construction projects that involve changing of the natural landscape.

Armstrong resigned from the position to spend more time with her family.

Seelye's first day on the job was Jan. 2.

He said so far, he's had to wade around in a sea of paperwork to familiarize himself with the position. While he's played catch up in the office he has also been doing regular field work.

In Charlevoix County, there are numerous commercial and residential building projects underway, many of which Seelye has to monitor.

"As the soil erosion officer, I review issues pertaining to stormwater control and soil erosion and enforce those policies," he explained.

Any new residence being built within 500 feet of a lake or stream requires permits from Seelye as does any earth change that effects one acre of land or more. This may include additions to homes or construction of a new home. And, all commercial projects require Seelye's inspection regardless of where it is located.

The recently revised Charlevoix Stormwater Control Ordinance is one of Seelye's enforcement tools. He said he has read through the document and will have no problem enforcing it.

Prior to accepting the position with the county, Seelye was an employee of H & D and of Roberts Construction in Boyne City. He is a graduate of Lake Superior State University with a degree in biological science.

After several years in the field, running construction crews, he said he became comfortable with the permit process and was ready for a change.

"I wasn't enjoying it anymore," he said.

Seelye said he knows he won't always see eye-to-eye with builders and developers and those who file complaints — but he is looking forward to the challenges of the position.

Seelye's wife is named Cindy. The couple have two daughters, Melissa and Tess and a son, Nolan.

Coast Guard gives tips for ice safety

Continuing warm temperatures have deteriorated ice conditions the U.S. Coast Guard Station in Charlevoix recently warned.

The Coast Guard generally recommends that people stay off the ice. However, in fine tradition, these conditions bring out ice fishermen, as well as many others who enjoy winter sports. In order to prevent any unforeseen danger to these anglers and sportsmen, the station offered the following helpful tips that could prove lifesaving:

Preparations

- Ensure that your clothing and footwear is appropriate for the weather conditions you are going out into. Always keep in mind the possibility of being stranded.
- Be sure to notify family, friends or neighbors of your destination and when you plan to return. If you are reported missing, this information will assist the Coast Guard in searching for you.
- Carry a cell phone, two-way radio or some other means of communication in the event you should run into trouble. Construct a survival kit to include flares and at least 30 feet of rope thick enough to support the weight of a person.
- If you plan to travel across the ice by foot, 4-wheeler or snowmobile, it is recommended that you wear a life vest and carry a pair of ice picks. The ice picks aid in Exchange student in need of a new area host

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Seung-joo Jung, 16, a South Korean exchange student, is looking for a home.

Jung is a senior at Charlevoix High School and has been in Charlevoix since September. His exchange program runs through July 2002. However, he is in need of a new host family or he may have to leave Charlevoix, an area he has grown to love.

"School is very fun. Very different education — in America I can choose subjects, in Korea, no," Jung said of his experience with American education so far.

Topping his list of learning favorites are physical education and art classes. Every Friday he goes to sporting events and to dances after, at the school. And he plans to join the track team this spring.

Jung arrived in northern Michigan through the Youth For Understanding exchange program. But his Harbor Springs area host family backed out at the last minute leaving Jung and Youth For Understanding searching for a new home for him.

Program coordinators relocated Jung to Charlevoix resident Pete Phillips' home.

Phillips, 60, is the owner of Phillips Service Station located on the north side of Bridge Street.

During the 1999-2000 school year Phillips' son was an exchange student to Sweden through the Youth For Understanding program. After his son completed the program, Phillips told Youth For Understanding officials that if they ever got into a bind he would be willing to host a student.

Now, his son has graduated from high school and moved out and that bind happened. Jung, also called Harry — which is what he has been named by students at the school — wound up in Phillips' home.

This was supposed to be a temporary set up, but now, four months later, Jung is still there and the program is still searching for a new home for him.

"I don't have any kids, my house is like a hunting camp; this is no place for a 15 or 16-year-old kid. He needs to be with a family, a mother, a father and kids," Phillips said.

Phillips' mother recently became ill and between work and helping care for her his time is limited.

Jung said, "I want to stay in Charlevoix, I love Charlevoix but I have too much time alone. My exchange student friend has a host brother who he spends time with. I have only host father. I hope to find a home with a mom, dad and kids."

Those interested in hosting Jung through the completion of the exchange program can contact Phillips at 547-4112 or 547-0256.

Real People Productions helps preserve history

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

> "This helps teach everybody about their family history. It is a little easier to share than just passing around the family photo album."
> Rebecca Glotfelty, owner of Real People Productions

New resident Rebecca Glotfelty will help you keep your family history alive.

Glotfelty's business, Real People Productions, is a documentary service that will take all of those old family films you may have lying around and put them into one video that utilizes modern moviemaking techniques.

"This helps to teach everybody about their family history. It is a little easier to share than just passing around the family photo album," she said.

Glotfelty, originally from southern Michigan, had graduated from college with a degree in social science international relations. While studying overseas, she became interested in documentary film making.

So, she went back to school and received an associates degree in video production. After working with corporations to make video marketing materials, Glotfelty decided she wanted to focus more on using her film techniques to tell real stories.

In 2000, she opened her business Real People Productions and started catering to telling the stories of families and not corporations. In 2001, she and her husband, Chester Morris, moved to Charlevoix.

Glotfelty said she and her husband loved the Charlevoix area and have also opened an art gallery that specializes in furniture and sculptures.

Using her talents, Glotfelty can take old family films on 16 millimeter or eight millimeter rolls and transfer them to video, complete with music and digital effects. She can also use slides and photographs to further enhance the video.

In addition to preserving family history, Glotfelty said families can make memorial videos about a loved one that passed away.

"Memorial ones are nice. That really helps that family deal with the healing process," she said.

Glotfelty said she also can make videos for a newly wedded couple or recent graduate and can even produce historical documentaries on a family's home or local landmark.

For example, she is in the process of making a documentary on her new home using letters from the early 1900s that she found in the attic. The letters were written by a former inhabitant of the home.

Real People Productions is available throughout the year by appointment only. To contact Glotfelty call 547-2333.

Northwest Academy to perform Twelfth Night

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Northwest Academy Drama Troupe will kick off the month of February with performances of a modernized rendition of Shakespeare's Twelfth Night.

Joyce Wardwell, the troupe director and Northwest Academy drama instructor, described the musical as a farcical comedy set in the 1920s. She said it's probably Shakespeare's only musical comedy.

"By updating into the 1920s, it allows us to include the great comedic talents of the students and the great talents of the Northwest Jazz All-stars," Wardwell said.

She said the shows will be full of jazz numbers, comedy, passion, romance and general silliness.

Shakespeare wrote the Twelfth Night at the request of Queen Elizabeth for a performance on the twelfth night of Christmas, the day of the big celebration.

Wardwell said the queen's aim was nothing more than, "Pure, plain, festive, good humor."

The show includes students from grades five through twelve who have been practicing for the back-to-back performances since November. She said there are some "delicious" characters in the performance.

The cast is comprised of 16 students and 10 band members.

The first performance will take place at 7 p.m., Feb. 2 at the school. Doors will open at 6 p.m. that night for a silent auction which will feature many items donated by area merchants.

The auction will be closed at the end of the intermission and payment for items will be required at the end of the play.

There is also a matinee scheduled for 2 p.m., Feb. 3 at the school.

Tickets are $5 in advance and $6 at the door. They can be picked up at the front desk of the school or by calling the school at 547-9000. Northwest Academy is located at 115 West Hurlbut Street in Charlevoix.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the Northwest Academy Drama Department.

Wardwell said she hopes to see a good turnout "so we can continue to offer fine productions for the kids and the community."

The duties of a high school athletic trainer

Joelle Beaudoin

Athletic trainer

I am sure everyone has had the experience of sitting at a sporting event when someone is hurt on the field or court; you are wondering how bad is it? What is going on? Is there a doctor out there? Are they going to call the ambulance? I am sure these are all questions that come to mind when someone is hurt, especially if it is your son or daughter.

I am going to explain the step-by-step process of what should happen when there is an injury.

The first person to arrive on the scene is usually the coach. The coach should keep the athlete from moving and try calming them down until the Certified Athletic Trainer arrives on the scene.

You may have never even noticed, but most schools have a Certified Athletic Trainer (ATC), who attends the home school sporting events.

An ATC is a certified health care professional specifically trained to assess on and off field injuries and deal with them accordingly. ATC's are required to have a 4-year bachelor of science degree from an accredited university specializing in Sports Medicine. Upon completion of an undergraduate degree, one must pass a series of National Board Exams to receive certification.

You may wonder why an ATC should assess the injured athlete and not a doctor?

First, when an ATC is hired at the school they spend every afternoon at the school, preparing athletes for practices and games and rehabilitating and evaluating any injuries they may have. By interacting throughout the season with the athletes, coaches and parents, they have built trust and a relationship with them.

At the time of a serious injury, the ATC knows the athlete's history, their previous injuries, their pain tolerance and any preexisting condition that may play a role in the injury.

Volleyball team gets win

The Charlevoix varsity volleyball team topped league rival Traverse City St. Francis, 17-15, 15-5 in Lake Michigan Conference action last week.

The win evened the Rayders conference mark at 3-3 and their overall record to 15-13-2.

"We didn't pass well but we played decent. It was a good win for us," coach Liz Grunch said. "We were slow getting into it and St. Francis played well. We didn't start strong but we finished strong."

Libby Withrow had three kills and three blocks in a strong all-around effort.

"Libby had probably her best game of the year," Grunch said. "I was happy that she stepped up."

Kelly Zimmerman paced the offense with four kills. Natashia Kleiber added three kills.

Krista Swenor played great in the middle with her blocking and hitting, Grunch said. Swenor led the defense with four blocks.

Becca Kanine led the setters according to her coach.

The Rayders return to action on Feb. 4 when they host Harbor Springs in a key conference matchup.

Basketball team rolling over competition

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

One big milestone .... two more blowouts .... a move down in one poll .... movement down, then up again in the other.... it was an exciting week for Charlevoix basketball.

Senior forward Scott Parrish scored his one thousandth point in the Rayders' 83-51 victory over Kalkaska. The game was stopped momentarily with 6:45 remaining in the second half after Parrish reached the mark as the entire Charlevoix crowd rose to its feet to honor Parrish and thank him for his efforts.

Parrish, a first team All-State selection last season, is headed to Lake Superior State University on a basketball scholarship next season. A starter on the varsity since his sophomore season, Parrish has averaged over 16 points a game over his two and a half years and has led Charlevoix to a 53-10 record.

"I thought (the milestone) was awesome. Totally awesome," Charlevoix coach Keith Haske said. "It is a tribute to all the time and hard work he has put in over the years. All the hours he spent in the gym especially out of season and in the summers."

Parrish is Haske's first 1,000-point scorer in his 18 years of coaching.

The Kalkaska game started the same as usual, one team shooting the lights out, high-fiving and chest-bumping after hoops. The only difference was it wasn't Charlevoix, but the Blazers doing the celebrating.

Kalkaska led by as much as 10 in the first quarter at 16-6, before the Rayders scored the last three points of the period.

The Blazers shot very well, handled the Rayders' pressure and were very patient on offense. In addition, Parrish and Rob Boss each picked up two quick fouls.

It almost looked like a blueprint for how to beat Charlevoix, something that opponents in 30 of the Rayders' last games have been unable to do.

"I thought they had a great game plan and executed it real well early," Haske said.

Kalkaska opened the second quarter by extending the lead to 20-11 at the 6:20 mark of the second quarter. Then things changed in a hurry.

Following a Boss bucket, Pat Gowell hit two free throws and then picked off a Blazer pass and cruised in for a lay-up to cut the lead to 20-17.

The Blazers called a quick time-out to no avail.

Scott Friske then stole the inbounds pass and dunked to cut the lead to one. Seconds later, he fed Nate Teuscher for another lay-up to give the Rayders their first lead of the game at 21-20 with 4:48 left in the half. Scott Friske then hit two more free throws that led to another Kalkaska time-out.

Charlevoix couldn't be slowed down, however, as the Rayders made up for lost time, scoring eleven more points in a row to push the lead to 34-20. In all, Charlevoix scored 23 straight points.

The game was over for all intentions and purposes from that point on with the only excitement of the second half coming during the celebration for Parrish's milestone.

"It is good for us to face those kinds of things," Haske said. "The second time around the league teams will be trying to figure out different ways to beat us. It's not an easy thing (playing against a deliberate offense). We usually like playing fast, but we were very patient defensively."

Scott Friske led the scorers with 16 points and pulled down eight rebounds. Parrish, Gowell and Jim Shepherd each had 13. Parrish also had eight boards, four assists and a career-high six blocked shots. Shepherd dished out six assists. Gowell capped another tremendous all-around performance with seven rebounds, six assists, three steals and two blocks.

On Jan. 25, Charlevoix visited an undersized and less experienced Traverse City St. Francis team and unlike the Kalkaska game, the Rayders never were challenged.

After both teams opened with cold shooting from the floor, the Rayders used a 12-0 run at the end of the first quarter and start of the second to take control. St. Francis was within five at 10-5 when a Gowell three-pointer, six points by Boss and a three-ball from Neil-Friske upped the lead to 22-5.

The Glads cut the lead to 22-8 but Boss scored four more and a Gowell steal and subsequent lay-up pushed the margin to 28-8. Following another St. Francis hoop, Jim Shepherd connected on a three-pointer and back-to-back jumpers to put the Rayders up 35-10 with 2:50 left in the half.

A small spurt by the Gladiators cut the half-time lead to 40-22.

The second half was all Rayders, however, as St. Francis was outscored 27-10 in the third quarter and 17-4 in the fourth. For the third time this season, the score was held down due to the 40-point running clock mercy rule.

Boss had 16 points and nine rebounds to lead Charlevoix. Shepherd netted 14. Scott Friske had 13, including ten in the third quarter. Gowell had nine points, seven steals and five assists Parrish had six points, six rebounds and four assists.

"I thought that with the exception of the last two minutes of the first half, that was one of our best defensive efforts," Haske said. "I was also very happy with the play of the last group (Spencer Bryan, Todd Carey, Donovan Swanson, Neil Friske and Travis Smith) in the fourth quarter. They played hard and upped the lead outscoring them 17-4."

The Rayders (11-0 overall, 6-0 in the Lake Michigan Conference) were dropped to number four in last week's Associated Press Class C poll despite losses by Detroit Rogers and Detroit DePorres. Kalamazoo Christian, last year's state champion and the last team to beat Charlevoix, is number three.

The Detroit News ranks the Rayders number two trailing only Detroit Rogers, whose only loss was to last year's Class B state champion Detroit Crockett.

Charlevoix hosts Benzie Central on Friday.

Ski team loses tiebreaker Jan. 21

The Charlevoix ski team squandered a 30-point GS lead and tied Boyne City with 69 points Jan. 21 at Nub's Nob in their second Northern Michigan Conference meet of the season.

The team then lost the tiebreaker to finish in second place behind Boyne City and just ahead of Traverse City St. Francis who finished a close third.

In GS, the highly touted Rayders were nearly flawless with Kelsey Barnard leading the way with a second place finish. He was followed by Roscoe Serrels third, York Smith forth, Chad Johnson fifth, Taylor Fisher nineteenth and Mike Dupuis twenty-second.

As stellar as they were in GS, the opposite was true in SL.

First seed Johnson had to hike his first run and despite having the second fastest second run time finished a dismal seventeenth. Smith and Serrels both had bobbles that cost them valuable time and they finished forth and fifth. Barnard, perhaps the best freshman in the state showed his high school racing inexperience and skied out of the course and was a DNF. Fisher was a DNF.

Depuis ran into some problems at the bottom and was thirty-fifth.

Coach Sue Miller was still optimistic about her team's chances of winning their conference, noting that all her team needed to do was to have one of her boys ski a clean run and they would win the meet.

Shulick admits he stabbed man at marina

TRIAL

Shulick's attorney, Arjen Greydanus, contends the high amount of alcohol he drank made Shulick unable to remember much of the night and unable to reason, therefore his actions do not support a first degree murder conviction.

Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur argues Shulick had enough time, and a clear enough mind, to think about the consequences of his actions before he stabbed Cook at the Charlevoix Municipal Marina.

Shulick's account of his trips to the Charlevoix marina, where Cook's boating party was staying that night, were sketchy.

He said on his first trip, he heard voices down by the marina and thought it was a good chance to make new friends. Once down at the marina, he said he didn't remember how he got on one of the boats in Cook's group.

However, Shulick said someone asked him if he had any drugs and he responded that he did not. At that point, Shulick testified someone from the group said to him, "What good are you?" and he was told to leave.

Shulick said he felt rejected by this.

He admitted that he hit someone from the group as he was escorted down the dock. The man he hit from the party chased Shulick down and began to beat him up. According to previous testimony, the fight was broken up by Cook.

On his second trip to the docks the boating party was at, Shulick was seen at the end of the dock dumping out the contents of a metal canister.

Shulick said he did not know why he decided to go down the same dock. After he heard the group telling him they were going to call the police, he said he left.

Shulick said he was not sure how he got back to his apartment on Antrim Street after this second meeting. He said he remembers being in his apartment, then being outside at the docks again.

He was going to the boats a third time to apologize, but took an 8 inch butcher knife with him. Shulick said he had the knife in case the group assaulted him.

Once back at the boats, he met up with Cook who told him all was forgiven. However, Shulick said he got into another argument and remembered he had a knife and put it in his hand.

In cross examination, Kur had Shulick hold the knife to show jurors how he stabbed Cook.

"At the time, I didn't even feel I struck anything with it. I remember having it out in front of me. I didn't know if I stabbed him or caught his coat," he said.

Shulick said he heard Cook scream as he was running away from the marina back to his apartment.

Once back at the apartment, Shulick remembered screaming that he thought he stabbed someone.

"I can't even tell you what I was thinking. It didn't even seem like it was me. It was like I was watching T.V. and I was witnessing that," he said.

The next morning, Shulick said he thought he had overreacted the night before and did not actually hurt Cook.

> "I never wanted to kill him. It never crossed my mind that I could be capable of that."
> Thomas Shulick,
> during his testimoney on killing Scott Cook

When asked why he hid in the bathroom when the police came to his apartment after the stabbing, Shulick said he thought it was about a separate incident the previous summer when he cut a tree down in a state forest.

It was only after he turned himself into the police on April 30, that he learned he killed Cook, Shulick said.

"I was overcome with shock. I couldn't believe it," he said.

Kur gave Shulick a picture of Cook, who he said he did not recognize from that night.

"I don't know faces from that night. I did not recognize anyone that testified against me," Shulick said.

Kur asked Shulick what Cook did to deserve being stabbed by him, to which Shulick replied, "Absolutely nothing."

Kur questioned why Shulick had such good memory of some details of the night, but not others. She also questioned why Shulick wrote in a letter to his girlfriend that whatever he did, he did it in self defense, but was not claiming self defense in the trial.

Shulick said he wrote that because he did not want his girlfriend to know he "attacked someone."

"I just wanted to put myself in a good light with her," he said.

Kur responded, "If you lied to your girlfriend, why is it you want the jury to believe you now?"

Shulick answered, "I don't love the jury members like I love my girlfriend. I didn't want her to think I was this horrible person."

Previous testimony from the week described Shulick as a non-violent person.

East Park ice rink plans cancelled due to weather

RINK

Alvin "Butch" Russell, Charlevoix mayor and DDA member, agreed with Wallace.

"I feel this is an awful waste of money this late in the year," he said.

A few minutes later, Barron made the motion to officially call off East Park ice skating rink efforts for the 2001-2002 winter and John Taylor seconded the motion.

After the motion was unanimously passed, Taylor discussed the future possibility of locating an ice rink in East Park.

The initial thought behind constructing the rink in East Park this year was to generate business for downtown merchants and to use this winter as a test run. The DDA was looking to see if an ice rink is something to be included in East Park renovation plans.

Taylor said the DDA did learn something this year.

"I think we have already learned we can't depend on the weather," he said.

Taylor mentioned the possibility of implementing an artificial rink in the future and Wiesner said there may also be a possibility of a portable, artificial rink.

All agreed it would be nice to have a functional rink in place in December which will most likely mean any future East Park ice rink will be artificial.

"This will give us more time to plan music and lights and all the things we want to go with it too," Wallace said.

Man arrested for alleged telephone harassment

After a three week joint investigation, detectives with the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office and the Charlevoix City Police Department have arrested an Antrim County man for allegedly making harassing telephone calls.

Chad Michael Collins, 19, of Ellsworth has been arraigned in Charlevoix County's 90th District Court for multiple counts of making harassing telephone calls and has been released on bond.

Investigation found some victims received up to 100 calls to their residences during early morning hours in January, the sheriff's office said. One victim had received more than 30 calls in less than one hour.

Investigation showed that all but one victim was chosen at random, the sheriff's office added.

What an athletic trainer does for your children

JOELLE

The athlete often feels most comfortable with the ATC they have worked with throughout the season.

It is not a matter of who went to school longer or who is more qualified, it is about whose responsibility at that moment it is to care for the injured athlete.

So to help you understand what goes on out there on the court and why it may take so long, I'll let you in on the ATC's role.

Upon initial arrival to the athlete the first priority is:

1) Clear the scene — The only people that should be there is the ATC, one coach, and in serious cases, the athlete's parent. All other people should be removed from the scene by the Athletic Director or coach.

2) Assess the scene — Check athlete for ABC's: airway, breathing and circulation. Determine possibility of head and neck injury and act accordingly.

3) Calm the athlete down — The athlete must be calm enough to tell you where they are hurt and answer questions. A quick history of what happened can make a determining factor in the degree of injury. The ATC should be the only person speaking with the athlete. Too many people at the scene may confuse the athlete.

4) Begin an evaluation — A brief evaluation must be done by the ATC to determine the severity of the injury and whether the athlete can be moved off the court safely or if the athlete must remain stabilized and secure until more details are known.

5) Activate EMT service — If potential of any neurological involvement with the head or neck, the EMT service is activated by orders of the ATC only. The ATC will direct others at the scene and will stabilize the cervical spine.

6) Special tests and continued evaluation — If a head or neck injury is not an issue the evaluation will continue. The ATC will continue with evaluating the involved area and uses special tests to determine the severity of the injury. These tests can determine the degree of a ligament tear, muscle strain, or a potential fracture or dislocation.

7) Splinting and Immobilizing — If a potential fracture or dislocation is evident, the athlete will be splinted on the court or field to assure safe removal to the sidelines, in most other minor cases the athlete is helped to the sidelines, assessed, and proper care is administered at that time.

8) Follow up care — After a full off court evaluation is completed, the ATC determines the next step based on severity of the injury. An X-ray, physician visit or referral to an orthopaedic specialist may be necessary. In most cases, the ATC will give the athlete and parent home care instructions and request a follow up evaluation the next day at the school. In addition, exercises and rehabilitation may be needed before returning to sport. The athlete may begin a strengthening program at the school under guidance of the ATC.

9) Return to sport — The ATC is the person who determines when the athlete is ready to return to the sport. Whether they return after half time or they will be out for a week, it is the ATC's decision unless the athlete has seen a physician who may have already advised the athlete on when they can return. The athlete should still follow up with the ATC to be directed on specific exercises for strengthening and proper preventative procedures that should be taken.

10) Communication — The last step after an injury, is to make sure all parties involved are comparing ankles to ankles, not ankles to necks. The ATC will explain the injury and the process of healing and advise a plan of action for the athlete and parent to follow. This will assure a safe and quick recovery if all parties understand and know what to expect when an athlete is injured.

To sum it all up, a Certified Athletic Trainer is trained to handle any injury on and off the field and if the injury is beyond our scope of expertise, we call for assistance. Our duty is not only to care for the injured athlete, but to prevent injuries, rehabilitate injuries and equally important, to educate the public about who we are, and what we do.

Charlevoix home of two women's clubs earnings rate for all female clubs was 32.1 percent compared to all male clubs rate of 23.2 percent.

INVEST

NAIC attributes the trend toward increased profitability of women's clubs over men's clubs to a number of factors.

First, the group claims women's clubs tend to follow NAIC's long-term consistent investment practices closely. The approach includes guidelines for setting up and running an effective club and guidelines for analyzing stocks and managing a portfolio.

"This approach has proven to be successful for millions of NAIC members since NAIC's founding in 1951, and seems to pay off for many women's clubs," the report states.

A second contributing factor NAIC points to is patience in the market which they say pays off when following a long-term approach to investing in stocks.

"Women's clubs tend to be more willing to ride out the rough times to realize a profit for an investment," it states.

A third factor the NAIC considers relevant is the trend for women to be purchasers of household goods and services.

"As the buyers of the household women may tend to be keenly aware of quality, fairly priced and competitive goods and services in the marketplace, including the companies that produce the goods and services," the report states.

NAIC expects the current growth trend of women's investment clubs will continue.

For more information about the NAIC, visit the group's web sites at, www.better-investing.org, www.naicstock-service.com or www.oysa.org.

The next meeting of the Charlevoix Women's Investment Club will be at noon Feb. 16 at the hospital.

The next meeting for the Edward Jones women's investors group is at 6 p.m. Feb. 5 in the basement of Village Inn Pizza in Charlevoix. For information about this club contact Chowen at 237-0643. The Edward Jones club still has space available.

All women investment clubs are gaining in popularity. Above, some members of the Charlevoix Women's Investment Club got together at Grey Gables for their Christmas celebration. Mackinaw reports no problems with turbines

DEBATE

Ferguson and Kiteley said they are both in favor of green power, but the proposed location just isn't the place for the turbines. They said by allowing the generators in the rural area the township board would be trading one form of pollution for another.

But, Smiley said only one resident in Mackinaw has raised a legitimate concern.

He explained that during a storm in early December a nearby resident could hear the blades moving from inside their home. And, based on evidence the company has gathered, residents shouldn't be able to hear the windmills from inside their homes.

Smiley said his company is currently conducting studies to see what happened that night and the preliminary thought is there was excessive ice on the blades.

"This was one occurrence, but it's an important issue and we are taking it seriously and trying to detect the cause," he said.

Schnell said initially, Mackinaw City residents were inquisitive because they didn't understand the purpose of the windmills.

Some of the questions he fielded included whether or not energy could travel off the tips of the blades and cause birth defects. Other questions concerned whether or not the structure could fall and cause damage.

Mackinaw City's zoning ordinance answered the fear of the structure falling on nearby homes. The ordinance requires a safe zone be maintained around the area. And the area where they are located has been fenced off.

The residents who heard the windmill that December night live 960 feet from the closest wind turbine generator.

The Eveline Township proposal would also maintain between 900 and 1,000 feet of distance between the windmills and the nearest structure.

Smiley also spoke to fears of the towers tipping.

"If they do fall, and that is a remote chance, they fall down on themselves (collapse). It's not like nuclear power; if something goes wrong with these it is very unlikely that it will affect anyone," he said.

Schnell said one or two people thought the turbines would obstruct the view and two men in the St. Ignace area are opposed to them. But all in all they have been a blessing.

As for the concern about eye pollution, Schnell said this is also not the case.

"We have had a lot of people, more than expected, commenting on them. The residents seem especially proud. They have come to me and said how they love the way they look and love the fact that the village is part of the high tech transition to a renewable energy program," he said.

"People are excited to be doing an enormous part to bring a green power project to the area."

When asked if he would go through with the project again if given the chance, Schnell said, "There's no doubt about it. Everybody here is very excited."

The generators are also giving the city a chance to tout its stance on the environment as passersby are stopping in Mackinaw City and inquiring about the turbine generators with area merchants. The village has created a windmill brochure to be made available at area businesses.

Schnell said the number one motivation for bringing the wind turbine generators to the village was providing renewable energy. He said with the change in power sources and the black out problems in California last year village administrators wanted to make sure power costs in the future were predictable.

In terms of maintenance, the towers are two million dollars to build and are checked on every two months to ensure the bolts and the turbine energy are functioning properly.

Schnell said the electric production the Suttons Bay energy company estimated the two towers would generate is exceeding their predictions. The Mackinaw City site had a test tower up for six to eight months prior to constructing the towers.

This same test tower is what is currently being debated in Eveline Township.

Schnell said he sees several benefits that the windmills have brought to the city. These include: village pride, financial gains for the village and increased tourism.

Bay Windpower is currently paying the village of Mackinaw City $2,400 a month per tower.

The next Eveline Township Board meeting when the special use permit for the anemometer tower will be discussed is Feb. 12 at the township hall, 898 Advance Road North. This tower will determine if a wind turbine generator will even work on the proposed properties in Eveline Township.

The proposed properties for the seven generators are located near the intersections of Brock, Ferry and Shaw roads.

If the proposal for Eveline Township is approved, the electricity generated would go to the Consumer's Energy Green Power Pilot Program.

Users who operate half of their household or business using "green power" will pay an estimated $7.50 more a month and those who use all green power will pay an estimated $15 more each month.

Use these tips when on the ice this winter

ICE

pulling you back onto solid ice.

• It is a good idea to utilize the buddy system. Having someone else with you increases your chances of survival if you should get into trouble while out on the ice.

What to do if a companion falls through the ice.

• Don't panic. Keep a safe distance away and take whatever action you can, without leaving the person, to get professional help. Yell or call 9-1-1 on your cell phone.

• Do not approach the hole and attempt to help the person. You may fall through and become a victim, as well. Instead, use some item on shore to throw or extend to the victim — here's where the rope in a survival kit becomes handy — to pull them out of the water. If a rope is not readily available, you can use anything else that will allow the person to hold on as you assist them out of the water.

• Even if a victim seems fine after they are rescued, seek medical assistance immediately.

What if you fall in?

• Don't panic. Remain calm and turn toward the direction you fell in from. Then, try to push your body against the solid ice still in front of you by kicking your feet. If the ice in front of you breaks, repeat this method until you reach ice that will support your weight. Once you are lying on the ice, do not stand — roll or crawl away from the hole.

• Once you are free from danger, try to get dry and warm and seek medical attention as soon as possible.

The tale of the tree

At right, Charlevoix resident Clayton Smith stands next to a damaged tree at the Barnard Methodist Church on Barnard Road.

According to Smith, the story of this tree is an interesting one. The following is the tale of the tree in Smith's words:

"This happened in the spring of 1928."

Michigan Agricultural College, long before it became a university, sent out agricultural teachers from the Extension Department to help farmers improve their farming operations."

These meetings were held at township halls or granges. The Barnard meetings took place at the old grange on Barnard Road."

Dick Paddock, who lived on the farm now owned by Tom and Ardeth Wieland, drove to the meeting with a pair of mules pulling his sleigh. He tied the mules to a small maple tree near the Barnard Methodist Church across the road from the old grange."

Across Klooster Road from the church was the Barnard School. From my seat inside the school I could see the mules. It was the last of February and a bit of sweet sap was running down the tree trunk. The mules discovered the sap and began to chew at the tree bark to get more."

The injury to the tree trunk almost killed it. As it happened, the injury caused a large burl to form like a scab over the wound. The tree's growth was stunted but it lived on until the summer of 2001."

Burls can be cut from the tree where they form. Depending on the inner condition of the burl, decorative bowls can be made by woodworkers who specialize in that craft."

Funding for Wharfside found

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The last pieces in the city of Charlevoix's Wharfside project funding puzzle recently fell into place, just in time to close on the property sometime this week.

But funding wasn't the only barrier the project faced. Two of the four council members at Charlevoix City Council's meeting Monday, voted against the acquisition and demolition of the building.

The building is located just to the south of East Park on Bridge Street. Third ward council member Shirley Gibson and second ward councilman Gabe Campbell voted against it.

Gibson said she thinks the building should come down, but some of her constituents don't.

"These old people in Charlevoix don't want to see that building come down. They think it's a waste of money. I made a promise to go with the voters and I think that's what I have to do," Gibson said.

To acquire and demolish the Wharfside building will cost $1,235,000. The city plans to purchase the building by Feb. 7 and in the spring of 2002 tear it down to open up the view corridor in East Park. The park will later undergo a major renovation.

Third ward councilman Sherm Chamberlain, who motioned to approve closing on the building, said the benefits to the community far outweigh the cost of the project.

This was Chamberlain's first meeting back on council. He has been recovering from injuries he received when he was struck by a truck while walking across Bridge Street in November.

Chamberlain cited a survey conducted by a local environmental group that found the most popular activity in Charlevoix is scenic viewing.

"By buying the property and tearing down that building we are improving the aesthetic quality of Round Lake," Chamberlain said.

His motion was seconded by first ward councilman Bill Haggard.

Mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell's vote in favor of the project broke the tie.

Winter Disc Golf event to be at Mt. McSauba

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Instead of wasting time being disappointed the Super Bowl has come and gone, start planning for the first ever Charlevoix Disc Golf Ice Bowl.

This year crowds of Charlevoix area residents and visitors will gather at Mount McSauba in the middle of February armed with Frisbee looking discs.

From 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Feb. 16 at Mount McSauba, the Disc Golf Ice Bowl will feature "chuckers," experienced and inexperienced, young and old.

Ric Evans, local chucker, founder of the Charlevoix Area Disc Golf Club and coordinator of the Ice Bowl, explained that any style of play is acceptable throughout the day. Then, at 3 p.m. a doubles round will take place.

The cost to participate is $15 and proceeds from the event will benefit the Charlevoix Community Food Pantry. People who come to play or those who want to drop by are also asked to bring canned food for the cause.

"I think winter is a good time to do a food drive and a good time to get people out throwing Frisbees in the snow. We plan to collaborate our events (disc golf) with awareness raising," Evans said.

Art movies coming to Charlevoix movie theater

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

To meet a growing need, Charlevoix Cinema III is going to add some art to its movie choices.

The need came when some Charlevoix residents, tired of typical Hollywood films — police dramas, happily ever after romances and slapstick comedies — are ready for a change.

Many of these people have moved to Charlevoix from larger cities and have found the area is lacking in "culturally" oriented films. They come from cities where huge cineplexes featuring 25 films can vary what they offer a little more. And cities where small theaters specializing in art films can profit too.

Charlevoix resident Mary Adams moved to the area from Plymouth and has been working with Bill Supernaw, Charlevoix Cinema III owner, for two years to coordinate a multi-cultural film series.

After two years of hearing off the beaten path movie requests from Adams and others, Supernaw is bringing a culturally oriented film series to Charlevoix.

"People come to the Charlevoix area who have been exposed to films like this in the city. There is value to presenting these films here," Supernaw said.

Adams said, "I think it's important to bring this kind of culture to Charlevoix. Specifically because the closest art film theater is in Leelanau, you have to go there or down state."

At 2 p.m. every second Sunday of the month through June, Charlevoix Cinema III, located at 107 Antrim Street, will play an art film.

Adams explained these are not mainstream films. Supernaw laughed, "But, that doesn't mean they're weird; these are excellent pictures."

Supernaw said the difference for him as the movie supplier is getting his hands on films that small film companies made 50 copies of versus the 2,000 to 3,000 copies that are printed of commercial films.

Not only will residents and visitors benefit from the cultural exposure, but local non-profit organizations will benefit too.

Supernaw has agreed to donate $1 from each ticket sold to a local non-profit organization.

In January, 60 people turned out for a British romantic comedy about gardening, called Greenfingers. Proceeds from the showing were donated to the Charlevoix Area Garden Club.

The film to be shown at 2 p.m., Feb. 10, is Waking Life, an adult picture that won the award for best animated movie. Proceeds will go to the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

If enough interest in the series is shown then a Monday night showing may be added.

"I don't intend to sell out right away. In Suttons Bay (where a similar series was started) it started out small and grew as the word got out. Over 200 people are signed up for the series," Supernaw said.

The movie in March may be Amélie, best picture winner at the European Film Awards, Life as a House, The Closet, The Road Home or Himalaya.

"These movies have many socially redeeming qualities. People that see them talk about them two or three days after they see it as opposed to just while they are walking out the door," Supernaw said.

Supernaw is thinking about offering a cultural film pass for the five movie series next year.

Tickets for the film are $6.50.

Non-profit groups interested in benefiting from film proceeds can contact Supernaw at 547-2295.

The end of a project, the start of a new one

The results are in from last month's "What do you think?"

The question was: "What is your favorite winter activity and why?"

On this question, we received one response. This was from Alice Knott-Cunningham of Charlevoix, who writes: "There are some of us that don't ski or skate anymore, but find many activities, such as: Wonderful exercises and company at the Charlevoix Area Public Swimming Pool, many activities at the Charlevoix Senior Center, a Senior Bowling League at Paul Bunyan Bowling Lanes, volunteer work is fun and appreciated, Bible studies and activities at a church, there are also many book clubs around. I do believe we can all keep busy and also enjoy family and friends."

Because of the low response this segment has received since its inception, we have decided to do away with it.

However, we are working on a new segment for your enjoyment to be included monthly in the Charlevoix Courier. Since there are still a few bugs to work out in it, we are waiting to officially kick it off in the editor's column on this page in next week's edition.

What do you think?

But, to get it started we will give you a slight hint at it and ask for your help. We would like our readers to send us some questions they have on Charlevoix or its surrounding area. This can be something you have always wondered, but not known why or what it was.

Examples are: What is the Belvedere Club? When did Charlevoix get the nickname "The Beautiful?" Or, who is King Strang? You get the point.

Send them to the Charlevoix Courier at P.O. Box 117, Charlevoix, MI 49720; fax them to (231) 547-4992; e-mail them to charlevoixcourier@charlevoixcourier.com or drop them off at our office located at 112 Mason Street.

Next week you will see what we will do with them.

Meat isn't the only subject resident has knowledge on

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

I never expected to find such an interesting character behind the meat counter at Don's IGA!

Kris Daman has a bachelor of arts degree in anthropology from Indiana University, he is a writer, speaker and is passionate about his unusual hobby — sewing and beading Native American Indian artifacts by hand.

Past experience included working for 5 years at the Indianapolis Children's Museum, an interest that he loves to share with children in Charlevoix. He was invited recently to be a guest speaker at St. Mary's and is booked this spring to talk to Eric Lundteigen's third graders in Charlevoix. Kris is available to give "show-and-tell" talks in costume to varied groups in the area.

Kris showed me his large collection of hand-sewn pouches, a shooting bag for flint and bullets, a cow powder horn for gun powder, antique chaps and more. He has made hand-sewn original copies of Indian artifacts, such as a pair of red wool beaded leggings that were worn by both Indians and Frenchmen at Fort Michilimackinac. He has made a draw string leather deer hide pouch, trimmed with copper cones and fringe. The leather is first waterproofed with bear grease. He copied a heavy leather bag using antique beads from Murano, Italy, that Europeans used to trade for beaver skins with the American Indians.

How did Kris first become so interested in this unusual hobby? Kris explains that his father's ancestors are of French Canadian heritage and they maintained the old customs of trapping furs.

He smiles when he recalls that his grandmother at age 92 was still trapping furs in the creek behind their house in Monroe, where the family lived. When Kris was 18, the family moved to Indianapolis, Ind. His parents now live in Petoskey, where his father is a retired engineer and his mother is a registered nurse for the Red Cross.

Kris already has a new project in mind; he is researching the art of native weaving and moose hair embroidery with natural dies, using porcupine quills and beads. He tells me there is an outstanding display of this material in the National Museum of Ireland in Dublin.

"In Ireland?" I ask. "How did that come about?"

It seems there was an Irish soldier, named Jasper Grant, stationed at Fort Mackinac who collected these artifacts. The family kept them for 100 years and finally donated them to the Irish Museum. Kris will gladly show you the photographs that he has collected for further study.

In the meantime, Kris is happy working at Don's IGA. He says it's fun! He enjoys talking to customers about the right cut of beef just as much as explaining how the Europeans traded wool for beaver skins.

Editorial response

Editor:

Having read your editorial in last Wednesday's paper, I began thinking about Groundhog Day. The real significance of coming out of a hole and looking around to judge future weather.

Driving out of our lane onto M-66, I visualized a large moving structure, more than 500 feet higher than my turn to town.

Vision seems to be a shortcoming of our editor. Only a visual view of the proposed wind generators at the specific location can truly demonstrate the impact of the structures on our entire community.

Please visualize an orange weather balloon on a 400 foot line, flying above the proposed wind generator site. There is more than one kind of green power .... money.

The problem of turbines

Editor:

You are correct — you don't get it. In your editorial of Jan. 30, you claim that farmers are asking to place wind turbines on their land to save their farms. The landowners that have requested this special use permit, among them Barney and Dawson Way, do not farm their land. At most, hay is harvested and horses are boarded. Farms do not lie in the balance here.

You stated that these machines are more pleasant than an industrial park. I did not buy land across the street from industrial zoned property. These turbines are an industrial and commercial development designed to generate electricity for sale.

These 392-foot structures could be set only 400 feet from my property line.

You listened to them in Mackinaw City. Imagine seven larger ones spinning in your front yard, 24 hours a day. Magnify the noise you heard by three-and-one-half times — though the calculation is not that simple — and consider the ceaselessness of it as you lie in your bed at night.

Put lights on them that strobe as the blades rotate.

Picture the morning sun streaming through windows and add the unending flickering shadows from which you cannot escape. Imagine the setting sun being reflected back, not in beautiful pastel shades but in annoying flashes of light.

Environmental issues are crucial, but so are property owners' rights. I have invested much in my land. I would agree to uses that fell within the agricultural zoning code. This does not. The property value of the homes in the adjacent areas would plummet. Homes would become unmarketable. These turbines should be placed in an area where people can choose to live in close proximity.

Wind power is wonderful, but in the words of another group that is concerned by conditions created by turbines, this is misplaced wind power.

Speak to others in St. Ignace. There are more than two people opposed there. Speak to others in Mackinaw City who have not found a source of income through the turbines. One Mackinaw City resident has agreed to be contacted regarding the sound he has to put up with inside his home, even separated by a stand of trees.

This project, in my opinion, is not motivated by altruism or ecology but by greed. Apparently the landowners could gain as much as $400/month/turbine. What will they give me when I need to sell my house and no one wants to buy near seven monsters as high as the stacks at Medusa?

And what about Bay Energy Windpower? I know that Steve Smiley, the vice president, told me that I was the only one in the neighborhood opposed to this project. I soon discovered that all of my neighbors are opposed. Was he trying to make sure that we did not become empowered by our common goal? He jokingly commented that I could put up a lemonade stand in front of my home to make some money from the gawkers that will be drawn to my neighborhood.

And yes, Jeremy. I would hate to see the two sand hill cranes that flew over that field run into turbine blades.

Do you get it now?

Support turbines

Editor:

I support the idea of wind turbines. I was involved in the solar energy "boom" of the 1970s when oil had its first "spike up." Solar has its merits, but wind seems to have even more; particularly "Up North" here. Sunshine is not usually one of our assets for much of the year, due to lake effect snow, rain and clouds. However, the wind is here rain or shine. If the life cycle cost and payback for wind turbines works out better than burning Arab oil at today's low prices, I can imagine that it will be an even better deal when we can no longer get Arab oil for "love nor money."

Many folks seem to look nostalgically on the old Dutch windmills — take Holland for example. Why not love the modern day versions for their sleek appearance and good stewardship of the Earth's resources?

Maybe we could put several of them on the top of Mt. McSauba to pay for lights, making snow, running ski tows, among others. I'll have to look at them out of my windows, but that is OK with me. The lights and snow making now has much more of an impact on the neighborhood than the turbines would.

Problems with sewer idea

Editor:

Robert Novak said, "Many evil things have started out as something beautiful." Recent developments concerning the school sewer construction point this out. The Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) was not "pressured" in its findings. It responded objectively to a blatantly oversized sewer system proposed by the city/school. The DEQ did nothing but its job by making public record of the very obvious fact that the sewer is designed to support something much larger than an out of town high school.

I am now amazed to find that my property and family seem to have become an entity of the school system. Since the sewer is being built for the school, by the city, using money that has been paid for school taxes, then my family and the other residents of Marion Township who reside between Veenstra and Ferry roads must be part of the school. There is no other explanation since it was said in the Jan. 16 edition of the Petoskey News-Review that "the sewer will eventually extend to Ferry Road." I don't remember an extension of the school sewer ever being discussed; the sewer serves the school, therefore we are part of the school.

A recent report stated several in town schools are in direct proximity to contamination. Charlevoix Public Schools deny this. Fine and good. However, during the course of inquiries by the Charlevoix Library Board into the possibility of using the Charlevoix Middle School after it was closed, the school system stated categorically that the site was a "brownfield" and could not be used. It seems that the Charlevoix Middle School is "selectively contaminated" depending on who is asking the question. Exactly what is planned for the middle school location? Since this report was published, I wonder all the more why the school did not publish the results of soil surveys from the construction site? The best way to resolve any question is total disclosure. Especially with the great risk of cancer causing agents in old farm land.

Finally, the construction site contains the remains of the Currier farm, not much more than a bunch of very unstable foundations and some very deep footings. Any curious student could get a lot more than reckoned for by exploring these rotten old grounds. Removing them would seem to be the only bright side to the whole construction project. They are a danger and something needs to be done to cancel the risk they pose.

Joseph F. Seidel
Marion Township

(Editor's note: Joseph F. Seidel is also the Marion Township representative on the Charlevoix Library Board. According to Charlevoix Superintendent John Sturock and Library Board president Rick Brandi, the Charlevoix Middle School is not a "brownfield" site.

Sturock agreed that an extension of the sewer to Ferry Road has never been discussed.)

Thank you

Editor:

On behalf of the Marine Corps League, coordinating the Toys for Tots program in Emmet and Charlevoix counties, a heart-felt "thank you." Your generous donations from caring communities collected over 4,000 toys this past holiday season.

Without your support many families would not have had a truly joyful Christmas. A thank you to all the volunteers who spent many countless hours preparing bags and boxes for delivery on Christmas Eve to deserving children.

We of the Marine Corps League salute you. Semper Fi, always faithful.

Editor:

As a member of the Charlevoix Recycling Committee, I would like to thank the residents of Charlevoix County for so wholeheartedly taking part in drop-off recycling. It has been very successful in our first year and we are working on ways to improve and add to the program.

November and December were my months to supervise the Charlevoix site. I would like to thank the members of WATCH and several of the staff of Charlevoix State Bank. Not only did they do their own personal recycling, but they also let me know when bins needed to be emptied or when other attention was necessary to the site. Since this was so helpful to me, I would like to encourage other groups or businesses to volunteer to help with this supervision in Charlevoix and Boyne City. Please call Michele Hewitt if you have a group that would like to help in Boyne City (582-0335) or myself (547-2285) for Charlevoix.

We do have one area that needs more careful recycling. That is glass. At the present time, we may only take clear (not blue, green, brown, purple or green-tinted) glass. That is because we have no market for colored glass. Please help us in this area. We have not yet had any load of recyclables turned away and thus landfilled. We would like to keep it this way. Please, clear glass only.

Congratulations on a program that you have made work well.

Editor:

It was with dismay that I read about an upcoming "Ice Spectacular and Chili Cook-off" at Bay Harbor, in the Petoskey News-Review. While it was incredibly resourceful of them to use Mike Watts, who has been promoting these two hugely successful events in Plymouth for years, I am sorry Charlevoix didn't get to this first.

Crooked Tree adds new program, new staff artist

The Crooked Tree Arts Center will have a Children At The Easel Project and a regional artist has been added to the staff.

Jesse Hickman is the new visual arts education director for the arts center who will implement the project and develop hands-on activities at the arts center for the children of Charlevoix County and Emmet County public and parochial schools.

The project is a direct response to a dramatic increase in expectation from the public and parochial schools of Charlevoix and Emmet counties for quality arts programming at Crooked Tree Arts Center.

In 1992, CAT served an average of 400 students per year through its education programs for children. In 1996 that number reached 2,500.

During the 1997/98 school year, Crooked Tree Arts Center reached a total of 3,500 students. During the academic year 2000 - 2001, Crooked Tree Arts Center served more than 5,400 children.

Hickman will train Crooked Tree Arts Center's cadre of volunteers to assist the children through the hands-on experience during school tours at the arts center. The school tour consists of viewing the exhibition currently on display in the Arts Center's gallery and then creating a piece of original artwork in the Arts Center's visual arts lab by employing the same tools and techniques used by the artists whose works are on exhibition at the time.

Children leave the Center with a work of art of their own creation, under the guidance of a professional artist, at no cost to them.

The Buzzelli Family Charitable Fund of the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation has also contributed to this school gallery tour project. Art supplies for the project are key for the hands-on experience.

Funding provided by this gift will provide artistic opportunities for the children visiting the arts center.

The new project will allow Crooked Tree Arts Center to continue to grow both in the numbers of students served by the center and in the quality of the experience it can provide for young people in northern Michigan. Living four to five hours away from any major city makes traveling to a major metropolitan art gallery almost impossible for the children Crooked Tree Arts Center serves.

Crooked Tree Arts Center offers virtually the only exposure to the visual arts on a professional level many of our young people receive.

Arts education is critical to a child's development.

According to College Entrance Examination Board findings, students who are involved in the arts throughout their childhood and teen years, score 34 points higher on the verbal sections of the SAT and 18 points higher on the math section.

The arts not only educate, but also build self-esteem. Crooked Tree continues to help teach important life skills through its strong collaborations with the schools of Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

Crooked Tree Arts Center serves eleven school districts in Charlevoix and Emmet counties as well as several other, individual schools in Cheboygan and Antrim counties.

For more information regarding the arts center's programs, please call (231) 347-4337. The Crooked Tree Arts Center is located downtown Petoskey.

Jury deliberations delayed due to emergency

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Jury deliberations on the murder charges facing 22-year-old Charlevoix resident Thomas Aryon Shulick were delayed last Wednesday, until yesterday, Tuesday, when a juror had a medical emergency.

Charlevoix Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas said all of the alternate jurors in the case had been released the day before, leaving him with no other option than to delay until the juror in question was able to return. Once an alternate juror is released, they are no longer forbidden from reading about the case in the local media or discussing it.

A verdict was not available before press time.

Prior to sending the case to the jury, Pajtas ruled out the possibility of a manslaughter verdict. This limits its jurors options to murder in the first degree, murder in the second degree or Shulick can be acquitted.

To find Shulick guilty of murder in the first and second, the jurors have to determine that he intended to kill or cause great bodily harm to his victim.

Shulick has been charged with first degree murder by the Charlevoix County Prosecutors Office for the April 29, 2001 killing of Scott Cook, 24, of Elk Rapids at the Charlevoix Municipal Marina.

Shulick has admitted on the witness stand that he stabbed Cook that night.

Cook died later that day at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

However, Shulick's defense attorney, Arjen Greydanus, argued that Shulick drank an excessive amount of alcohol the night of the stabbing. He contends Shulick did not mean to harm Cook.

Intoxication is a usable defense for first degree murder.

Charlevoix Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur argues because Shulick went to his apartment on Antrim Street and retrieved an 8 inch butcher knife before returning to the marina and stabbing Cook, he had time to think about his actions.

Therefore, she says, there was premeditation.

Districts change, Neumann running for senate

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Redistricting that followed the 2000 census, moved Charlevoix County out of the 106th house district.

Andy Neumann

Charlevoix County's current State Representative, Andy Neumann, a Democrat, has represented the county in the 106th district for three years. He said Charlevoix County was transferred to house district 105 from district 106 because Charlevoix is a primarily Republican County and the party in power, the Republican party, is in charge of redrawing the district lines.

The 106th District was made up of Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Presque Isle and Alpena counties. The 105th district, which Charlevoix is now a part of, also includes Antrim and Otsego counties and most of Cheboygan County.

The local district change means Neumann won't be serving another term for Charlevoix County. But, he's made other plans anyway.

"I'm going to run for the Senate. I'm taking a leap of faith but good things come from leaps of faith," Neumann said.

"I think I can accomplish more good for the people of northern Michigan in the Senate, where I would be one of 38 senators instead of 1 of 110 state representatives in the house."

In November, Neumann will run in the 36th Senate District. Charlevoix County is in the 37th Senate District and is currently represented by Walter North whose term limit is up.

If elected to the Senate, Neumann plans to continue working on improving health care for northern Michigan residents. He also plans to try and bring back more money from Lansing.

While in office he said he has brought some of those dollars back. He mentioned helping to get funding for an East Jordan park and bike path and that he is very close to getting funding for an East Jordan economic development plan.

Neumann's other objective is to make sure northern Michigan residents have a voice.

"What's good for Detroit and Grand Rapids is not necessarily good for northern Michigan. We have different problems, different concerns and a different way of life," he said.

He wants to get to work on reversing the funding cut that took money away from northern Michigan road commissions.

"Those are big dollars we can do a lot with and I would like to get more done for northern Michigan. I've never fallen in line down here. I like to think of myself as the voice of northern Michigan," he said.

A non-partisan Washington web site about political affairs, www.emilyslist.org, explains how redistricting operates.

"The redistricting process is often very political, with both Democrats and Republicans attempting to influence the partisan leanings of each district," the site states.

"In most states, political considerations make redistricting a highly charged, partisan battle as each party seeks to draw lines that benefit its members and weaken the districts of members of the opposing party."

The new districts go into effect for the 2002 election cycle.

The legislature, which is made up of the Senate and the House of Representatives, is in charge of redistricting after every census. These updated census figures are used to adjust House districts across the nation.

Michigan is currently represented in the U.S. House by nine Democrats and seven Republicans.

Republican Governor John Engler has veto power over the congressional redistricting plan. He signed the plan in September after technical errors were corrected.

Democrats have since filed suit in federal court in an effort to have the plan overturned. The lawsuit claims the plan is an illegal partisan gerrymander — that is, the plan was drawn in a geographically inefficient manner for political reasons.

Reapportionment adjusts the number of seats allocated to each state based on population loss or growth. Some states lose seats while others gain seats and many stay the same.

Census figures for 1990, showed Michigan's population to be 9,295,297 residents. The 2000 census showed this number increased 6.9 percent to 9,938,444 residents.

However, Michigan's growth was less than that of other states, and Michigan is losing one of its 16 Congressional seats. Michigan has lost four congressional seats since 1980.

Art series to continue with The Lark Quartet

The Crooked Tree Arts Center will have the fifth presentation in the Virginia McCune Performing Arts Series with the presentation of The Lark Quartet, with Peter Schickele, at 8 p.m. Friday, March 8.

The concert will be at St. Francis Xavier Church in downtown Petoskey. This program will include works by Schickele as well as Schumann, Haydn and Mozart. Schickele will perform on piano as he accompanies the string quartet and will offer commentary.

Composer, musician, author, satirist - Peter Schickele is internationally recognized as one of the most versatile artists in the field of music. His works, now well in excess of 100, include symphony orchestras, choral groups, chamber ensembles, voice, movies and television.

From the creation of the musical score for the film version of Maurice Sendak's children's classic "Where the Wild Things Are" to his role as a satirist with his P.D.Q. Bach, Schickele has "a leading role in the ever-more-prominent school of American composers who unselfconsciously blend all levels of American music," according to John Rockwell of The New York Times.

Schickele's commissions are numerous and varied, ranging from works for the Saint Louis Symphony, The Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center, The Audubon String Quartet, the Minnesota Orchestral Association, and many other such organizations, to compositions for distinguished instrumentalists and singers. In his well-known other role as perpetrator of the oeuvre of the now-classic P.D.Q. Bach, Peter Schickele is acknowledged as one of the great satirists of the Twentieth century.

In the course of his career Schickele has also created music for four feature films, among them the prize-winning "Silent Running," for countless documentaries, for television commercials, for several "Sesame Street" segments, and for an underground movie that he has never seen. He has also created music and lyrics for "Oh, Calcutta" and has arranged for Buffy Sainte-Marie, Joan Baez, and other folk singers.

The Lark Quartet, in their sixteenth concert season, enjoys a reputation as an ensemble of the highest artistic integrity und versatility. They delight in "bending" the classical with their stylistic extremes. Diane Pascal, violin, Deborah Buck, violin, Anna Kruger, viola and Astrid Schween, cello, delight audiences with their performances.

Performing on tour throughout Europe, Asia, Australia and appearing at Carnegie Hall, Lincoln Center and the Smithsonian Institution, the Lark Quartet receives critical acclaim for their artistic energy. The quartet discography comprises of over one dozen recordings as well as a video documentary on PBS. The Lark Quartet resides in New York where it was founded in 1985.

Non-reserved tickets are $20 for adults and $8 students. Reserved tickets are $50 per person and include an invitation to meet the musicians at an Afterglow following the performance at the Perry Hotel.

The Crooked Tree Arts Center is located in downtown Petoskey at 461 E. Mitchell Street. The phone number is (231) 347-4337.

The box office is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.. Monday-Friday, and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturdays.

Beware of Carbon Monoxide poisoning

Carbon monoxide poisoning is a silent, creeping killer.

According to Joshua Meyerson, M.D., Medical Director of the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, carbon monoxide is treacherous because it is odorless, tasteless, and colorless.

"Carbon monoxide is dangerous because it acts so quickly, victims often have no warning of the gas' danger," said Meyerson.

About three-quarters of Michigan carbon monoxide deaths are caused by improper use of motor vehicles.

"Whenever you drive or park a vehicle with the engine running, carbon monoxide goes with you," said Meyerson.

He suggests following this list of precautions:

- Check exhaust systems regularly, especially in areas when salt and chemicals are used on ice and snow.
- Only work on a running engine in a properly vented area. Winds can blow carbon monoxide back into a garage.
- Shut the engine off when sitting in a parked vehicle.
- Keep tail pipes cleared of snow, especially when parked or stuck in the snow.

"If you become sleepy while driving or parked, the cause could be carbon monoxide," Meyerson said. "Stop at once. Get out and breathe fresh air. With the window open, drive to the nearest service station and have the vehicle's exhaust system checked."

There are many other sources of carbon monoxide besides vehicles, such as gas-powered equipment such as lawn mowers, snow blowers, charcoal grills, heaters (natural or bottled gas), camp lanterns and stoves.

In addition, gas fired appliances-furnaces, refrigerators, ranges and water heaters- represent a very significant potential hazard, if proper and regular maintenance is neglected.

"Recognizing the symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning and knowing what to do could save a life," Meyerson said.

If you suspect carbon monoxide poisoning, move the victim to fresh air. Call 911. Begin artificial respiration. Keep victim warm and continue artificial respiration until public safety personnel arrive.

If you have further questions about carbon monoxide poisoning, please contact a member of the Environmental Health Division of the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency (the health department) in your county.

Know the symptoms of Carbon Monoxide Poisoning. They are:

- Tightness across the forehead
- Throbbing headache
- Irritability
- Dizziness
- Weariness
- Weakness
- Impaired vision
- Loss of muscle control
- Nausea/vomiting
- Increased pulse and respiration
- Heart palpitations
- Unconsciousness

LETTER

Our location and downtown area are much more suited to these events and this is an older, and one would think, more established, retail district.

But with all the empty and papered store fronts a winter festival of any kind would be hard to pull off. I also look at all the retailers and restaurant owners that stay open, carrying more than their fair share of the burden, committed to the success of the whole as opposed to the one.

Are rents too high? Is there no break for leasees during the "slow season," so even an attempt can be made to stay open, if only on the weekends? A commercial site is only worth a business' ability to stay there and thrive. Too much turnover, too many t-shirt shops, the "Camelot" thinking that "it can't happen here" becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy.

Bluster all you want, the empty stores speak for themselves. This is a city that prides itself on its homes and their value. A weakened retail district weakens the economy of a city. I would think any citizen, part-time or full, would be watching this and I would ask that the landlords and Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce get behind their retailers and the business district 100 percent.

This winter a little warmer than last

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Snowmobilers patiently waiting for Charlevoix's Third Annual Snowmobile Ride-in will have to sit back and relax for one more year.

The ride-in, which has in the past had more than 150 participants, was called off early last week due to temperamental weather conditions.

"We've canceled the ride-in indefinitely. The idea was to get people into town and acquainted with Charlevoix and there really isn't enough snow to do that. We are planning to reschedule the event for next year and do it right," John Ferguson, a Charlevoix Snowmobile Club board member, said early last week.

But if next year follows the snowfall pattern of this winter and last winter, planning the ride-in won't be any easier.

According to the local weather station, located at the city wastewater treatment facility, as of Feb. 4, Charlevoix had 9 inches of snow on the ground, 4 inches more than last year on that day.

But, Charlevoix is currently 11 inches shy of last year's snowfall numbers at this time. To catch up and keep up could mean a lot of shoveling — we saw almost 2 feet of snow fall last year in February.

However, in spite of mid-January temperatures in the 50s, the area is averaging temperatures near what we experienced last year.

According to Jeff Lutz, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service's Gaylord post, in December of 2000 the average temperature was 20.6 degrees. This year we were just a little warmer at 30.1 degrees.

In January of this year, things were a couple of degrees warmer than usual, but the Charlevoix area still maintained temperatures around 28.5 degrees.

Lutz said there is little the weather service is attributing the slight warm up to.

He said the temperature of the Pacific Ocean around the equator has been normal and is now beginning to increase. This warm up could mean an El Nîno winter for next year.

Lutz said El Nîno conditions tend to mean warmer, wetter winters than normal in northern Michigan.

> "The climate condition predictions agree with what the groundhog said, six more weeks of winter."
> Jeff Lutz, National Weather Service meteorologist

So far this year we have deviated somewhat from typical winter weather patterns. Lutz said normally in the winter there is low pressure in the upper atmosphere north of us or directly over us that pushes the jet stream south.

Lutz explained the jet stream is the dividing line between cold and warm temperatures.

But oddly enough, the jet stream has been north of us, meaning slightly warmer than usual temperatures.

"The jet stream has moved south and we're now in a more typical pattern — it's a little south and just over us. We are actually around normal for this time of year now," Lutz said.

He added, climate predictions for the rest of the winter are around normal with lows in the single digits and highs in the middle 20s and above normal temperatures south of us in Indiana and Ohio.

"The climate condition predictions agree with what the groundhog said, six more weeks of winter," Lutz said.

Volleyball team gets exciting win over Harbor

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

Momentum shifts were the key as Charlevoix posted an exciting 15-7, 4-15, 15-11 victory over Harbor Springs in volleyball action on Feb. 4.

"It was a great win for us. We had lost to them the first time we played," coach Liz Grunch said. "The first game we really came out strong and we picked it up again at the end."

The Rayders struck first, leading 1-0 and 3-2 behind the serving and kills of Swenor twins, Katie and Krista. Becca Kanine set up all three Charlevoix points.

Harbor Springs bounced back, though, taking three straight points for a 5-3 lead. Natashia Kleiber then scored on a pass from Kanine for a Rayder sideout. With Kelly Reid driving the Rams back with explosive serves, including two aces, Charlevoix rallied for seven straight points to take a 10-5 lead.

The teams wrestled for control of the game with five serving changes before Harbor scored twice more to cut the lead to 10-7.

Kanine helped regain the momentum for Charlevoix setting up Jenny Miller for a kill to give the Rayders the serve and then feeding Kleiber for another spike to put Charlevoix up 12-7. Kleiber wasn't finished, spiking Charlevoix to a sidcout, which led to two more points on Kanine serves for a 14-7 lead.

Harbor Springs fought off one game point, but another Kleiber kill gave the Rayders the serve. An unforced Ram error gave the game to Charlevoix.

The second game was all Harbor Springs as they tallied the first five points of the game. Two Reid aces cut the margin to 5-2, but the Rams then ran off three more points for a commanding 8-2 lead.

Charlevoix scored one, but Harbor pushed the lead to 10-3 before nine straight service breaks kept the Rams at bay. Twice Miller kills regained the serve for Charlevoix but the Rayders could not take advantage. Finally a Kleiber ace broke the deadlock and cut the lead to 10-4.

The Rams took the last five points of game two, ending it on an ace, however, with the score 11-4, Libby Withrow made three great plays in one of the match's longest rallies to gain a sideout for Charlevoix.

"We had good control of the ball, even in the second game," Grunch said. "We were still in control but our intensity dropped a bit. The two keys in volleyball are intensity and keeping the ball under control."

In the finale, Harbor scored first and increased their lead to 4-1 before Grunch called a timeout to calm down the Rayders. Out of the timeout, the Rayders came through with a sideout followed by a Kanine ace to cut the lead to 4-2.

Harbor retook the serve but couldn't score as Krista Swenor's spike gave the serve back to Charlevoix and Reid. The Rayders ripped off eight straight points behind Reid's strong serving. Withrow had three straight kills during the decisive Charlevoix surge.

Following a Harbor sideout, Withrow had another kill, then set up Miller to give the Rayders an 11-4 advantage. The Rams responded with two points to trim the lead to 11-6.

With Katie Swenor serving, the Rayders closed within one point of victory, with three straight points to make it 14-6. It appeared Charlevoix had won the match on a Withrow spike, but the point was waved off when the referees ruled she had touched the net.

Harbor Springs then staged a comeback, scoring five straight times to pull within 14-11.

A Krista Swenor kill finally ended the Rams' run to give Kanine the chance to serve for the match. Harbor returned serve out of bounds to give Charlevoix the victory at 15-11.

Miller and Kleiber each had 10 kills to pace the Rayders. Withrow had five blocks, Krista Swenor four.

Grunch pegged Reid and Miller as the team leaders on defense.

Kanine led the passing with a tremendous 33 assists.

"She leads our offense," Grunch said. "If she's on, we're on."

The Rayders (4-3 conference, 15-13-2 overall) travel to East Jordan Feb. 7 and to a tournament in Grayling on Feb. 9.

Ski team peaking with impressive performance

The Charlevoix High School Ski team appears to be peaking at the right time with the regional and Lake Michigan Conference championships coming up next week.

On Monday, Jan. 21, the Rayders had an impressive performance in the 14 team Traverse City Invitational by winning the morning's GS event.

They didn't fare as well in the afternoon's SL and ended up finishing third behind Petoskey and Glenn Lake.

They were lead by Roscoe Serrels who was fourth in GS and sixth in SL. York Smith finished third in GS and eleventh SL. Chad Johnson was eleventh GS and seventeenth SL, Taylor Fisher ended up thirty-ninth GS, Mike Dupuis was fifty-third GS and sixty-third SL and Lexi Wilson, competing in first race of the season, was fifty-fifth in GS.

Coach Sue Miller felt good about the third place finish that featured the best field of the year, considering she was without Kelsey Barnard who has been on the disabled list due to the flu.

In Thursday's, Jan. 31, conference meet, the Rayders dominated the competition with Smith, Johnson and Serrels leading the way.

The trio occupied second, third, and fourth places on the leader board in both events.

Fisher had his best performance of the season finishing twelfth in GS and SL.

Miller was exuberant over Fisher's skiing and feels his improvement may be the missing link from last year's state runner-up team.

Rayders remain unbeaten

By ALLEN TELGENHOF

It was business as usual for the Charlevoix Rayders Feb. 1 as they stomped visiting Benzie Central, 83-36.

The win upped the Associated Press number four ranked Rayders' record to 12-0 on the season.

"We've been emphasizing consistency on defense," coach Keith Haske said. "We want to make sure we have a consistent defensive effort without gaps where we let teams get good shots. I thought for the most part, we did that."

The win marked the second straight game in which a 40 point lead during the game kicked in the Michigan High School Athletic Association mercy rule mandating a running clock for the rest of the game. The Rayders have forced four running clocks this season, twice against Benzie as well as against East Jordan and Traverse City St. Francis.

Basketball team still on top

BASKETBALL

Charlevoix has won 18 straight conference games, 17 straight home games and 32 of their last 33 games.

Their average score this season has been 82 to 49. The closest game of the season was the opener that the Rayders "only" won by 15, 80-65 against Suttons Bay.

It seems like it might be difficult for players to get motivated for these mismatches, but Haske said there is one factor that always motivates.

"They want minutes," Haske explained. "They know if they want to play more they have to go out and play hard or there is someone else ready to take their spot. I've never known a player who wasn't motivated by playing time."

Six foot, 8 inch senior forward Scott Parrish led the way with 20 points, eight rebounds and three blocks. Jim Shepherd poured in 19 points. Rob Boss added 10 and sophomore Scott Friske had eight.

Pat Gowell dished out seven assists while Ryan Rafacz keyed the defense with five steals.

Charlevoix's junior varsity team ran its record to 11-1 with a 68-61 win. Bryce Daly led the Rayder scorers with 22. Ryan DeYoung added 16.

The Rayders host East Jordan Friday, Feb. 8 for a homecoming contest. Charlevoix traveled to Harbor Springs Tuesday, Feb. 5 but results were unavailable at press time.

Firefighters put out fire at Chip

Charlevoix Township Firefighters were called around 7:30 p.m., Feb. 1, to put out a fire in the boiler room of the Chip Counseling Center, located at 6777 US-31 South.

Curt Thompson, Charlevoix Township Fire Chief, said a local man, Ken Weller, happened to notice an unusual amount of smoke coming out of the building's chimney. Upon investigation, he found a fire had started.

Thompson said the fire ignited the floor boards of the room and made a "pretty good hole."

Firefighters had the fire out in 10 minutes and were on scene for an hour.

Scott Hickman, executive director of Chip Counseling Center, said the fire melted the facility's phone system, ruined the heating system and damaged the floor.

He added that there is smoke damage to the facility that also needs to be addressed.

"We are in the process of getting the building repaired. But, I've never done this before and I don't know how long the insurance will take," Hickman said.

For those in need of Chip's service Hickman said to call the counseling center's Petoskey phone number for assistance (231) 347-3928.

Chip Counseling has operated from the location for four years.

Chip Counseling was started in the fall of 1978 by Christiana Ransom who passed away last year.

Ordination for new Safe Harbor pastor

Safe Harbor Baptist Church, located on Old US-31 South, will have ordination for its new pastor, Carrol (Pete) Aronson at 3 p.m., Feb. 10.

Morning worship will begin at 11 a.m. followed by a special potluck dinner before the ordination service.

Pete and his wife, Patty, have attended Safe Harbor for several years.

The pastor has served as a deacon and has been in many other leadership roles. Patty teaches Sunday school.

Presently, Pete is continuing his study of theology in Grayling.

Change of command

At a recent change of command, newly appointed commandant Mitch Moran (left) was congratulated by fellow Marine Corps. League member Russell Bolt. Both Marines are from Charlevoix and have been actively involved in the recent Toys for Tots drive this past holiday season. Man injured in auto accident on Jan. 22

A 24-year-old Boyne City man was injured in a one vehicle rollover accident around 4:40 p.m., Jan. 22 on Boyne City Road near Brown Road in Hayes Township.

Aaron Hamilton, 24, of Boyne City, was traveling westbound on Boyne City Road when he rounded a curve and hit some black ice. Hamilton attempted to slow down but lost control of his 1991 Dodge van, crossed the centerline and rolled over hitting several trees.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater was in the area and witnessed the crash.

Lasater gave Hamilton immediate aid. Hamilton was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by the City of Charlevoix's Emergency Medical Service, where he was treated for a head injury.

Charlevoix Township Fire Department was called to the scene for a fire in the engine of the van.

Lasater advises that Hamilton's seat belt greatly reduced his injuries and possibly saved his life.

City wanted to close on Wharfside yesterday side items at the meeting which allow the project to move forward.

It agreed to accept a challenge grant from the Frey Foundation, it authorized Russell and city clerk, Liz Gooch, to enter into a donation agreement and authorized Russell to execute any closing documents on behalf of the city to acquire the building.

City attorney Jim Young is leaving today for vacation, so the city hoped to be at Preferred Title, the company handling the title change, yesterday, finalizing the details. Whether or not closing took place Feb. 5 was unknown at press time.

The purchase of the Wharfside hinged on funding and for a few weeks the city wasn't sure where a hig chunk of the money was coming from.

Funding unknowns included gathering a private match for the $62,000 challenge grant from the Frey Foundation.

On Feb. 1 the city was informed the Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians awarded the city its full request, $29,000, for the project.

The Frey Foundation also accepted the Charlevoix County Community Foundation's $5,000 donation as part of the private match.

Three Charlevoix residents also went to work three weeks ago to raise money from residents and visitors to meet the Frey challenge.

Josh Barnes, a former city mayor, John Winn, a member of the Waterways Commission, and Mary Adams, a member of Keep Charlevoix Beautiful, teamed up and have raised $20,600 so far.

Barnes told council he's certain they will raise the remaining $7,900 to meet the entire challenge and could raise even more to offer the park "icing on the cake" amenities.

"The public wants to contribute; they want to see this park," he said.

But, Campbell has talked to some people who aren't in favor of the project.

"I appreciate the work of the people trying to raise money. But I think the building is too much money. The project will reduce the number of buildings available for rent which will raise the rent of other buildings. That's the reason I'm not for it," he explained.

However, the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce thinks the loss of the building could boost business.

Jacqueline Merta, Charlevoix Chamber President, said the chamber has discussed the project and feels the building should come down.

"In the past the chamber has addressed this issue and every time the chamber board has voted overwhelmingly in support of removing that building," Merta said.

She said by increasing the beauty and functions of the park, the business community may benefit.

The city also faced a second major funding scare with the Trust Fund Division of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

An appraisal of the property conducted by the DNR showed its worth to be $825,000. This figure fell over $300,000 below the city's appraisals.

The Trust Fund offered to award the project 40 percent of the purchasing cost but the low appraisal left the city $113,000 short.

The city appealed to the state to reconsider the appraisal and it did. The appraisal review increased the approved appraisal amount of the Wharfside building $175,000 to $1 million.

The Trust Fund has now agreed to give the project $400,000.

The donation agreement council approved was with Charlevoix Real Estate Com. Inc., owned by local Realtor Ed Amick, and with Bridge Street Bazaar owner Mike Balas. Amick has the listing on the Wharfside property through owners Rex and Ineke McCarthy.

The McCarthy's plan to buy the Bazaar building from Balas to relocate the stores, currently located in the Wharfside.

Prior to the increase of the DNR's Trust Fund donation Balas donated $40,000 to the project, Amick donated $22,000 and Charlevoix's Downtown Development Authority donated $31,000.

In lieu of the DNR's increase, under the donation agreement, Balas will donate $18,495, Amick will donate $10,172 and the DDA will donate $14,333 to the project.

The DNR Waterways Commission has also awarded the project a $500,000 grant.

The cost to the city of Charlevoix for the 2001-2002 budget period is $187,163. It will contribute an additional $43,500 in the 2002-2003 budget period for the demolition and prorated taxes for the building.

The city is paying 17.79 percent of the total cost of the project.

Chuckers to compete at Mt. McSauba event

DISC

Evans coordinated the construction of the McSauba course, which was built this summer, and also planned the first ever Charlevoix disc golf competition for the 2001 Venetian Games. Proceeds from the Venetian event were donated to the Charlevoix County Land Conservancy.

Ric Evans

Disc golf doesn't require a lot of equipment. All that it requires are a few discs.

"Bring new people who have never played before. This is a great time to come out and troop around in the snow," Evans said.

Mark Greyerbiehl, owner of Charlevoix's ACE Hardware has donated Ice Bowl golf discs for everyone who participates. And, students at Charlevoix High School have donated their time to help out the day of the event.

An Ice Bowl Awards Party will take place around 5 p.m. at the Flight Deck Bar & Grill. Prizes will be given for best score, worst score, closest to the pin and more.

Drop off locations for any nonperishable foods include: ACE Hardware, Citizens Bank located in downtown Charlevoix, Don's IGA, Olsens, City Hall, the Charlevoix County building, Harbor Health and Fitness and the Flight Deck Bar & Grill.

Those interested in sponsoring the Ice Bowl and people in need of information can contact Evans by phone at (231) 588-7114 or by e-mail at disc_chucker_ric@hotmail.com.

City rates to increase

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix's city administrators have proposed rate changes for the city's 2002-2003 budget that will impact everyone from boaters and golfers to those in a medical emergency.

City administrators have said the aim of the rate changes is to attempt to break even in those funds. The rates in question are proposed to increase.

The budget proposes to increase marina user fees 2.7 percent.

City treasurer Rick Brandi referred to the increase at Charlevoix's Municipal Marina as "standard."

He explained, Charlevoix keeps its rates in line with the maximum rate set by the Mackinaw City based Waterways Commission.

City Manager Mike Wiesner said the amount charged at Charlevoix's marina is generally in line with Mackinac Island's dock user fees.

"We are anticipating probably spending a sizable amount of money for renovations of the marina and we're going to need dollars," Wiesner said.

Mount McSauba's Day Campers will also pay more for the service. Last year, kid campers paid $65 a week and this summer it will cost $75.

Wiesner said the city's goal is to break even with its day camp program. But, even with the increase, the city is currently showing a $9,700 donation from the general fund for the camp.

Resident and non-resident municipal golf course season pass holders could pay more for their passes this year.

The budget proposes to increase single, adult resident pass fees $5 from $175 to $180 and passes for two residents $10 from $225 to $235. Resident family passes could go up $25 from $250 to $275 but student rates would remain unchanged at $75.

Single players who are non-residents may pay $5 more than last year, $280 while twosome out-of-towners will pay $10 more, $335. Families from out-of-town won't see the $25 increase local families will, if the budget is adopted.

The price for out-of-town families went up $10 from $375 to $385. Students from out of town seeking passes will still pay $100.

Single, resident, senior golfers age 60 and over will pay $5 more, $130, and Charlevoix seniors buying passes in doubles will pay $10 more, $185. Out of town senior singles will pay $5 more, $230 and those who buy in pairs will pay $10 more, $305.

Shulick guilty of murder in the second

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Thomas Aryon Shulick, 22, of Charlevoix, was found guilty of second degree murder Feb. 5, in the stabbing death of Scott Cook, 24, of Elk Rapids.

Cook was stabbed by Shulick on April 29, 2001 at the Charlevoix Municipal Marina. He died later that day.

In an interview after the verdict, Shulick's attorney, Arjen Greydanus, said he fully believed this was a manslaughter case and not a murder case. He pointed out that the jury had problems coming back with a verdict earlier in the day on Feb. 5.

The jury had asked Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas what they should do if a juror did not want to vote on a verdict on the morning of Feb. 5. Pajtas ordered them to continue deliberation.

Before sending the jury into deliberations the week before, Pajtas threw out the possibility of a manslaughter verdict, leaving jurors to consider murder in the first degree, second degree or an acquittal.

Residents argue to save Brookside Chapel

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Some Charlevoix residents are trying to keep the city from tearing down the Brookside Chapel, a concrete block building with a black pitched roof that sits in Brookside Cemetery facing Glen's Market on M-66.

The residents think it has historical value and should be kept.

The chapel's fate will be discussed by Charlevoix City Council, city administrators and the public at 5 p.m. Feb. 18 at the site of the chapel.

John Martin, superintendent of the city street department thinks it's time for the building to come down.

He explained the building's block is deteriorating, making way for water into the chapel's basement and its roof is rotting.

When asked whether he sees any reason to keep the building Martin said, "Absolutely none. Due to its deteriorating conditions there is no reason to leave it set and continue to deteriorate. And, there's no purpose for it anymore."

However, Charlevoix residents John Haggard and Cynthia Garland are among a group who would like to see the building preserved.

"It is in bad shape, but I believe, because of its age and historical value, it's worth saving. I believe it is the oldest city owned building and probably one of the oldest buildings in the city of Charlevoix," Haggard said.

"I'm in favor of moving it to the Catholic Cemetery if they are going to tear it down," he added.

Martin said he doesn't think the building could withstand a move.

The cemetery is city owned, but both Mike Wiesner, city manager, and Martin are unsure of the chapel's exact age.

Martin is aware of its former purpose. He explained that years ago the building was used to store bodies during the winter for spring burial.

He said funerals occasionally took place there too, but the building hasn't been used for funerals in almost 40 years.

The city once had a functional office in the building and used it for winter body storage, but recently built a pole building in the back corner of the cemetery for those purposes.

Martin said there is no reason to replace the Brookside Chapel, as the pole building has fulfilled its former purpose and burial procedures have changed somewhat.

"We don't store many bodies like we used to. We've been burying all winter long for the last few years. There's no reason to have that building for that purpose," he said.

The Brookside Chapel has not been used for body storage in two years.

The city has budgeted $10,000 in the proposed 2002-2003 budget period for the demolition of the chapel.

"The plan is to demolish it and then decide what will happen to that area. Maybe it will be grave sites or a park area within the cemetery," Martin said.

Those who attend the meeting, Feb. 18, will grapple with whether or not it's time for the Brookside Chapel to come down.

To get to the chapel, which is the meeting site, enter Brookside Cemetery from the entrance off M-66, then follow the road to the chapel which will be on your right.

Let's find the answers to those questions

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

Sometimes it is the little things that really bug us.

You know, those little nagging questions in the back of your mind. They are always there and never answered.

It could be a simple question about a strange car you saw the other day. Problem is, everyone you know seems to know all about it....but you don't. When the strange car drives by, they don't even bat an eye.

Or maybe the question is about that new saying your daughter keeps using. You know it is some new teenage slang for something. But, you want to seem cool and "with it" so you pretend you know what she is talking about.

Secretly, though, your brain is desperate for the answer to this puzzle.

Many times in our lives we find ourselves in these types of situations. What many people around us think is an everyday occurrence, some people may think is strange.

When I first moved to Charlevoix, there were many things that I thought were strange. I wondered why people lined the streets every year in May, happily planting flowers. I wondered why every day at noon, a shrieking whistle was blown.

It seemed to take me forever to figure out the answers to these questions. And for some, I don't think I have found an answer even now.

So, the other day I was thinking about these many questions. I realized that I probably was not alone in the community. I also realized that many of these people may not know who to talk to or where to go to find the answers to their questions.

As a journalist in Charlevoix, it is my job to know who to talk to. I have to know who knows the answers to my questions. These sources cannot be anybody. They must be someone who is respected on the matter at hand, therefore giving me the correct answer to the questions I have.

Many other people in the community may not have the time to find out answers, may not know where to start and may talk to the wrong person — you know, the guy at the end of the bar who makes up answers when he doesn't know the truth.

Then I remembered an idea that a reader had last summer. The reader, Dean Davenport, suggested that the Courier answer questions from other readers. He surmised that no one in town really has the resources to find out the answers to a variety of questions like the local newspaper.

What a great idea!

Therefore, I decided I could help my fellow members of this community by helping to find the answers to those questions burning in their minds. Plus, it would give me a chance to try a new section in the Charlevoix Courier that would increase the ability of the paper to interact with our readers.

What we will do is each month the staff of the Charlevoix Courier will find the answers to questions submitted to us by the community. This will be published in the new "Why is that?" section that will appear on page 6.

We are looking for those little questions you may have. Things you never really knew about and always wanted to. Things like: What is the average temperature for Charlevoix? How many people live in Charlevoix? What is the story behind the Venetian Festival? Why is Charlevoix called "The Beautiful?"

So, send your questions to the Charlevoix Courier at P.O. Box 177, Charlevoix, MI 49720; e-mail them to charlevoixcourier@charlevoixcourier.com; fax them to (231) 547-4992; call them in at (231) 547-6558 or just drop them off at the office located at 112 Mason Street.

You don't even have to sign your name. We may not be able to answer all of the questions each month, but we will get to them eventually. Sometimes it takes a little time to find an answer.

This new section will kick off next week on page 6.

Timely Grandparent Death

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

While being a teacher of college and university students for more than 35 years, I noted that the incidence of grandparent death during or immediately prior to major examination periods was remarkably high.

I only wish I had kept better records, since a search of the literature from the mortality and morbidity reports of the Centers for Disease Control shows no comparable phenomenon. I suggest that this new syndrome be labeled Timely Grandparent Death (TGD) and that detailed records of its incidence and especially its relationship to academic calendars be accumulated.

Since the health risk noted here is not yet reported as a disease category, incidence may actually be much higher than currently acknowledged. The greatest risk seems to be to people with grandchildren in colleges or universities. Onset has never been reported earlier than age 55 and it becomes increasingly more common over age 60. There is a strongly seasonal distribution of reported deaths, coinciding with major examination periods one-third or one-half way through college and university semesters and reaching a surprisingly high peak during final examination periods at those same institutions.

No reasonable explanation has yet been offered for the coincidence of senior citizen death with testing systems in American higher education.

Normal death rates for people in age groups from 55 to 70 with grandchildren who are attending college are exceeded by three or four times during these most dangerous seasonal time periods.

Remarkable, some individual students in the course of a four year academic career have reported the loss as many as six or seven grandparents to this malady, although I was unable to document the loss of more than two grandparents in any one course.

The incidence of Timely Grandparent Death (TGD) bears some relationship to prior grades in the specific course in which it is reported. Students with grades hovering near C- or D are far more likely to report TGD than are those with more robust academic records. Grandparent frailty and academic frailty seem to go hand-in-hand.

We can beat TGD without the necessity of major new research initiatives or federal funding. We can handle this ourselves.

Health advisory: If you have a grandchild in a college or university, for your own well-being and even for your survival, do everything in your power to assure that their academic performance is at its best. And watch out especially during those times when major examinations in important courses are due.

Keep track of your grandchild's academic progress, your life may depend on it.

Letters to the editor

Letter response

Editor:

I read the letter in the Letters to the Editor column (Feb. 6) from Joseph Seidel, and, while I agree that swapping the library for the old middle school would be a bad idea, it is doubtful that would ever happen.

No one in Charlevoix is ignorant enough to swap a perfectly good library building for a school that the school board, itself, says is beyond repair. The roof repair or replacement, alone, would cost hundreds of thousands of dollars.

That property would also require a full-time maintenance man and a security guard, given its size and isolation.

If this matter comes up, I believe everyone should let the council and the library know exactly how they feel.

The school board and administration should sell all of the property they own in that block where the school is located and build their office on the land they purchased on Marion Center Road.

Letters to the editor

Thank you Charlevoix

Editor:

The Charlevoix Snowmobile Club would like to thank our city residents, local businesses, city council, chief of police and John Martin at the department of public works for their support of the club's goal of making Charlevoix a snowmobiling destination.

The great snow during the holidays gave everyone a taste of how snowmobiling and its riders have a positive and respectful impact on our economy! Unfortunately, the snow has been less than adequate for our annual Ride In. Our sole intent was to have this event in East Park to promote our downtown's access and businesses. We made the decision that if we could not hold the event in East Park we would not have it. So, we are going to cancel the event for this year and plan for a bigger and better Ride In next year.

All the businesses and supporters who donated items for our Ride In this year, we thank you for your continued support and we will use the donations for next year.

I can attest to the power of educating riders about our town, its ordinance and our strengths for becoming a snowmobiling destination. I personally led groups of 4 to 15 riders to our downtown: Other towns told them that Charlevoix was not a snowmobile friendly town. Our easy access and wonderful variety pleasantly suprised them! I also took dozens of calls from Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin and Canada inquiring about our accommodations and trail system. Snowmobilers were amazed with our trail system and that they could get great accommodations that were of higher quality and at much better pricing than other snowmobiling areas.

Our club feels strongly that the majority of riders this year have been respectful and interested in spreading the word about our town and our trail system.

Numerous riders stated that they would be coming back to start their winter riding right here in Charlevoix. We as a community should be proud of our ability to provide the snowmobiling enthusiast a wonderful experience in our town! Our club and its members will continue to set the benchmark of a respectful snowmobiler to our city residents, city officials and local businesses.

We will forge ahead with our commitment to our sport and the respectful use of our town to provide positive impact on its economy and its newfound winter destination image.

Our club invites any and all input toward improving our sports image, safety and access to our trail system and town.

This year has put a damper on a great winter but our club will still be here promoting our sport and our great city!

Ride on in to Charlevoix the Beautiful!

Writer is a farmer

Editor:

In response to the letter last week from the lady who doesn't want to see the sun rise or the sun set through the blades of a wind generator:

Hey lady, you really stepped in a cow-pie this time.

The farms in question are not really farms and the people who take care of the land are not really farmers. And horses are not really farm animals and hay is not really a farm crop. And I don't really go out at 6 a.m. every day of the week and again at 5 in the afternoon, every day of the week, including weekends, holidays, rain, snow, hot, cold and blizzards, to feed and water my non-farm animal horses their daily ration of non-farm crop of hay. Speaking of which .... I don't really spend several days in July putting that non-farm crop of hay in the barn. That is 500 bales of hay at 50 pounds each, when it is 90 degrees outside, making it 120 degrees in the rafters of the barn where I have to stack the hay.

But I digress. This is about wind generators. We are farmers, but not recognized as farmers by you and the Internal Revenue Service. We have to do what we can to pay taxes on the land, buy hay and feed for the animals, and to keep our land. We can subdivide, sell off lots, build condos, put a modular every 50 feet or whatever else it takes. But then we wouldn't have any land left. So some of us choose to put wind generators out in back on a small corner and reap a few dollars that way.

So, you would agree to uses that fall within the agricultural code? How do pigs sound to you? No offense to pigs, I understand they are very trainable and only as dirty and smelly as their circumstances demand.

Amen.
Sue LaJoice

Charlevoix will start several capital projects

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Even though the city of Charlevoix has proposed to spend 25 percent less of its new budget on capital undertakings, it has a full capital projects plan in the works.

Two of the most costly ventures the city will undertake are the construction of an electric substation and renovation of city hall.

City manager Mike Wiesner commended the community on its forward thinking.

"The community if very much forward looking to have saved $1.6 million for the renovation of city hall. It isn't unusual to have to bond and pay for it over several years. We've saved money and will be able to pay for it in just over three years," he explained.

The city has proposed to budget $2,318,000 for the renovation of city hall during the aforementioned budget period.

City manager Mike Wiesner explained this project is taking longer than expected to get underway as the city grapples with the many variables involved, including relocating all city offices to the old post office on Mason Street.

The city plans to auction off the furniture currently in city hall and custom fit new furniture to the renovated building.

City hall will be renovated this year, while another old building will be torn down.

The city finalized its purchase of the Wharfside building located at 330 and 332 Bridge Street on Feb. 5.

Demolition of the building and paying prorated taxes will cost $43,500. The city plans to have the building down by Memorial Day.

The construction of the electric substation is underway on the north side of Charlevoix off Martin Road. This project was carried over from the current budget which will end March 31, 2002. Work done to the substation is 2002-2003 is expected to cost the city $955,000.

Wiesner said having a substation on both ends of town helps the electrical system operate more efficiently.

"The substation is a necessary element in getting electricity to the proper voltage for customers," he added.

Beyond the substation, continued improvements to city owned electrical lines will account for a lot of the city's capital spending. The upgrading of wires will cost $339,000.

Electrical lines will service new lighting on Michigan and Belvedere avenues. The city has budgeted $75,000 to light the two streets.

The city also has $288,700 budgeted for its sewer extension up Marion Center Road. Wiesner said this money will be paid back by the Charlevoix School District who the line will service.

New storm sewer lines will also be completed during the upcoming budget period. The city received a 48 percent match from the state to rebuild the Dixon Avenue storm sewer. The city has budgeted $150,000 for the project.

Wiesner said this item will complete the line that was started during the current budget period when the city ran the line from where Bridge Street intersects Dixon Avenue to Thistle Downs. The plan for this year is to run the line from Thistle Downs to Round Lake.

To do all this work the city will be replacing equipment in its motor pool. This will include a new back hoe, a new police car, a pickup truck, a loader and a snow blower. The city has budgeted $132,000 for these purchases.

A new ambulance will also be purchased for $92,000. Wiesner said he is currently looking into possible grants to purchase this vehicle.

Lake Michigan Beach and Depot Beach improvements were also carried over from the current budget. The proposed budget expends $365,000 for the Michigan Beach project and $181,600 for Depot Beach. Wiesner said the city is hoping for completion of the beach projects by

Charlevoix Senior Center to expand kitchen

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The kitchen at the Charlevoix Senior Center isn't meeting the center's demands — cooks are in a space crunch and Earl Muma, center director, is preparing for an expansion.

The expansion will add 230 square feet to the kitchen. The addition will travel across the back of the building stretching out 10 feet.

"It will make the food preparation easier because everything will be in the kitchen area. It will give us more room to move around and will make things more accessible," Muma said.

"We are serving more and more meals all the time," he added.

This will be the second construction project taken on, in an effort to make things more convenient for the kitchen staff.

The center recently consolidated several refrigerators used by the kitchen staff into a room, just off the kitchen, that was added on.

Muma said this, a second expansion, will increase the kitchen's storage space.

Before the project moves forward, the center will have to get a variance from the city of Charlevoix as the building will cross lot lines onto city property.

Muma has estimated the cost of the expansion to be $20,000. Great Lakes Energy has awarded the project a $10,000 grant and Muma plans to request additional funding from the Frey Foundation.

Anyone interested in donating to the project can call Muma at home, (231) 547-9658 or at the center (231) 547-5361.

Any funding the center receives beyond the $20,000 and any leftover funds will be used to create a covered entrance to the center.

Muma said the project planners' goal is to start the expansion as soon as the weather shows signs of spring's arrival. They hope to have the project completed by the end of summer.

Earl Muma points to where a new expansion at the Charlevoix Senior Center will be constructed. The project should start this spring. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Jury finds Shulick guilty of Cook's murder

"I fully believe this was a situation where the juror did not want to find him (Shulick) not guilty, but did also not want first or second degree murder," Greydanus said. "I believe if the judge had allowed manslaughter to stand, this jury would have come back with voluntary manslaughter at worst."

Greydanus said his client will appeal the verdict. However, he will not be the lawyer on the case and will turn it over to an attorney with more experience in the appellate court.

Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur said she was very pleased with the verdict.

"I feel justice has been done. I am happy for the family of Mr. Cook. I am happy a drawn out trial is over," she said.

Kur said she had originally offered Shulick a plea for second degree murder, but he turned it down.

She said Cook's family did not want to go through a long emotional trial.

Kur added Cook's family is "doing as well as can be expected."

"It was so senseless and so unnecessary. They are having a hard time coming to grips with it," she said.

Kur said Cook was a very special person who made quite an impression on everyone around him.

To make the situation even worse on the emotions of the family, Kur said a friend of Cook's was recently killed in a snowmobile accident in Leelanau County. And Cook's brother, Jeff, was with him when he died.

"It was another blow for the family," she said.

As for the trial, Kur said she thinks Cook's family feels somewhat vindicated in that their son was not involved in a fight and was actually a peacemaker.

"The defendant (Shulick) even said Cook did nothing to him," she said.

The verdict leaves Shulick facing up to life in jail. Sentencing for this crime has been scheduled for 1 p.m., Feb. 20 in the Charlevoix County Circuit Court.

City sewer rates may increase in new budget

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix residents hooked into the city sewer system and those looking to tap in, may face higher fees for the next six years.

"As seen the six year cash flow projections, the (sewer) fund does need rate increases to keep it at a flat cash balance. The proposed 6.25 percent increase is needed," the budget states.

The city made long-term projections related to the sewer fund and found the increase was needed to get the fund to a break even point.

The sewer fund, which pays for operational expenses at the Wastewater Treatment Plant and those costs associated with maintaining the system itself, is projected to climb out of debt during the 2006-2007 budget year.

The city has realized a 16.6 percent increase in the number of customers its sewer lines serve in the 10 year period between 1991 and 2001.

Rate increases will be realized by customers for the next six years with this year being the biggest hike, 6.25 percent. If the budget is adopted, this year's increase will be 3.25 percent higher than last year's.

The city is proposing to continue raising the rate 3.5 percent in each of the next four years and 2 percent during the 2007-2008 budget period.

According to the proposed budget, the increase will result in a 1.8 percent increase in the average household's bill.

The city compared its rates to those of surrounding cities and found it is currently on the low end of service charges. If the proposed increases are adopted by council it will be in between high and low rates of those cities.

Charges for city water and electric service are proposed to remain unchanged for the 2002-2003 budget period.

While bills for current city sewer users increase so to will sewer tap-in costs.

Within the city limits, the charge for tapping into the line will jump $400 from $1,000 to $1,400 and those in outlying townships who want to start service will pay $2,100 — $600 more than the city used to charge.

At the Charlevoix City Council budget work session Feb. 4, city treasurer Rick Brandi told council, "We (the city administration) don't want to get in a position where if we need to build a (wastewater treatment) plant we won't have the money to do that."

City Manager Mike Wiesner said the plant is currently at about half its capacity and an additional 2,300 customers using the plant would merit an expansion.

"We took a closer look at the (sewer) fund and we want to make sure tap-in dollars, earmarked for the ultimate expansion of the treatment plant, are in reserve so when the expansion is necessary our long time customers won't be faced with paying for that," Wiesner explained.

Not all council members feel expanding the city's sewer lines into the outlying townships is a good idea.

Third ward council member Shirley Gibson said she doesn't feel the extensions should happen.

"I'm anti-development and sewers mean development. I don't know what can be done about the sewer up Marion Center Road but I think the school should have an onsite septic. My motto is better, not bigger," Gibson said

Norman Carlson said the tap-in increases account for future wear and tear on the lines. He said if the extensions are economically feasible he sees no problem with running lines into the townships.

While users are seeing higher bills now, those who want to water their lawns this summer won't pay out of sight prices. The city plans to continue offering a 21 percent reduction in sewer rates during the months of June, July and August.

Brandi said the program, which has been in existence for some time, operates under the assumption that people are watering their lawns and the water used isn't traveling through the sewer.

Brandi and Wiesner agreed that other towns, who historically offered breaks in bills during the summer to allow for reduced rate lawn watering, have abandoned the program.

Wiesner said Charlevoix having kept the program is part of its "small town flavor."

Brandi agreed and said it has to do with community pride and the concept of "Charlevoix the Beautiful."

Last year, 319 customers signed up for the city's sprinkling reduction in sewer rates.

Sewer extension may have township hearing

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The sewer line proposed to run from the city of Charlevoix to the site of the new Charlevoix High School being constructed in Marion Township may face a public hearing by the Marion Township Planning Commission Feb. 25.

The township planning commission has to conduct a hearing and a site plan review before the township board will consider the project. The hearing will determine if the project complies with the township's land use master plan.

And, in the meantime, the school is moving closer to completion.

Dr. John Sturock, superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, said, "There are a lot of variables and there is no specific timeline other than it (the sewer) has to be in by fall. I think we'll be there long before that time."

Tim Matchett, planning commission chairman, said he expects the city to request a hearing at the commission's next meeting, Feb. 25.

Matchett explained this is the earliest the city and school could come before the planning commission.

As of Feb. 7 the commission had not yet received information solidifying this date, but the agenda is not set until Feb. 22.

"I suspect they will have something to me before then," Matchett said.

Marion sewer extension still not a done deal

EXTENSION

Matchett said the site plan review will most likely be considered at another meeting. The review is required for both the city lift station to be located on he school property and for the sewer line itself.

"We'll basically be looking at the area where they want to put the pipe and we'll make site considerations like the location of the pipe relative to what exists in the area. We'll decide if what is proposed is comparable with what exists," Matchett said.

That is: Does the sewer extension project adhere to the guidelines of the Marion Township Zoning Ordinance?

Wilson "Bud" Boss, Marion Township supervisor, said the township board has not received a contract or franchise agreement from the city of Charlevoix pertaining to the proposed sewer line.

Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner said the city hasn't applied to the townships yet and as of Feb. 8 wasn't ready to do so. Also, as of Feb. 8 the city had not awarded a contract for the project.

"We want to get the application done and the contracts awarded as soon as possible," he said.

The hold up has to do with contract issues between the city and Charlevoix and Marion townships.

The next steps in the process are the hearing and the site plan review.

Once contracts between the city and the townships are in place the city can consider awarding a contractor the project.

John Adams and Associates, the city's Ann Arbor based engineer for this project, established an estimate for the cost. The company recorded the potential cost at $288,700. This cost is currently in the proposed city budget for 2002-2003.

Wiesner said the cost will initially come out of the city's cash flow, but will later be reimbursed by the school.

"Extending the lines outside the city has no direct cost to the city. It doesn't effect the (sewer) rate increase and should lower the overall cost to users," Wiesner said.

Boss said he doesn't expect this issue will be brought up at a meeting of the township board until some time in March.

A lawsuit involving private Charlevoix residents who claim the school's use of bond proceeds to extend the sewer to the site of the new high school is unconstitutional is currently pending in the Michigan Court of Appeals in Lansing.

the end of September.

The Charlevoix Municipal Airport will also be getting some needed modern snow equipment and a place to store the new equipment. Wiesner said the airport has been operating on outdated snow equipment.

The total cost of the projects at the airport come at a cost of $350,000. A grant funded 95 percent of the snow equipment and storage building. Island Airways, a company that operates out of the Charlevoix Airport has agreed to fund the remaining five percent.

The long awaited airport master plan is also proposed for completion during the new budget period. The city's cost for the plan is $25,000. Wiesner said the city hasn't yet received information from the consultant about this plan.

The berm that lines the airport when traveling down US-31 south will also be polished this year. The city plans to plant more trees along the berm and hydroseed it at a cost of $67,900.

Residents and visitors can look forward to the resurfacing of May and State streets. The city proposes to spend $55,000 resurfacing those streets.

There will be a public hearing to discuss the proposed 2002-2003 budget at the next city council meeting, which will take place at 7 p.m. Feb. 18 in council chambers at city hall, 210 State Street, Charlevoix.

Rayders unstoppable as they rack up more wins

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

Yet another way to win.

The Charlevoix Rayders (14-0 overall, 8-0 conference), ranked second, third or fourth in Class C depending on which poll you read, tried something new last week, humiliating an opponent right from the opening tip, en route to an 81-42 win over East Jordan.

The Rayders had won about every other way possible this season. Every way except a close game, that is.

They led by only one headed into the fourth quarter at Cheboygan before a 33-3 fourth quarter put that game out of reach. They struggled early against Kalkaska, trailing 16-9 in the first quarter before bouncing back for another blowout win.

Still, they had not demoralized a foe the way they did last Friday night. Midway through the first quarter, Charlevoix held a 24-1 advantage.

Jim Shepherd did most of the damage, scoring 16 points in the decisive first stanza, including three three-pointers. Shepherd had his finest shooting game since his record-setting performance in the state semifinals against Detroit DePorres last season.

"He's fun to watch when he's shooting like that," coach Keith Haske said.

"He made nine three's against them his sophomore season, so he's made a career against East Jordan."

The Rayders didn't relax after their opening salvo, extending the lead to an amazing 38-8 at the end of the first quarter.

Neil Friske opened the second period with a three pointer to push the lead to 41-8. At the six-minute mark, Haske emptied the Rayder bench, playing all of his reserves in the first half of action.

Still the beating continued with a Scott Friske hoop at the 1:30 mark giving Charlevoix a 51-11 advantage.

Mercifully, the Rayder offensive machine slowed down the rest of the way with Charlevoix outscoring East Jordan, 20-11 in the third quarter. In the fourth quarter, the lead was as many as forty-five at 77-32 before the Red Devils outscored the Rayders 10-4 to close out the game.

"Three of their best players didn't play," Haske said.

"Including their ballhandlers. With our pressure, that's a tough situation."

Shepherd had 24 points to lead the scorers. Scott Friske had 17 points and seven rebounds. Scott Parrish had 10 points and seven boards. Ryan Rafacz scored eight points, dished out three assists and swiped five steals.

Earlier in the week the Rayders traveled to Harbor Springs and came away with a somewhat more challenging 95-77 victory.

The Rams led early and it wasn't until the 4:02 mark of the first quarter when Charlevoix took its first lead at 10-9 on a Nate Teuscher steal and layup. Harbor retook the lead at 10-9, but a Scott Friske put back gave Charlevoix the lead for good at 11-10.

A 12-0 run in the last three minutes of the first quarter, keyed by the Scott and Scott show, put the game away. Parrish had six points in the surge while Friske added four.

"I thought foul trouble hurt them a lot," Haske said.

"It took them out of a lot of things they wanted to do."

Harbor was game in the second quarter, getting within seven at 32-25, but Charlevoix responded with six straight points capped by a one-handed slam dunk by Scott Friske off a length of the court pass by football quarterback Teuscher.

The Rayders continued to pull away in the second half leading by as many as 29 at 71-42.

Parrish led Rayder scorers with 24 points. He also grabbed seven rebounds.

Shepherd added 21 points. Rob Boss scored 10 and pulled down six boards. Scott Friske had 10 points and six rebounds. Pat Gowell dished out ten assists. Teuscher had five steals, five assists and four rebounds.

After hosting Petoskey on Tuesday (results unavailable at press time), Charlevoix travels to Elk Rapids.

Tickets are limited and are available for pre-sale at the high school Wednesday at 6 p.m.

Rob Boss (middle) signed a letter of intent to play football for Northern Michigan University. He is an offensive lineman. He is surrounded by (back, from left) his mother, Judy Boss; father, Bud Boss; sister, Amanda Boss, and (front) coaches Keith Haske and Todd Klinger. Boss is also a basketball player. City Council to discuss new budget on Feb. 18

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix City Council will be reviewing the 2002-2003 budget at its next meeting 7 p.m, Feb. 18 at City Hall.

Charlevoix's proposed 2002-2003 city budget is primarily made up of nine funds, none of which is active in more sectors of the city than its general fund.

The city's eight other funds are set up to deal with the finances of streets, utilities, the airport and the downtown development authority. But the general fund finances most of the city's services and operation.

"If something goes wrong the city looks here (to the general fund) to help other funds," city treasurer Rick Brandi said.

For the 2002-2003 budget period, which starts April 1, 2002, the city is proposing a $2.65 million general fund budget, 19 percent of the total budget, $14,087,401.

Activities paid for by the general fund include: legislation, administration of government, public buildings and grounds, cemetery, public safety, public works, ambulance, recreation and culture and more.

These activities and programs are paid for through property taxes, state shared revenues, charges for services and interest and rents.

Property taxes are expected to bring the fund the bulk of its money, $1,381,000. The next highest contributor is charges for services which brings in $583,700.

Services that contribute to this part of the general fund's coffers include lot splits and variances, fire and ambulance runs, opening of cemetery lots and golf, day camp, ski hill, parking and summer sports user fees.

The third largest general fund contributor is interest and rents which brings in $330,400. This money comes from royalties associated with docking, city hall, the Ferry Beach boat launch, tower leases and the road right-of-way.

The fourth major contribution to the general fund comes from state grants. The budget shows there is an expected $19,221 drop in state grants. .

Brandi explained the decrease to be a result of two factors.

One, there was a drop in the city's population, and two, Michigan Governor John Engler's cut in state revenue sharing. State revenue sharing is driven by proceeds from the sales tax.

The proposed city budget states city administrators were initially very concerned about this reduction, it cut $60,000 in city funds but a rate increase for ambulance rides may have made up for the loss. The city anticipates the ambulance service bringing in an additional $54,000 during the 2002-2003 budget period.

Brandi said he received information from the state indicating future revenue sharing will be flat.

Other miscellaneous sources of revenue include fines and forfeits, licenses and permits, contributions, sale of assets and refunds and rebates.

This money that comes into the general fund is then distributed to various parts of the city.

The biggest general fund expense is recreation and culture which accounts for 34 percent of the fund's money spent.

Recreation and culture is expected to spend $900,600 during the 2002-2003 budget period, $34,514 more than the current period.

The city has attributed the increase of over $34,000 to the softball and baseball fields off Carpenter Road. It has projected there will be additional activity at the fields resulting from more tournaments coming to town. It has allocated $54,000 to the fields, $32,492 more than was spent during the 2001-2002 budget period.

The bulk of recreation and culture dollars go to the marina and the golf course. Combined marina and golf course expenses are expected to reach $433,800.

The next major expense to the general fund, public safety, accounts for 32 percent or $850,700, of the general fund's money.

Public safety is expected to 2002-2003 Budget on agenda for council

BUDGET

be $56,942 more expensive than the current budget period, as the city has increased salaries, its fringe benefit percentages and projections of maximum overtime. Public safety dollars go to the police, planning and fire departments and the parking law enforcement.

The general fund pays $379,600 for "general government" which includes, costs associated with elections, the mayor, the city manager, the city attorney, the assessor and the city treasurer.

The city's expense for general government in the upcoming budget period is projected to cost $34,370 more than last year. Brandi said the increase is a reflection of two things: an increase by the Charlevoix County Equalization Department for assessing which is up almost $2,000 and more expensive cemetery labor.

The Pellston Correctional Facility used to provide cheaper labor to the city, but is no longer operating. The new labor source is expected to cost the city over $20,000 more.

General government expenses are expected to take less of a hit by attorney fees associated with fireworks litigation. Attorney expenses are proposed to be down over $15,000.

Ambulance costs, which are part of the general fund's health and welfare expenses, are expected to go up $11,734 as a result of an anticipated increase in runs. The city will also realize a loss in health and welfare expenses for this budget period, because incidental supplies for the city's ambulances are no longer being provided by Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Other general fund dollars go to public works which includes street lighting, leaf and brush pickup and waste collection and to city council.

The 2002-2003 proposed budget, expects the general fund will have a cash balance of $308,560 at the end of the 2002-2003 budget year, almost $8,000 less than the current budget period's cash balance.

Valentine's Day not just for those who have a date

Julie Witthoeft

'Stepping out'

Valentine's Day is here — candy hearts, mushy stories and love poems are all over the place, taunting the loveless, and this year, on my first Valentine's Day as a married woman, I will join the V-day loners.

I can hear the, "Oh that's too bad," from people already. But to be honest, I'm looking forward to doing some things my sweetheart refuses to take part in.

For instance, he can't really sit still for more than 5 minutes, so most movies are out of the question. That is, unless they in some way involve an athlete and even then you'll catch him snoozing.

We live in the country so renting flicks is a late fee for sure, but through our satellite provider we can get oodles of new releases.

I double majored in college and aside from my focus on communications, which landed me at the Charlevoix Courier, I majored in French. So, you can imagine my excitement when the Paris based Moulin Rouge was ready for me to go pay per viewing.

I was doing cartwheels when we surfed past the title en route to the NBA All-star Game. And while I'm grinning ear to ear explaining Nicole Kidman's role, my husband looked at me as though I was crazy and then he winced in pain when he realized I wasn't kidding and did want to see it.

Instead of clueing him in about the cultural enrichment that comes from a musical of the Moulin Rouge caliber, I contemplated and quickly made a note to self.

My contemplative period brought to memory the fact that my husband is in the local, stellar blues band Mojo and the Boogieman and they are in the studio finishing their second CD. Their studio night just happens to fall on Valentine's Day.

Oh, note to public, this is in no way a cry out for companionship.

I mentally penciled in my first event of Valentine's Day 2002, popcorn and Moulin Rouge.

Oh yeah, and let's not kid ourselves, Valentine's Day falls close enough to Christmas that I'm still broke and, to ice life's most bitter cake, I have to shell out almost 5,000 beans for a new engine in my sport utility vehicle with only 65,000 miles on it.

So, the husband wouldn't see any extravagant gifts anyway.

Post movie plans, pamper self of course.

My vision of self pampering doesn't involve flashy meals. In fact I'm skipping appetizers, salads and the whole nine, in favor of Boboli. I'll make the feta, sundried tomato, red onion, black olive pizza.

Stomachs of readers everywhere probably just said a resounding, "So, when are you due?" No, I'm not pregnant, these are the bizarre Mediterranean flavors I crave naturally.

Lord only knows the pregnant cravings I'll have.

You know what, I'll fashion each topping in the shape of a heart to get in the sprit a little.

And, second note to self, heavy on the red onion because ladies when you're alone, you can.

While the pizza is in the oven I'll prep for the home treatment we must all invest in, the paraffin spa. Gals and guys, if you aren't dipping your paws weekly in this wax, you truly aren't living. The paraffin-less can substitute a soak in the tub and achieve similar states of relaxation.

Third note to self, plug in the paraffin spa before leaving for work, it takes time to heat up.

Some Valentine's Day ideas to give yourself

STEPPING

But, what to drink....Ah, Esperence a local wine cellar, totally fits with my French theme. Pram Acharya, owner of the business, is the only man I know who can find the perfect wine for pizza and popcorn and any other food. He would probably suggest a lager but life is way too short for beer on Valentine's Day.

Perfect evening planned. Oh, and anyone following this blissful path, attire: PJs, no exceptions.

For those who will be blessed to spend the evening with their loved one, make a note to self, it takes more than sugar conversation hearts and Julio Iglasius songs to create the perfect romantic evening.

So, here are some tips for top shelf fun in Charlevoix for under $100.

Tip one, pre-plan. Without preplanning you run the risk of coming home from work, sitting on the couch watching Friends, then Will and Grace and its off to bed. So, ask your date what he or she would like to do.

Dinner at home is great, Don's IGA has meats that are as fresh and lean as Brittany Spears and Acharya can hook you up with the perfect pallet pleaser.

As for movies, I have heard A Beautiful Mind and the Count of Monte Cristo are top notch.

Charlevoix is also home to fabulous restaurants including Terry's Place, the Weathervane, Grey Gables, Whitneys and Charley's, many of which are featuring love day deals that won't empty your wallet.

Guys, Charlevoix Floral has some amazing arrangements but make sure these are at the house — time in the car in this winter nightmare will weep petals faster than it does our skin.

And don't forget, we love flowers every day. So make a second note to self and get the flowers when she's not expecting them.

Appropriate instances include a day when she runs out of gas during a blizzard or when she puts on a brand new pair of panty hose and her toe shoots right through, those are the truly tragic days when we could all use some extra loving.

Residents may get rate increases

RATES

Wiesner and Brandi referred to the fee changes at the course as inflationary increases and again an attempt to break even.

Wiesner explained the city course used to break even but in recent years there has been an increase in the number of golf courses available to choose from. He said the more competitive market has made it harder to break even.

The 2002-2003 budget proposes a $26,000 donation to the course from the general fund. The money will be used to buy a rough trimmer for the course.

Those in need of an ambulance will also pay more for the service if the budget is adopted.

The current base rate for residents in need of ambulance service is $125. This base rate would increase $75 to $200 a ride. For residents in need of a specialist on board the cost will be $225 — $75 more than what it currently is.

Non-residents will pay $100 more than they currently are for both services bringing a basic ride in an ambulance to $300 and a specialist ride to $325.

Wiesner said this was an adjustment to the market and that the city hasn't increased its ambulance rates since 1994.

"We were way under the market and were able to keep the cost low because of a high collection rate, but that's starting to catch up with us," Brandi said.

He explained that Medicare and Medicaid have a new program municipalities are participating in that goes into effect in 2003. These rates reflect changes in those programs.

The city has realized a steady increase of between 4 and 5 percent in the number of ambulance rides required of the local emergency medical service each year.

The proposed 2002-2003 budget is available at Charlevoix's City Hall, 210 State Street.

A public hearing where comments and concerns about the budget can be voiced is scheduled to take place at the Charlevoix City Council meeting to take place at 7 p.m., Feb. 18 in council chambers at city hall.

SCRAPBOOK

More Charlevoix headlines in the year 1966

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

igatIn my last article I wrote about happenings in Charlevoix in 1966, from January through April.

In May of that year, the Red Rayders took Northern Michigan Class C track relay. Karen Heeres, Joey Phelps, Nancy Smith, Nancy Rader, Linda Supernaw, Kathy Terrill and Elaine Warner were chosen for the Venetian Queen's court.

In June, Gordon Freedman deeded back a portion of controversial property to the city. High School Principal Harry Bingham and his wife, Monica, retired from the Charlevoix school. I remember Mr. Bingham as a strict principal and thus not too many kids got away with anything under this term. With teachers like Max Novak, Ray Kipke, D.C. Maltby, Norm Gallagher, Stewart Coleman, Aili Gustafson, Uno Suomela, Leonard Burns, R.S. Richards, Dorothy Richards and superintendent R.G. Bennett, we knew that keeping the rules were mandatory.

Also in June, Edith Gilbert, Ralph Hamilton, Dale Boss and Jack Rader filed for the school board. Elaine Warner was chosen Venetian Queen. A local plant, Hoskins, made spun wire which was used for astronaut's pants. The school teachers won a salary hike. Jack Rader and Dale Boss won election to the school board. The Coast Guardsmen saved a cruiser, Rowinco. Mayor Bill Fochtman tossed out the first ball, opening the summer recreation program. A fire damaged the oldest house in Charlevoix, a 93-year-old dwelling on Mercer Boulevard, owned by Mrs. Mont Withers. Lt. Dave Smith became the new commander of Group Charlevoix. Bob Meyer of East Lansing won the Michigan Amateur.

In July, crowds flocked north to escape 90 degree weather across the state. Crops were hurt by drought. PFC Larry Messmore was hurt by a mine in Vietnam. Camping was outlawed at Ferry Beach. Darrell Dinwiddie was elected president of the Charlevoix School Board. The Honda rental agency was closed and re-opened by city superintendent Jim Taylor. Work began on Medusa Cement silos. Raymond Carr was named high school principal. Beaver Island extended phones to the south end of the island. Patrolman Earl Crandall died investigating a motorcycle accident. Augustine Wabanimkee drowned in Lake Michigan.

Charlevoix Hospital had an open house. Council pondered whether structures Jack VanLoo plans to build on May Street are house trailers. VanLoo plans to take house trailer issue to Circuit Court. Hannelore Mueller, a German exchange student, joined the Dale Boss family for the school year. Hoskins plans to double its plant size. The Charlevoix schools count 1,294 students.

In September, the city council approved construction of a restroom and showers in the park. Q-Air-Ways plane crashed south of Charlevoix near the airport claiming the life of Mrs. Barbara Stewart. I.T. Quarnstrom, owner of American Mold, and his pilot, died later.

In October, the consolidation of East Jordan, Ellsworth and Central Lake Schools was defeated at the polls. Charlevoix and Ironton voted to merge. Last rites were given for I.T. Quarnstrom. Jim Richey told of plans for a subdivision off May Street (Hampton Village). Jim Sawtelle told of plans to raise a sunken ship, Keuka. Ironton decided to oppose merging their school with Charlevoix. Mrs. Erma K. Varies and Mrs. Raymunda Overmeyer, former Beaver Islanders, were killed in a plane crash. A rabid skunk chased a Barnard farm wife and infected the cattle.

In November, the council approved water taps for Jack VanLoo. Businessman Ron Raymer died. He owned the Will Flow Corporation. Roy built and donated the beautiful stainless steel cross which sits atop the Community Reformed Church. I remember Roy's generosity. In 1964, when the Couple's Club of the church wanted to build a Venetian boat parade display, Roy donated his yacht to carry a huge replica of Jonah and the Whale. The display won first place and best in show. Dale and I were in the process of building our present home and the living room was wide open to the 25 foot peak. We actually built the 25 foot long whale on the floor. We had Jonah sticking out the whale's mouth, a stream of water coming out the spout, the tail moved back and forth and the eyes opened and closed. We had such fun that night, with several fellows operating the moving parts on Roy's yacht.

In November, Ironton took the school merger issue to court. Hunter, James McDonald, was killed by a stray bullet in Ironton. Mr. Amos Towsley was honored by friends on his eighty-eighth birthday. Oscar Stroud was elected chairman of the Charlevoix County Republican Committee

In December, visionary Dr. Walter Hoffmann told of plans to erect a 105 foot viewing tower on the Pine River Channel. The council later found the tower in violation of C-1 zoning. Del Terrill was appointed administrative assistant by the board of education. David M. Kelly and Edmund Selleck applied to FCC for a permit to operate an AM radio station in Charlevoix.

All-in-all, 1966 was an interesting year, and one which just reinforces the adage that things are never dull in Charlevoix.

Two injured in auto accident

Two people were injured in a two-vehicle automobile crash that occurred at approximately 9:11 a.m. on Feb.10.

The crash happened on M-66 near Flagg Road in Charlevoix County's South Arm Township..

A 1999 Ford Explorer driven by a 41-year-old woman from Boyne City, lost control on the snowy and icy road colliding with a 2002 Chevrolet Trail Blazer driven by a 55-year-old man and occupied by a 50-year-old woman, both from Okemos.

The driver of the Ford Explorer was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by East Jordan Ambulance Service where she was treated for her injuries. The female occupant of the Chevrolet Trail Blazer was also transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital via East Jordan Ambulance where she was treated for her injuries.

The driver of the Trail Blazer was not transported.

The East Jordan Ambulance, and Charlevoix Towing Service assisted the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office at the scene. The sheriff's office would also like to thank the two citizens that stopped to render assistance to the victims.

Weather conditions contributed considerably to the crash.

The sheriff's office would like to remind citizens that although we have had some warm days, winter is still here and to be prepared for winter driving conditions.

Tell yourself you just don't have time to spend thinking about promoting your business.
3. Don't Advertise
Just assume everybody knows what you sell.

Convince yourself that you've been in business so long customers will automatically come to you.
5. Don't Advertise
Forget that there are new potential customers who would do business with you if they were reminded.
6. Don't Advertise
Forget that you have competition trying to attract your customers away from you.
7. Don't Advertise
Tell yourself it costs too much to advertise and that you don't get enough out of it.

For the third year in a row, the Charlevoix Ski Team is headed to the State Finals to be at Marquette Mountain on Feb. 25.

In the Regional Ski meet Feb. 14 at Nub's Nob, the second ranked Rayders used a total team effort in what is considered the toughest regional in the state.

They finished second behind first place Petoskey and ahead of third place Iron Mountain. They take the top three teams from each region to compete in the finals. It marked the fourth major event in a row, including last year's state finals, where Charlevoix has finished runner-up to the top ranked Northmen. Charlevoix is trying to avoid a fifth.

In the morning GS, things went as expected in the first run with the Rayders placing four skiers in the top 12 and battling Petoskey for the lead.

Half way through the second run, Charlevoix seamed to be in control with three out of their top four skiers down the hill lead by York

Wind turbine issue setback in Eveline

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Bay Windpower's proposal to locate seven wind turbine generators in Charlevoix's Eveline Township, recently faced a setback that could cost the company two months as the township relooks at its wind turbine ordinance.

"Now, as it stands, we can't put up the monitoring tower — we're in limbo for a while here," Steve Smiley, president of Bay Windpower said.

In November of 2001, Smiley's energy generating company, which is based in Sutton's Bay, applied to Eveline Township for a special use permit that would allow them to construct a temporary wind monitoring tower 164 feet tall, to measure wind speeds.

But, even though the township's zoning ordinance had been changed in October of 2001 to allow for wind turbine generators with a special use permit, the township board delayed issuing the permit to give residents time to gather information as to why they are a bad thing for Eveline Township.

The board reconvened Feb. 12. But, before taking comments from the public, Dan Skrzeczkoski, Eveline Township Supervisor, made a surprising announcement. He said the township planning commission will start the zoning ordinance approval process over.

Skrzeczkoski explained why the ordinance will again undergo public notification and a public hearing.

He received two letters and a phone call Feb. 8 from Eveline Township residents. They claimed public hearing notices posted in July and August of 2001 in the Petoskey News-Review for proposed changes to the township zoning ordinance were missing some important information.

The notices indicated there

Fire destroys vacant home on Mason Street Friday

Firefighters look on as smoke pours from the garage of the home Friday night. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

An unoccupied home at 301 Mason Street was destroyed by fire around 8 p.m. Friday.

The Charlevoix City Fire Department responded that evening to the home after two boys walking to a dance at the Charlevoix Middle School discovered the fire. Upon arrival, fire crews noticed heavy smoke and flames visible in the rear portion of the building.

The home was unoccupied and in the process of renovations when the fire occurred. The owners live in South Carolina.

There were no injuries and the home was insured.

City Fire Chief Douglas Carver said because the inside of the home was open, and the stud walls in place, the fire was allowed to grow unchecked until its discovery.

Firefighters used two engines, an aerial truck and 25 air bottles in their efforts to enter the burning building and combat the fire. Additionally, a city water department backhoe was used to pull down a portion of the garage roof that was unsafe for firefighters to enter.

Carver said crews were on scene for about three hours. The cause of the fire is unknown at this time.

He added, the fire started in the garage.

There was also some damage to the vinyl siding of the home next to the burning building due to the heat.

The Charlevoix City Police Department, water department and street department assisted the fire department at the scene.

Breast cancer survivors sought

The American Cancer Society is looking for women in Charlevoix County that have had breast cancer and have completed treatment.

The Reach to Recovery program of the American Cancer Society provides information and support for women with a personal concern about breast cancer through someone who has already been there herself, the Reach to Recovery volunteer.

Reach to Recovery is a volunteer visitation program. It helps a breast cancer patient meet the emotional, physical and cosmetic needs related to her disease and treatment.

The program is one woman reaching out to share experiences and give support to another in a time of need. Reach to Recovery also provides information and support for the loved ones of breast cancer patients.

If you or anyone you know may be interested in assisting other breast cancer patients call Theresa Haske, community development director for the American Cancer Society, at (877) 240-0001.

Charlevoix High School celebrates Winterfest

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix High School's 2002 Winterfest festivities will take place from Feb. 25 through March 2.

The week-long festival will feature everything from kings, queens and snow sculptures to a basketball game showcasing the talents of the school's top rated Rayders.

Winterfest activities will kick-off Feb. 25 when high school students show their spirit by wearing their pajamas to school.

They'll follow up PJ day with color day. Those with aversions to bright hues in a myriad of prints should avoid the school Feb. 26 as freshmen parade in polka dots, sophomores show off their animal instincts in animal prints, juniors sport their favorite plaids and seniors wear their stripes.

Day three of spirit week, Feb. 27, is a tribute to the school's American spirit. This year's Winterfest is the first to follow the tragic terrorist attacks that occurred Sept. 11, 2001 so, the students decided to include a Patriotic Day. Students will dress in red, white and blue.

After school on Feb. 27, each class will mold snow sculptures. Sculpture judging will take place just before dusk.

On the fourth day of spirit week students will take a close look at tourism in Charlevoix with "Tacky Tourist Day" on Feb. 28. Students are prepping their cameras and ice cream cones for this one.

They'll close out spirit week March 1, wearing maroon and white in support of the boys' basketball team.

To further gear up for the game the school has scheduled its annual Winterfest assembly for 1 p.m., March 1 in the gym. Each class will perform for six minutes.

The public is invited to attend the assembly.

After a week of wacky wear and the assembly the Rayder basketball team will take on Traverse City St. Francis. Game time is 7:30 p.m., March 1 in the Charlevoix High School gym.

During half-time of the game one of five senior girls and one of five senior boys will be crowned 2002 Winterfest queen and king. John Kilkenny and Shannon Nystrom, 2001 Winterfest king and queen, will crown the new Winterfest royalty.

This year's court includes Karlee Ann Barnard, a four year soccer team member and an avid skier. Barnard hopes to attend Central Michigan University this fall.

Rachel Kanine is also in the running for queen. Kanine is a member of the National Honor Society, is co-editor of the Rayder yearbook and was involved in both basketball and volleyball during high school. She plans to attend Grand Valley State University in the fall.

Amy Kurtz, a performing arts and French Club veteran, vice president of the National Honor Society and a track and cross country runner is also a 2002 Winterfest Queen hopeful. Kurtz plans to attend the University of Michigan in the fall with a possible concentration in geriatric psychiatry.

Campus Life student leader, cheerleader and student council representative Bonnie Mesa is also in the running to be crowned Winterfest queen. Mesa plans to attend cosmetology school in the fall.

The fifth candidate for queen is Jayme Murray. During high school, Murray has participated in the French Club and Peer2Peer — a school district mentorship program. She is also a cross country runner and a soccer player. Murray plans to play soccer for Aquinas College this fall.

Every queen needs a king and this year's Winterfest court features five guys ready to wear the crown.

Two of these seniors will be crowned 2002 Winterfest king and queen March 1. They are: (from left, in pairs) Kyle Dobrowolski, Karlee Barnard, Dennis Avery, Bonnie Mesa, Scott Parrish, Jayme Murray, Shawn McDonough, Rachel Kanine, Andy Gels and Amy Kurtz. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Kyle Dobrowolski has been heavily involved in athletics throughout his high school career including, football, basketball and track. Dobrowolski plans to join several of his classmates at Central Michigan University this fall.

Shawn McDonough, the second candidate for king, has also put in his time with high school athletics playing basketball, football and soccer. McDonough is also a member of the National Honor Society.

Andy Gels is also in the running for the coveted king's throne. Gels is a cross country and track runner and an avid sports booster. He also performed in the Rayder bands throughout high school.

Rounding out the running for king are basketball players Dennis Avery and Scott Parrish.

Aside from basketball Avery has participated in baseball, football and golf. He plans to attend Central Michigan University in the fall.

Not only is Parrish a basketball player, but he has been captain of the team for the past two years and is a member of the National Honor Society. During the off season he participates in track.

Parrish received a full scholarship from Lake Superior State University, where he will play basketball and work toward a career in elementary education this fall.

High school students will decide who will be king and queen and the royal couple will have their dance during the Winterfest Dance will take place March 2.

Alumni are invited to attend.

The students shine brightly in schools

EDITORIAL

The children of Charlevoix continue to shine brightly.

There are some fantastic happenings taking place right now at each of the local schools. Each one showing the community the great talent that our future generations have.

First there is the Charlevoix High School ski team that is headed to the state finals. With every meet, the team has worked hard to overcome all obstacles and come out winners.

Now, the team is going up against several other schools for the state title. We wish them the best and know that no matter the outcome, they are always champions.

Then there is the Charlevoix High School basketball team. This team keeps our Tuesday and Friday nights exciting with a fantastic showing of skill on the basketball court.

On the academic side, students are proving themselves again.

Each of the schools are constantly showing high test scores and producing students who excel in college and in life.

And these kids are talented.

Charlevoix's Northwest Academy drama class just performed a wonderful evening of Shakespeare for an enthusiastic crowd. The group is also going to be putting on various "Coffee Night" events throughout the year.

At Charlevoix High School, the drama class is gearing up for its own performance. The group will focus on the effects of war with its play "Homeland" this weekend.

For further examples of the talent of our students, just take a look at the artwork that is on display in each of the schools.

There are some great things going on in our schools and some great students coming out of them.

We salute the students for their hard work, the teachers and administrators for guiding them and their parents for the support they give.

Life on a boat sailing across the Atlantic

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

Sharon Blossom reads a book while waiting for another trip on her boat. (Courtesy photo)

There are some things I wouldn't do for any amount of money and crossing the Atlantic in a sailboat is one of them!

However, Sharon and Lowell Blossom of Charlevoix are of a different mind. They took delivery of a 53 foot ketch built in La Rochelle, France by Chatiers Amel last month. They met the boat in Mogan, one of the Canary Islands about 90 miles west of Morocco, and sailed, bobbed or bounced across 2,750 nautical miles to their place in Bequia in the southern Caribbean.

They tell me by comparison, Beaver Island is a metropolis!

The trip took exactly 14 days, 22 hours and 15 minutes. I wonder how long it took Columbus?

Now the Blossoms' boat isn't an ordinary sailboat. It has four cabins, two heads and showers, a washer dryer, dish washer, a refrigerator, two deep freezers, micro wave, convection oven, plus a gas stove and oven, generous water and fuel capacity, power furling sails, electric winches and lots of storage space for provisions, such as 40 apples and 40 oranges, cereal, milk, vegetables, roasts, steak, chicken, salami and frozen pizza.

As one of the crew describes the trip via 38 pages of e-mail messages, "Sharon usually had breakfast ready by 8:30 a.m., which was always tasty such as bacon, eggs and French toast, for example."

"Still, life aboard is composed of days and days of boredom followed by minutes of sheer terror. That's why everyone wears a harness attached to a tether to avoid being dumped into the ocean, and all beds have leeboards to prevent one from getting tossed out of bed!"

"The seas look like we're going up and down the Rocky Mountains. I had never seen waves this huge before when, smack, right across my face, one of a squadron of flying fish hit me in the face. Now, I've got to tell you, I jumped right out of my skin, ready to quit, but there was no place to jump! Last night my watch did not end soon enough.

"Not much for dinner in that we are all getting our sea legs. I was the greenest of them all.

"We have seen one bird in the last 8 days.

"I never thought I would be missing Indiana, cornfields and solid ground."

During lonely shifts, reading was a diversion. As the poet, Emily Dickinson said,"There is no frigate like a book to take us lands away." During the 14 days, the crew of five read 28 books, including my Charlevoix book, "Summer Resort Life, Tango Teas and All!" The crew was assigned 2 hour shifts at night and 4 hour shifts during the day. Some are favorite shifts and some are not so favorite shifts.

The complaint on the morning shift was that the sun rises and shines right into the cockpit with no relief. The noon to 4 p.m. shift is unpopular because this is naptime and everyone seems to disappear, but the 2 and 4 a.m. shifts are the most unlikable shift of all, because if anything is going to go wrong, it's at night.

On a happier note, "Now and then porpoises splash and surf along the waves next to you and the stars are overwhelming — more stars than I have ever seen before. We are now far enough south to see the Southern Cross."

"Finally, when we arrived in Bequia loads of people welcomed us ashore waving bed sheets, flags and kites from the top of the mountain to the dinghy dock. They were happy to see us, but not as happy as we were to see LAND!"

The Blossoms plan to leave Bequia around April 1 and head for Charlevoix as their final destination. Look for the "Twowowie" this summer, calmly docked in front of their home on Round Lake.

Letters to the editor

The problem with turbines

Editor:

I read with sympathy the letter to the editor from farmer Sue LaJoice. I have a number of small landholding farmers in my family tree. For a long time, northern Michigan has been a hard place to earn a living farming.

However, with respect, I question the right she assumes to spectacularly impair the greatest asset of Eveline Township, its naturalistic scenery. I am speaking of building 400 foot tall wind turbines — factories — in what neighbors, for miles around, assumed was farm and forest land.

Consider the many people who have chosen to live in Eveline Township, because here they have an opportunity for a natural vista. Consider also the people who will be coming to Eveline Township in the future. Charlevoix County is projected to grow at a rate of about 1 percent each year for the next 20 years. It's a safe assumption that most of these people will be coming in anticipation of our natural scenery.

What are the supposed gains for us, the people of the township, in return for the impairment of our best resource? One gain, of course, is some money for a few land owners, not all of whom are farmers. A second gain is the attractive hope of "green electricity."

The patriotic/ecological value of wind-generated electricity needs to be thought about soberly. Currently, wind electricity is .5 percent of our national consumption. In 20 years, estimates show the percentage rising, perhaps, to 5 or 6 percent. There are states with reasonable strong, sustained, winds — North Dakota theoretically could supply up to 30 percent of the nation's electricity needs. Michigan is not one of them — theoretically, Michigan could supply .3 percent of the nation's needs. Michigan is not like Denmark, with its remote, windswept, North Sea shoreline, and compact size — all of Denmark could fit inside Lake Michigan.

On balance, giant wind turbines are a bad idea for us in Eveline Township. Too much will be taken away from too many for the gain of a few and all for minimal ecological benefit.

Steven Hansen
Eveline Township

No papered fronts

Editor:

Winter is bleak enough without having to endure papered store fronts from October until spring.

It also sends a very subtle, but effective message to anyone driving through or stopping to shop. It sabotages the effort of any retailer or business trying to remain open full season. It defeats any effort to buy or sell a business. It sends the message that when not "in residence" it no longer matters that this looks like a cohesive retailing community. It doesn't even make the promise of something to look forward to upon reopening.

That this is not a standard clause in any lease amounts to nothing less than "dropping the ball." It would take very little to sacrifice a few items to a store window for this purpose — a wooden chair, a table, a few props, scrim or shutter the background. Put a lamp on a timer during the evening hours. Something, anything, would be better than the look of abandonment that is currently on display.

Mary Millington

Thank you

Editor:

On behalf of the Northwest Academy Drama Troupe, I'd like to thank the many people who recently helped us put on our successful first full scale production of Shakespeare's Twelfth Night. A play, any play, can only happen with the effort and support of many people who give generously of their time and materials to make sure the show will go on.

We started this program from scratch this fall and it simply would not have happened without the assistance of local retailers and friends of the theater who donated items for our silent auction fundraiser. Because of their assistance, not only did the show go on, but the next one as well.

To enable our program to grow to best serve the needs of the community, we have a community advisory committee, which helps select future plays and events, develop public relations and assists with production and the building of a permanent community stage. We welcome public input. To join the fun, please contact me at 547-9000.

Open door for turbines?

Editor:

Today's wind generators are not the windmills of the past that you see in quaint Dutch landscape paintings. They are machines that can stand up to 400 feet tall with noise and lights included.

Anyone that thinks that one wind tower or a string of them is attractive is deluding him or herself. We've traveled out west and have seen the towers in large open areas without any development around them and think they are quite ugly.

It would be interesting to identify the people who think these towers can blend harmoniously with the landscape and who desire to destroy our beautiful land. What are their motives? Money for a select few — the landowner and those that help put the wind tower up. Green power translates into greed power.

Our research shows that wind towers are inefficient, expensive for the consumer and threaten the natural beauty of the community.

Interested people of Charlevoix and Norwood attend your county and township board meetings and voice your opinions or you may open the door and see wind generators outside.

Watchful citizens of Norwood Township.

Thank you firefighters

Editor:

We would like to thank the Charlevoix Fire Department and volunteers.

This past weekend, we came home to find our neighbor's house — which was vacant — blazing. We heard our home was close to catching on fire earlier. Thanks to the fire department and volunteers; they kept it safe.

We watched them fight the fire through soakings from the hoses, slippery ice beneath their feet and heat from the fire.

We truly appreciate the great amount of energy every one of them exerted in keeping our home safe. We also appreciate the kind words, the concern and all of the answers to our questions.

Thank you all.

COMMUNITY

What is the Belvedere Club?

Why is that ?

Q: What is the Belvedere Club?

A: According to Tom Conlan, general manager of the Belvedere Club, it is a resort community on the south side of Charlevoix, east of Bridge Street. The Belvedere Club also owns a golf course on Marion Center Road.

Conlan said the Belvedere Club originally began as a Baptist retreat in 1878 and slowly grew into the Charlevoix Home Association. The club is no longer a Baptist retreat.

The club contains 90 cottages, with one or two year-round residents. The cottages rarely change hands from a family. Members of the club come from St. Louis, Mo.; Nashville, Tenn., Detroit and Chicago, Ill.

A hotel was built at the club in 1886, but was torn down in 1960.

Conlan added, to become a member of the club, you must own a cottage there. But, to own a cottage at the club, you must be a member.

Q: How long has Charlevoix been called "The Beautiful?"

A: According to David Miles of the Charlevoix Historical Society, Charlevoix has been called this since 1905. However, there is some conflicting information on the identity of the person who coined this phrase.

According to one piece of information at the historical society, Charlevoix was given the title in 1905 by the owner of a creamery on Round Lake named W.L. Johnson. However, another piece of information says it was first coined by a Frank Wilkinson.

Lastly, an entry in the Oct. 24, 1905 edition of the Charlevoix Sentinel states it was coined by a George DeHaven.

Q: Why does the city take down the parking meters in the winter?

A: According to Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner, there are two reasons. First, the meters are used to increase turnover at downtown businesses in the summer, but they are not needed in the winter.

Secondly, Wiesner said they are taken down to make plowing in the winter easier.

Wedding

Tchozeski — Dhaseleer

Tennille Tchozeski and Joshua Dhaseleer, both of Charlevoix, were married on Dec. 29, 2001 at a secluded lake surrounded by snow-capped pine trees near Charlevoix.

Tennille is the daughter of Steven and Joyce Tchozeski, of Belding. Joshua is the son of Allan and Anneke Dhaseleer, of Charlevoix.

The Pastor Kendall Harger of Shiloh Community Church of Belding performed the outdoor ceremony.

Two teams of horses pulled old fashioned sleighs filled with 100 guests through the woods to the site of the wedding. They sat on hay bales and listened to the music of a trumpeter and vocalist before the wedding.

The bride wore a long sleeved, floor length, white crushed velvet gown with fur circling the neck. Snowflake bead designs accented the bodice. She topped it off with a white fur hat and carried an arm spray of natural evergreens with baby's breath and red carnations.

The maid of honor was Wendy Gaffner, a friend of the bride.

The best man was Henri Dhaseleer.

A reception was given at the American Legion Hall, in Charlevoix, where Bill Stevens led the guests in square dancing. A rehearsal dinner was given on Dec. 28 at the home of LeRue Werner.

The couple went to Belize in Central America on a wedding trip.

They are making Charlevoix their home.

The bride is a Charlevoix Public School's fifth grade teacher. She is also a graduate of Michigan State University.

The groom is an employee of Cemex in Charlevoix. He is also a graduate of Northern Michigan College.

Teddy bears help children heal

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A Charlevoix County family victimized by a felonious assault found solace in the caring, helpful hands of the staff at the county prosecuting attorney's office and recently gave the office a "teddy bear program" thank you.

A couple years ago, Charlevoix County resident Gail Gerrie's family was the target of a felonious crime. The Charlevoix County Prosecuting attorney's office handled the Gerrie family's case and helped the family heal.

"Sept. 11 wasn't a wake up call for me, we were already terrorized," Gerrie said with conviction.

Tears welled up in her eyes as she explained how her five children grappled with tough issues. And the tears fell as she told the story of how prosecuting attorney Mary Beth Kur stepped up and made them feel safe.

Sandy Ward, victim's assistance coordinator at the office, also stepped forward. Ward colored with the children, watched videos and even introduced them to some favorite office toys.

"There are people in the community that can make the way a lot easier. This office (the prosecuting attorney's office) helped us deal head on with the criminal aspect of what happened to our family," Gerrie said.

She added that in the wake of her family's tragedy, Kur, Ward and others helped she and her family realize, "We are still breathing and still have lives left to live."

Gerrie is a Christian believer and listens to radio problem solver Dr. Laura. Both her church, First Baptist in Boyne City, and Dr. Laura encouraged Gerrie to give back to the community as part of her family's healing process.

Gerrie is the founder of a promotional marketing company and an Avon sales representative. Through her work and church she came up with an idea of how to give back.

After her children went through the court process Kur and Ward gave them bears they had played with. And the children still have them.

Gerrie found cushy, "Hug Me," Gund bears that she thinks would be perfect soothers for other children making their way through the court process who are grappling with tangled emotions.

While court battles and criminal cases may seem like adult worries, many kids get caught in legal fights and have to take the stand.

Kur estimated that a couple of times a month a child has to testify in a Charlevoix County court case. She said the youngest child she has seen testify was 4.

Victim's assistance efforts, like the teddy bear program, have proven to not only help the victims heal, but Kur said she has found them emotionally beneficial too.

Kur explained that after one case is solved, another will walk through the door. And when she sees success stories, like the Gerrie family's, her job gains purpose.

"It's important for me because there are a lot of days when I feel like I can't do this anymore — it takes a lot out of me and the people who work in my office. It kills you to see people in so much pain. But then, there's a child who comes in and tells you they're doing well and gives you a sense that there's some purpose to what you do," Kur said.

"I'm glad they remember me," she added.

Gerrie brought in 10 bears purchased by members of her parish. The stuffed animals are now official members of the Victim's Assistance Department at the Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney's Office.

Middle school's future uncertain for district

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

At the start of the 2002-2003 school year, many students in the Charlevoix School District will be shuffled into new buildings leaving one building, the Charlevoix Middle School, vacant.

Fifth graders who once closed out their elementary career at Charlevoix Elementary School will join the official middle school students at the old high school located at 108 East Garfield. And high school students, in grades nine through 12, will make the move to the new facility in Marion Township.

So, what will become of the old middle school on Grant Street in Charlevoix? This is just the question the building and grounds committee has set out to answer.

The committee, made up of Dr. John Sturock, superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Allen Telgenhof, school board president and school board members Dennis Halverson and Barney Way met Jan. 21 to see what direction the decision making process should go in.

Way said they brainstormed ideas and came to two conclusions.

First, the committee decided to invite members of the community to a discussion that would generate more ideas.

Some of those that made the committee's list so far include: townships in the district, Charlevoix County officials, City of Charlevoix officials, members of the Downtown Development Authority, representatives for the Charlevoix Public Library, representatives from the Charlevoix and Emmet counties Intermediate School District, representatives of the Chamber of Commerce and others from the Convention and Visitors Bureau.

"This is a community building; we are the owners of it, but it is a community building and we need ideas from the community," Sturock said to the school board at its February meeting.

While there are many ideas about the future of the building that are floating around town, selling the middle school doesn't seem to be a number one option for the district.

"To keep the building would be advantageous for the school district, it is a great asset to have in the coffers," Sturock told the board.

The committee also decided that, while the building is a public building, it is owned by the school district and can in no way require funding from the district to support any use.

Way said the committee's aim is to have the meeting between administrators of the Charlevoix School District and other officials some time in February or in early March.

Recommendations for the school board will be discussed at its meeting scheduled to take place at 7 p.m., April 8 in the study hall at the current high school.

Marion Township invites public to planning meeting

Marion Township encourages residents and business owners to attend the next planning commission meeting, Feb. 25, to discuss the township's goals and land use issues.

This workshop is being conducted as part of the process that will update the Marion Township Land Use Plan. The land use plan, or master plan, is a policy document developed to guide future growth and development in the township.

Additionally, this document serves as the legal foundation for the zoning ordinance.

The focus of the upcoming meeting is to review the updated, existing land use map, to draft goals and discuss future township land use. Public input is vital to the process to ensure the land use plan accurately reflects a balance of the desires of the township residents, property owners and businesses operating in the township.

Marion Township is working with Mary Campbell, owner and principal planner for the firm M. C. Planning and Design of Boyne City.

Campbell's company has been contracted to update both the land use plan and the zoning ordinance.

The information gathered during the land use plan update will also be considered as the township zoning ordinance is updated.

It is anticipated that a public hearing concerning the land use plan will take place in late spring or early summer and a public hearing for the zoning ordinance would be scheduled for early 2003. Dates have not been determined for either of the two public hearings.

The Marion Township Planning Commission regularly meets at 7 p.m. on the fourth Monday of each month at the Marion Township Hall located on Marion Center Road.

For more information contact Tim Matchett, planning commission chairman, at (231) 547-2154.

Slow down hurts Harbor

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

A combination of a slowing economy and the Kmart bankruptcy has had an impact on local retail cabinet maker Harbor Industries.

Tim Parker, vice president of northern operations for Harbor Industries, said the company had to implement a voluntary layoff recently of about 50 people. Mostly, he said, this was due to the slowing economy.

"This can be a slow time of the year," he said.

Workers of the plant were given the option of participating in the lay off.

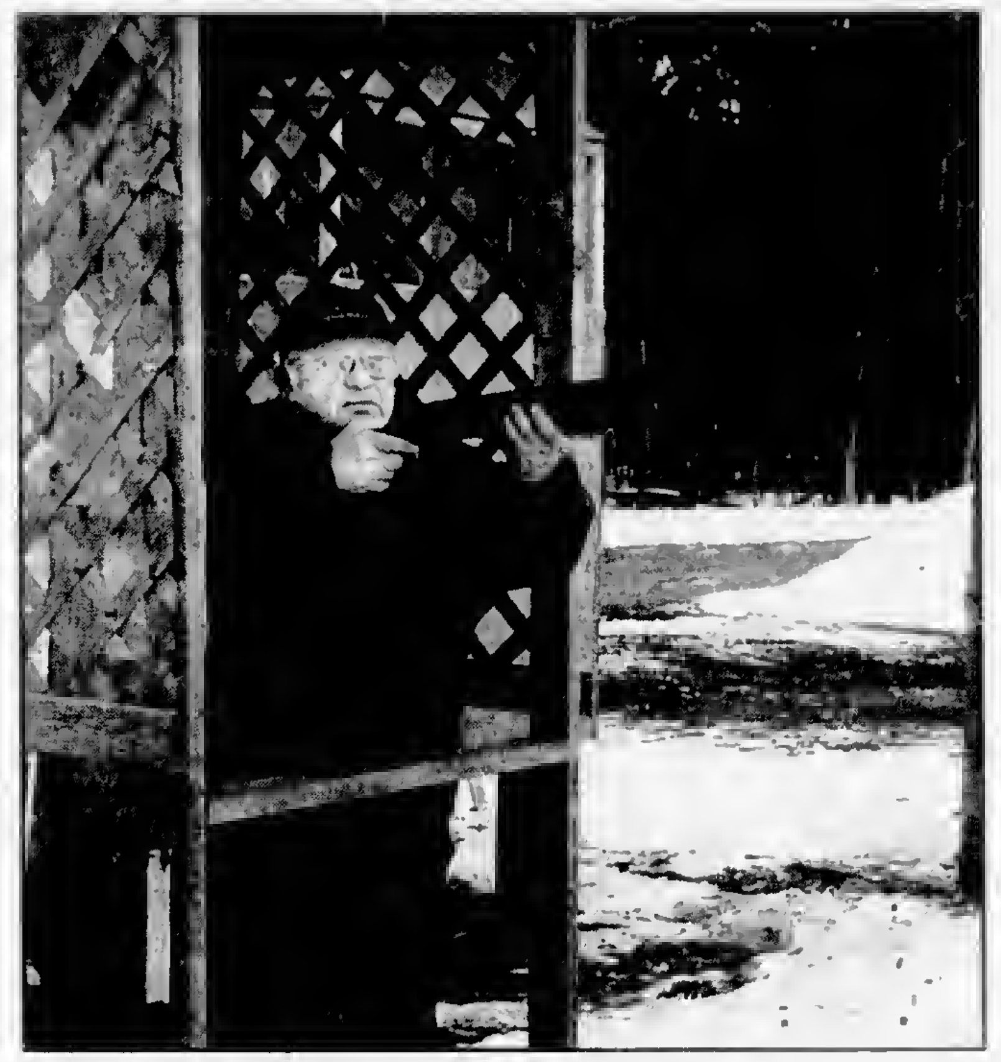
"We have not had to force anyone out," he said. "It works out nice. It works best for everyone."

However, Parker said he expects business to pick up in April and all of the laid off workers will be hired back.

"We had a real nice year last year. I think we are starting to see a little of the slowdown, but it is going to turn quickly," he said.

Additionally, Parker said the company was working on a "sizable" order for Kmart, who recently filed for bankruptcy protection. After the bankruptcy, Parker said Kmart slowed up its payments on the order.

"At the moment, we are just waiting to see what kind of arrangement they will put together," he said.



Snowflake league

Keith Danforth was recently named president of the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club. Danforth was out shooting Feb. 16 with the winter Snowflake League. The league is open to the public and meets from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays through March 5 at the club. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

The New, Alarming Story of the industrial-sized SEWER LINE...and the Building Problems of the new Charlevoix High School...

...out in the wet farmlands of Marion Township...

...Scrooge and Fezziwig talking together,...in Scrooge's counting house...awaiting the return of the 'Ghost of Christmas Present'...

"Scrooge,I...your jolly Ghostly friend, the 'Ghost of Christmas Present' will be here, within the minute...

..."He turned around, Scrooge, heading back, after my call, when he heard of reports about the building problems that seem to have fallen upon the new Charlevoix High School in Marion Township, out on Marion Center Road...I..."

"Well, well, well!...No sooner said than done, Scrooge...Here he is...Come in, Ghost,...we're delighted to see you...I..."

"Scrooge,...I knew immediately when I got that call from Fezziwig that we needed to talk...I have heard some dire words of warning, Scrooge, that apparently the construction of the new high school out on Marion Center Road has encountered large building problems for the new high school...!"

"Fezzi, has the State Superintendent of Public Instruction been notified of these concerns?...Good, he needs to know..."

"Scrooge, let me jump to the most urgent and costly construction problem of the new school.

"I have with me a list of the reasons that an ON-SITE SEPTIC SYSTEM should be installed, now more than ever, at the new high school. They're very straightforward...in fact they're in a memo from an engineer friend of mine...

"...He said the taxpayers he has talked with are very unhappy with the deals the Superintendent has made with the City, in committing SCHOOL MONEY to the construction of the 8 inch industrial-sized force main sewer line...Here's his memo:

"...An on-site septic appears absolutely necessary now...Here are the reasons:

1. It will cost far less than any sewer plan.
2. It will serve ALL of the sewage disposal needs of the new high school.
3. The soils to the northwest of the school site, the EmB soils, the Emmet sandy loam soils, 2-6% slopes, have SATISFACTORY conditions for septic tank disposal fields.
4. A professional rendering of a septic system, in that area north of the existing new high school, has already been presented, at the Township meetings, in the summer of 2000. It was shown to the Township Planning Commission with the engineers of Christman Co. in attendance.
5. Those representatives of Christman Construction Co. stated publicly at those meetings that an ON-SITE SEPTIC system could be placed on the new school site.
6. The Superintendent, Dr. Sturock, under oath, in a deposition, said...'if the sewer extension did not happen, we would...go back to Marion Township and ask for approval to put a septic field out there...'

"And now, Scrooge, apparently there are so many other construction problems within the new high school that EVERY school dollar must be put to work WISELY to get the new school finished and ready for this fall's opening!

"What is really troubling to many of us is knowing how many warnings about constructing the new school on that site were given to the School!"

"Listen to what the Christman Co. soil report said to Dr. Sturock, in AUGUST, 1999, even BEFORE the bond election was held in October 1999:

"...soil conditions at the potential high school site...you can see there is a large swale (on the) property that has Charlevoix soils. These soils have a potential of large organic materials WHICH YOU CANNOT BUILD UPON..."

"Scrooge, in looking myself at the soils map there is indeed a very large area of CmB soils, the Charlevoix soils spoken about, that swings up northward across the 74 acres, in its large middle swale and then reaches to the southeast area of the new school building site...!"

"...We know too that a large amount of sandy soil was found by the builders in the middle of the south portion of the property near Veenstra Road.That sandy soil was MOVED up to the region of the school building site, apparently to mitigate the effects of the treacherous CmB soils on which a school should not be built, which according to the School's own soils report...Perhaps mitigation efforts did not work well enough...?..."

"But Scrooge,...listen to me please...what is really troubling us again and again is the hurried, headlong - rushed push to build by the Superintendent...without listening to, without considering a lot of suggestions well given and well intended...without considering costs and risks involved...actions that apparently have gotten the School into big construction troubles!"

"If the school,...even a part of it,...is built on soils which are treacherous and unsuited for building...and if the construction proceeded in cold wintry, freezing conditions that increases the risks in the curing of concrete and risks faulty, brittle, crumbling concrete if not enough heat is applied to the curing concrete...then very serious construction problems can result for the School...!!"

"Big problems...costly problems...potentially dangerous problems...for everyone involved..."

"There are even further worries, cited by my engineering friend...even now there is standing water, frozen of course, all around the OUTSIDE of the new school's foundation...What will happen with the spring thaw?..."

"Scrooge, I have to remind you of something the Superintendent paid no mind to back in the early months of the new millennial year of 2000...so long ago. My friend, the 'Ghost of Christmas Past' brought back to me a haunting refrain about the new high school site. Here it is with some added lines:..."

'Wetlands, oh wetlands, where are you now?
'Once you grew corn, you nourished a cow...'
'Once you looked up,...bade,
'Fly by, wild cranes'
'Now you have fears of the cranes of mankind...'

'The scouring rush, those wetlands' signs,
Tho' lost 'neath the tillers,
the growing of corn,
...Lost NOW 'neath the new school's footprint, so large,...
Stood watch o'er the nether, deep wetlands-type soils,...
...Wet soils, shifting, uncertain, unstable,
Bringing caution and fear to the hearts of the builders...'
The scouring rush still waves from the farm,
That stands soggy and wet, in its place right next door.
...ITS scouring rush knew naught of tiller,
of corn...
It NOW hears the moans of the deep-seated soils
That once groaned as the 'cranes of mankind', oer' head,
Plied their craft, shaking fiercely the wet soils beneath."

"Well, Scrooge, those cranes of construction at the new school site have indeed done their work, but...they have not allayed MY fears...or Fezzi's fears about the new School,...

...We fear the enormous COSTS of repairing or replacing water soaked gym floors,...

...We fear the COSTS of repairing brittle concrete and unstable walls...

...We fear the large COSTS to restore the auditorium...the Stairway to the Stars...apparently water soaked and damaged...

...We fear the unmentioned staggering costs to dry out and maintain vast practice fields south of the new school that look more like the rice paddies of southeast Asia than usable fields of play..."

"You see, Scrooge, in none of this has there been any consideration of the costs and consequences to the TAXPAYERS, let alone the students, their parents, and the teachers who will work in the new school...

"Once again...and over and over again, it is the district taxpayers who will bear the added burdens of paying for all of this,...taxpayers and voters who were not INFORMED...

...and were never told 'WHY'...

...the Superintendent and the THREE men of Building and Grounds chose to push the placing of the new school...AND chose to push for the oversized 8 inch INDUSTRIAL-SIZED SEWER line...out into Marion Township,...along Marion Center Road...".

"No one mentioned the other reasons,...the private, non-school business interests that were pushing it, urging it out there...where ZONING and LAND-USE prohibit it, where MEPA's extensive environmental protection provisions persuade against it...!"

"It is a TRAVESTY OF PLANNING, using public taxpayer money in high-risk, foolish, unauthorized planning schemes...and now the PAYOFFS are coming due, in the need to find MORE and MORE MONEY to pay for all of the obvious and apparent mistakes made by the School...I..."

"Scrooge,...I am reminded of a favorite song of Harry Belafonte in which he sings of 'a house built on a rock foundation, it will stand, oh yes.'...

"He DOESN'T sing, NOR did the ancients of biblical times sing, of the building on the shifting, water-saturated, unstable soils that offer uncertainty to the builders of such a large and important new high school...

"If you build on THOSE water-saturated, unpredictable soils', sings Belafonte, 'you will risk that 'those walls may come tumbling down'..."

"Scrooge, I've found NO MONEY TREES in Marion Township, or in all of the Charlevoix School District."

"...in these times, as everyone knows, money is tight, unemployment is up, health care costs are skyrocketing, and this school district's taxpayers will NOT condone this School wasting their school tax dollars on a non-school, totally unnecessary, industrial-sized 8 inch SEWER line..."

"...The school district voters have already REJECTED a school millage increase for school operating money..."

"...The State, itself, increasingly demands accountability of school districts..."

"OUR school district taxpayers DEMAND accountability of THIS School District, this School Board and this School's Superintendent..."

"Scrooge, old Fezzi here...

"I need to remind the taxpayers that the Superintendent has already curtailed much of the proposed renovation of the Elementary School which had the greatest crowding when all of this began..."

"I need to remind the taxpayers that the Superintendent has said in public testimony, under oath, in a deposition, that he'll pay for the whole sewer project out Marion Center Road...regardless of WHAT IT COSTS!..."

"I need to remind the taxpayers that the Superintendent also said in that same deposition that there was NO dissemination to the public, in any literature, of information about the cost of the sewer or the sewer extension prior to the October 1999 bond election..."

"I need to remind the taxpayers that the Superintendent said in the deposition that 'after we sold the bond...after the site was named...there were several questions about the site...it was more of a concern of traffic than...anything else...'"

"I need to remind the taxpayers that on 8/20/99 the Christman Co., the engineering/construction firm building the new school, told Dr. Sturock that...'by this review (of the soil conditions)...at the potential high school site...there is a large swale (on the property) that has Charlevoix soils...These soils have a potential of large organic materials which you cannot build upon...'"

"I need to remind the taxpayers and engineers that that large Charlevoix soil swale extends all the way, in a curving fashion, up to the region of the southeast corner of the building site where the new high school is under construction..."

"I need to remind the taxpayers that in the recent edition of the Charlevoix Courier the following admission by Dr. Sturock was quoted: '(Dr.) Sturock agreed that an extension of the sewer to Ferry Road has never been discussed...'"

...But, taxpayers!...the sewer plans submitted by the John Adams engineering firm to the City of Charlevoix for the sewer that the Superintendent has agreed to pay for shows the extension of the sewer TO FERRY ROAD, and diagrams the 1067 REU's expected from this non-school related sewer extension!...and it is that extension that NEEDS the 8 inch force main, the industrial-sized 8 inch sewer line that is NOT required in any way by the new high school but which the School has agreed to pay for out along Marion Center Road to the region of the new School!..."

"Scrooge,...I'm sorry but our friendly Ghost...the'Ghost of Christmas Present', just left in a bit of a hurry...in order to catch his reliable one-horse sleigh...

...but before he left and drove out of sight, he wanted most of all for the PUBLIC TO KNOW, the taxpayers AND students AND voters to know,...exactly what is going on with the new school..."

"There are large obligations now and there will be enormous obligations imposed on everyone,...now and in the future,...to pay more and more toward a School that is apparently over budget, apparently in serious trouble over faulty and costly construction problems,...but which still insists on committing SCHOOL MONEY to an industrial-sized sewer line...because of a business deal with the City,..."

"It is incredibly foolish planning,...it is absolutely reckless fiscal planning by the School...it appears now that the School runs the added risks of jeopardizing the safety and health and welfare of the students and teachers who will use and attend the new high school...!"

"Scrooge, one quick comment about the high school student who said recently that there is more to the new high school than lawsuits and an oversized sewer...We agree emphatically and wholeheartedly with him. In fact, his comments remind us of aspects of the lawsuit that have relevancy in the lives of our students..."

"The new school is, most of all, about the students learning how they will govern THEIR lives now and in the future...

...It is about their learning what rules and laws they must follow,...what obligations they must assume...who may impose those rules and obligations upon them..."

...It is about how they can best know themselves, their talents, and how they can set about developing those talents, which are given differently in differing measures to each student..."

...It is about what they can expect when they leave the protective confines of this school and other schools they may attend,...most particularly when they assume the responsibility of jobs that will impose very specific requirements upon them..."

"It is about growing into the maturity that will require of them the same things that the school district taxpayers must face now...

...in all the COSTS imposed upon them by a School which did NOT INFORM them fully prior to the voting on the '99 school bond proposal...

...did NOT inform them fully about the new school site before the bond proposal was voted...

...and most certainly did NOT INFORM them of the School commitment with the City to pay ALL of the costs of an unnecessary, oversized, non-school 8 inch industrial-sized sewer line..."

"...The students, their parents, and the teachers need to be reminded that the single most important responsibility of the Superintendent is to insure the safety, health, welfare and educational development of the students and teachers using that new high school...This important community-wide responsibility of his in no way extends to the funding with scarce School money of an 8 inch sewer intended to serve the interests of business and large-scale development and industry...That is SCHOOL MONEY in his hands, to be used solely for ever-increasing, pressing, SCHOOL NEEDS..."

"Scrooge,...

...the TAXPAYERS and voters and students need to remember that our lawsuit in the Court of Appeals says that this School is In violation of the statutes and the State Constitution that govern HOW this School may USE its bond money..."

"...the taxpayers and voters and students must know that there are STATUTES, laws and ordinances that protect their RIGHTS as taxpayers and citizens against the imposition of unnecessary, unwanted and unsought SEWERS to be brought onto or near their property..."

"...the taxpayers and voters and students must understand that there are STATUTES that demand that voters be fully INFORMED about the content and consequences of bond proposals which impose taxes upon the taxpayer-voters who may vote on the proposals..."

"Scrooge! Over and over, the Charlevoix school district taxpayers are INSISTING that the Superintendent 'get on with it,'...

"To do that he should, above all, initiate the following:

1)...put an ON-SITE septic system in for the new high school. That system will completely serve this new school's waste needs and WILL SAVE much needed School money for other School needs...
2)...use increasingly scarce school money to fix up, safely, all parts of the new high school...
3)...and get the new school opened on time this fall...

"Anything less or otherwise is unauthorized, fiscally irresponsible action by the Superintendent..."

"Fezzi, Fezzi, Fezzi!...my old friend, Fezziwig!...I'm finally forced to agree!!...it IS humbug, Fezzi,...pure and simple WASTEFUL, irresponsible humbug, this industrial-sized sewer business...and now, Fezzi, there appear to be risky, serious "HUMBUGS" in the new school construction!..."

"What next, Fezzi?...what will it be next, with this costly new school project?...

"But please, Fezzi,...please be off!...Under my very taxing agreement with the School I need to count up monies and more monies that seem hard to find,...to count nonexistent reimbursements that just aren't there!...Fezzi, I MUST bid you goodnight!"

"Good night, Scrooge. Sleep well...I'll try to reach the 'Ghost of Christmas Present' at his distant place of repose...He should be there by tomorrow, given his swift-moving, reliable one-horse sleigh..."

"I know for sure that he will want to talk with you further, Scrooge, perhaps by these means of e-mail and faxes..."

"...'til then,...sleep well,...ghost-free,...my busy business friend..."

Rayders clinch the conference with win

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders, ranked no. 4 in Class C by the Associated Press, stayed unbeaten and clinched their second straight Lake Michigan Conference championship with a 93-67 win at Elk Rapids last week.

The Rayders (16-0 overall, 9-0 conference) are four games ahead of their closest rivals with only three conference games to play.

It is the second consecutive conference championship and Charlevoix has won 21 straight conference games. During the amazing streak, the Rayders' closest game has been 18 points.

Earlier in the week, Charlevoix manhandled Petoskey, 85-47.

At Elk Rapids, the pesky Elks kept things interesting early before a sellout crowd. The Rayders led early at 4-0 but an Elk Rapids three-pointer cut the lead to one. Charlevoix extended the lead to 10-5, but four straight Elks' points again sliced the lead to one.

Finally a surge keyed by Scott Friske, who dished to Nate Teuscher for a bucket, and then followed by a hoop off the steal of the ensuing inbounds pass, gave the Rayders a little breathing room.

Pat Gowell followed with two free throws and after yet another Elk Rapids three, Scott Parrish hit back-to-back buckets to close the first quarter with a 20-12 Charlevoix lead. Parrish tallied eight points in the first period.

The Rayders extended the lead to 30-14 in the first two minutes of the second quarter on a 10-0 run led by Jim Shepherd's five points and first three-pointer of the night.

Elk Rapids whittled the lead back down to 11 at 36-25 with 2-and-a-half minutes left in the half. The Rayders responded with Scott Friske scoring four more points for a 39-28 advantage.

A bench technical against the Rayders changed the momentum briefly as Elk Rapids scored four points following the call and followed with another free throw to trim the lead to six at 39-33, bringing the partisan crowd back into the ballgame.

Foreshadowing the second half, Shepherd answered the Elks' surge with two free throws to close the first half scoring with Charlevoix ahead, 41-33.

Rob Boss opened the second half for the Rayders with a bucket, followed by Parrish and Scott Friske hoops to push the lead to 47-33. Following an Elk Rapids basket, Shepherd hit his second three-pointer of the night for a 50-35 Charlevoix advantage.

Elk Rapids answered with a basket but a Scott Friske putback and a Parrish jumper bumped the lead to 17 at 54-37 with three minutes to go in the third stanza. The Elks wouldn't roll over though and a 9-1 run brought the lead back into single digits again at 55-46 with 1:30 left in the quarter.

Shepherd answered with a jumper and moments later he answered two Elks' free throws with another three-ball for a 60-48 lead. Nate Teuscher converted one of two free throw attempts to give the Rayders a 61-48 advantage before a rare four-point play cut the lead again to nine, at 61-52.

Teuscher scored again, followed by another Shepherd bomb for three to give Charlevoix a 66-52 margin at the end of three quarters.

The Rayders' pressure and depth finally took its toll on Elk Rapids in the fourth quarter as a 10-4 spurt was later followed by a 10-2 run to put the game away. Five different players scored during these critical runs including six points by Neil Friske. Shepherd and Parrish each scored five in the four-minute span.

Shepherd led all scorers with 29 points including five three-pointers. He also added six steals and five assists. Parrish had 20 points, 11 rebounds and five steals. Scott Friske scored 14 points and pulled down 10 boards. Teuscher had nine points, eight assists and three steals. Ryan Rafacz had five steals and four assists.

On Tuesday, Feb. 12, Petoskey led 6-2 early on before Shepherd sandwiched two three-pointers around a Teuscher hoop to give the Rayders a 10-6 lead. The Northmen fought back and took what would prove to be their last lead at 13-12 on a three-pointer by Damon Huffman with 1:35 left in the first period.

Charlevoix scored the last six points of the first quarter and the first nine of the second to take a 27-13 lead. Seven different players scored in the critical run. Petoskey never threatened again as the Rayders led 41-21 at the half.

The third quarter was more of the same as the pressure defense forced more Petoskey mistakes leading to more Charlevoix layups. A particularly pretty play occurred when Gowell picked off a Petoskey pass and fed Rafacz with a perfect bounce pass in traffic for a layup to give the Rayders a 51-24 advantage.

Charlevoix continued to pull away, leading 66-31 at the end of the third stanza. The final margin of 37 was the Rayders' largest.

Charlevoix travels to Boyne City on Friday. On Tuesday, the Rayders played at Roscommon but results were unavailable at press time.

Fluoride can help keep your family's teeth healthy

F. James Stewart, M.D.
'Your health'

At the turn of the century in 1900, it was noted that the residents of a community in Colorado had an unusual brown coloration to their teeth — Colorado brown stain — and it was subsequently discovered that the town's water supply had significant levels of fluoride.

The nice correlation was that those with the brown stains had essentially no dental cavities. Over the years, many studies have been done on the effects of fluoride in the prevention of cavities and the optimal amounts of fluoride to be used so that the brown stains — flyorosis — do not occur. It is now believed that the optimal levels of fluoride in our drinking water in 1 milligrams a liter — one part per million — with .7 milligrams a liter in warmer climates and 1.2 milligrams a liter in cooler climates.

When we ingest fluoride, it incorporates into the dentin and enamel of developing teeth and renders these teeth more resistant to acid demineralization. Thus, fewer cavities as teeth mature.

Bacteria in our mouth ferment the sugars that we ingest in food, candy and gum, and as this metabolism occurs, acid is produced which interacts with the surface of the tooth causing demineralization and the production of tiny white spots within the enamel layer. As long as the surface enamel layer is intact, small amounts of fluoride in the oral cavity can repair these early lesions and not let cavities develop.

It is thought that many of these "repaired" teeth are stronger and more resistant to bacterial change than the original enamel layer. Fluoride can attach to dental plaque and serve as a reservoir within the mouth and can break away and serve as a free ion when the acid level in the mouth rises, allowing the remineralization to occur.

In the 1950s, fluoridation of public water began to occur across the country. This is the result of local governmental decisions, however, and will vary from state to state and from county to county.

Well water is generally deficient in fluoride and reverse osmosis water-filtration systems do result in reduced fluoride levels at the tap. Charcoal filters do not reduce fluoride levels. State and local health departments should be able to test your own water source for fluoride content.

Even if your water supply is fluoride-deficient, however, supplementation is easy and inexpensive and cost-effective.

Fluoride is available in drops, tablets and lozenges, which can be used once a day after brushing teeth. There is not thought to be benefit from taking fluoride-supplemented megavitamins as they are swallowed and not held in the mouth where the fluoride produces its maximal effect.

Fluoride incorporated into tooth paste is probably the easiest and most efficient means of protecting our teeth, but "over-brushing" of children's teeth can result in fluorosis or "Colorado Brown Stain" due to excessive exposure or children using too much tooth paste due to its pleasing taste.

Fluoride containing mouth rinses can be purchased in all drug stores and many grocery stores. The concentration is usually 1 milligram fluoride per teaspoon — 5 milliliters — and is intended to be used as a rinse and not swallowed. These rinses are usually used only in adults at risk for cavities and not intended for children.

Bottled water contains no fluoride supplements, but may contain natural fluoride, depending on its source.

Fluoride supplementation should not begin before 6 months of age and there is not evidence that ingestion of fluoride by pregnant women provides any additional protection for their offspring's developing teeth.

As parents and consumers, we must be aware of the benefits of fluoride and the realization that more is not necessarily better.

Students to explore war issues with play

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix High School's performing arts group will present an original musical, "Homeland," this weekend.

"The play is about changes that occur because of war," said Connie Ford, director of Homeland and the performing arts instructor at Charlevoix High School.

"We thought this would be appropriate because of the incident that happened in New York and what happened to the families and to the people making decisions during that time."

The story is based on World War II. All elements of the musical including the set, the performers and their costumes and hairstyles create a time traveling experience.

However, exact accounts of World War II is not Homeland's focus; rather, Ford explained, the play as a depiction of war in general.

"This is a story about what war implies and what happens to society when freedoms are challenged," she said.

Sixty Charlevoix High School students have teamed up to present the musical to their fellow students and the public.

Performances are scheduled to take place at 7:30 p.m., Feb. 23 in the gym at Charlevoix High School and at 2 p.m., Feb. 24, also in the gym.

Tickets for "Homeland" are available at the high school's front office and at the door.

Adult tickets are $5 and $3 discounted tickets are available for students and senior citizens.

Township to relook at its turbine ordinance

TURBINES

would be a public hearing taking place Aug. 28, 2001 at the Eveline Township Hall. After Brian Graham, the township attorney from Bellaire, reviewed the postings, he found the residents' claims were valid.

"There was supposed to be a line (in the posting) about the exact time and place the ordinance can be reviewed in its entirety," Skrzeczkoski said.

He added, the township board felt the missing information didn't cause the zoning ordinance to be invalid, but it decided it would rather be safe than sorry.

Graham encouraged the township board to re-notice the ordinance and to have the public hearing once again, so there is no question as to whether or not the document is valid.

"The possibility of this ending up in court is high. Because we have that concern, we want our 't's' crossed and our 'i's' dotted. We don't want the township caught in the middle," Skrzeczkoski said.

Skrzeczkoski said the re-notification and the new round of public hearings might be giving township residents a second chance, but that wasn't the board's ultimate goal.

Now, the planning commission will review the ordinance and it can either accept it as is, or make changes.

If major changes are made, there will be a second public hearing that will occur before the township board. However, Skrzeczkoski said, the wind turbine generator section most likely won't be omitted.

Skrzeczkoski offered the example of Bay Township where a court battle is currently underway as a result of a zoning ordinance that excluded wind turbines.

"In Bay Township the wind turbine generator question was addressed by not allowing for wind turbines. My feeling is if you don't allow for them you are creating an exclusionary ordinance and that more than likely won't hold up in court," he explained.

In the meantime, Smiley, Ralph Richardson and Dawson Way — who have applied for the wind turbine generators — will have to wait to locate two and five generators, respectively, on the residents' two parcels of Eveline Township farmland.

But Richardson is in no hurry.

"It's fine; these things happen. I have six or seven years until I'll really need the income from the wind turbines," he said.

"I can be patient. This just means instead of having a couple of us at the public hearing there will be about 40 of us."

Richardson said he's confident the township board will adopt the same ordinance. He's a member of the Charlevoix County Planning Commission and said zoning laws stipulate ordinances must allow for any reasonable land use.

"Wind turbines are a reasonable use and so they have to provide a place to have them," he said.

He added the planning commission can set conditions on the special use permit to apply to the wind towers.

The zoning ordinance which was already adopted by the township, allowed for wind turbines with restrictions.

A planning commission meeting took place Feb. 13. Smiley asked permission to install the wind monitoring tower under the existing zoning.

He argued that in most townships there exists regulations to allow temporary installations.

Planning commission chairman Barry Wood told Smiley the commission is only an advisory board, and as such, doesn't have the authority to authorize the temporary installation. Wood further explained that the township's zoning ordinance doesn't allow for temporary installations.

No action related to the wind turbine generators was taken at the planning commission meeting.

The tale of the Shapton scythe stuck in the tree

Clayton Smith

'Country living'

I want to talk a little bit about the Shapton brothers. There were four brothers and one sister in the family. There was Ed and Will, Tom and Dick, but no Harry. Lee Shapton, who told me this story, was Will's son.

They lived near Stratford, Ontario. They had a very small farm and four growing boys, probably in their early 20s or late teens. There wasn't enough work on the farm and they wanted to come to the United States.

They didn't have much money and they decided they were young fellows with lots of vim and vigor and could walk. They walked all the way from Stratford to Sarnia. There was a row-boat there they could rent and row across the river, which was quite narrow there, and make their way to the United States.

Then, they struck across Michigan from Port Huron and they had some connections— they knew the Earl Knight family that was originally from their area in Canada. From that area across to the Atwood-Norwood area would have been close to 200 miles. I don't know how long it took them, but I would imagine it took 10 days to two weeks to walk that far.

They told of walking, and the only food they had was a little bit of rolled oats with husks still on. Evidently, there weren't very many settlements in those days and a lot of wild land, especially as they got further north. They had what they called a "poke." Lee said by the time they got across Michigan, their throats were so raw from eating the raw oats, probably a result of the rough husks and not thoroughly cleaned. Anyway, they made it across and arrived at the Knight farm sometime in the fall.

The Knights lived on quite a large farm off what is now known as Rex Beach Road. The big, old house is still there.

Mr. Knight told the Shapton boys they could put up a lean-to next to the barn and they could have a meal with them occasionally. So, they helped cut wood, harvest and thresh grain. In those days, threshing grain was all hand work. From what I gathered, there were no threshing machines.

They lived at the Knight farm that winter and during the next spring went looking for land. Evidently, they had heard of the Burns family in Barnard that they had probably known from Canada. The boys came to Barnard and kind of liked the looks of the land in that area and decided to settle there.

Ed Shapton lived where the Dhaseleer farm is now. He married Elizabeth Bennett, who we called Aunt Libby. She was my grandmother's sister. So, we are tied into the Shapton and Bennett families.

Tom Shapton lived on the corner of Ferry and Barnard roads, where my brother Carl did, for 40 or 50 years. He was a cheese factory man and promoted cheese factories. He owned the land running back over the hill on Ferry Road and he had the cheese factory on the side hill on the north side of Ferry Road. Cheese Factory Hill is the name of one of the larger hills on Ferry Road.

I remember finding different utensils and containers that were laying around 50, 60 or maybe 70 years ago which were evidence of the old cheese factory.

Will Shapton settled where Tim LaBlance lives now. There have been several people who have owned it including my brother Carl for about 30 years. Carl never lived there, but rented it to some people and he harvested the hay. This is one of the better farms on Barnard Road with 60 or 70 acres of fields that aren't too steep and most of them can be worked. The back part of the farm is on Stover Creek.

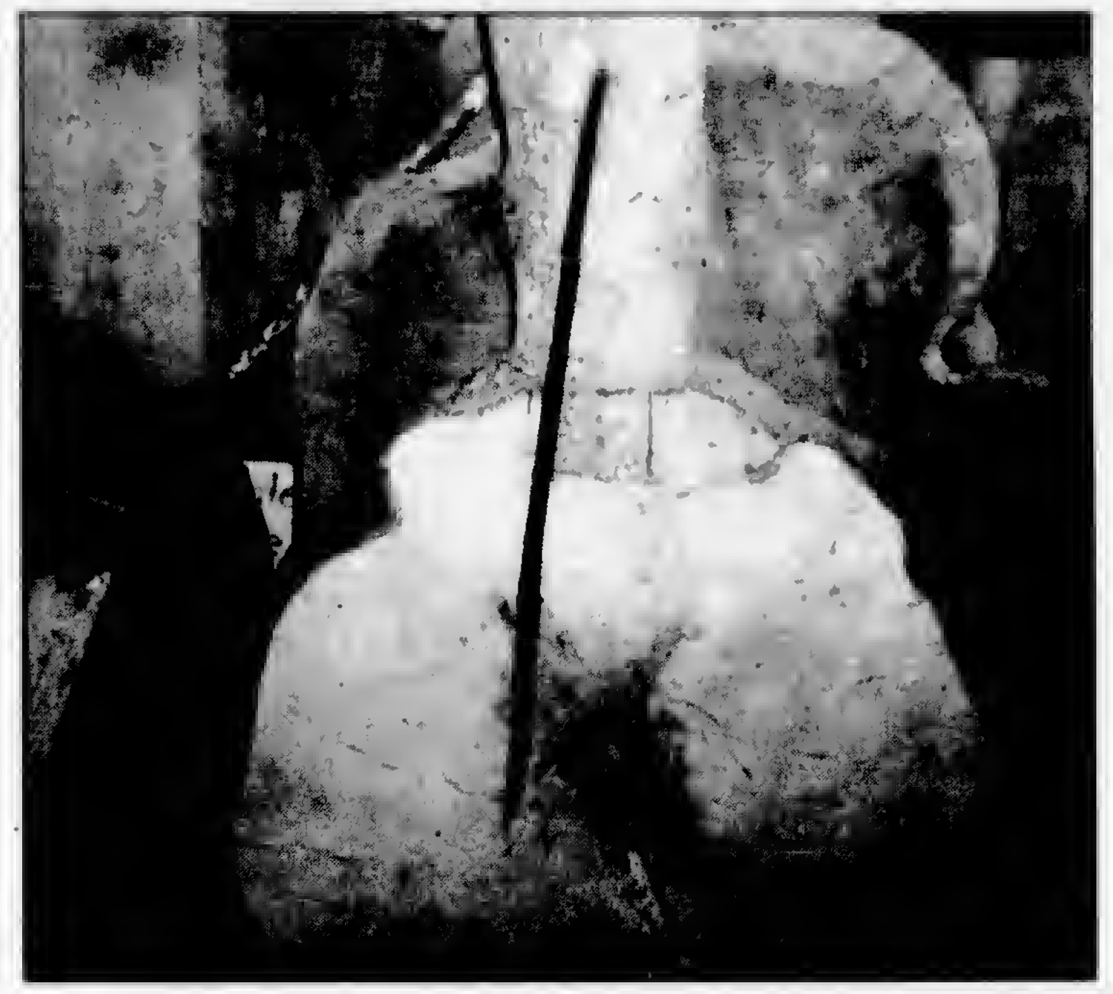
The other brother, Richard or Dick as he was called, lived over north of the Belvedere Golf Course. Myrl Keller lives there now.

My brother Carl owned that farm and he had a little over 100 head of Hereford cattle. He bred cows and they would have 50 calves and some young cattle with replacement heifers and steers that he would butcher.

One day, Carl was fixing the fence over by the edge of the woods by Stover Creek when he came upon an old scythe. A scythe has a long blade with a wooden handle that you could use to cut hay or grass. This scythe had been in a tree for probably 85 or 90 years. Will Shapton lived there and then he moved to what is now Barnard Road. The original road that was settled at that time was back along Stover Creek. There were quite a few farms there. Will moved in 1912 and built the house and barn in their present location.

So, it would have been about 1900 when Will Shapton hung this scythe in the tree and evidently forgot where it was. Carl spotted it up in the tree about seven or eight feet where it had moved up and hung up quite high. The tree had grown around it and the scythe was about 16 or 18 inches above the crotch.

My brother took me, Lee Shapton, Mick and Tim LaBlance back to see it one day. The Shaptons were always quite interested and we had taken Lee back that time, but I hadn't been back there since then. I thought I knew about where it was.



This scythe has been stuck in this tree for about 80 to 90 years. (Courtesy photo)

Some of the Shaptons grandchildren wanted to go back to see the scythe their great-grandfather had hung in this tree. So, I made an appointment to take them out there at 10 a.m. the next morning. That evening, I decided that maybe I had better go out to see if I could find that scythe and see if it was still in the tree. I could drive practically to the back of the farm. I thought I could walk right to it. But, I couldn't find it because the leaves had grown so thick it just didn't look the same. I walked past it about four times and couldn't find it.

Dick Way owns the property now and had told me that if I wanted to cut it, I could have that tree truck. I called him up and told him I was out there trying to find that tree and I couldn't find it. He said, "Come on out and I'll take you right now."

Well, it was about 9 p.m. and I was kind of tired. So, I said, "Well, I am kind of pooped out, but we'll find it. There will be six people there tomorrow morning."

We met the Shaptons and couldn't find it. I just couldn't take them to it. We hunted there for quite a while and I finally gave up on finding it. I was back in the car waiting for them when I heard them holler, "We've found it." Alice Shapton had located it.

My son, Randy, was there from Grand Rapids. He had a chain saw and we were cutting some wood. We went out after dinner on a Saturday this fall and cut part of that tree out. I have it now and it's quite a story of the early settlers putting the scythe in the tree, losing or misplacing it.

Charlevoix High School ski team taking on state

STATE

Smith in second, Roscoe Serrels in third and Chad Johnson in eleventh. That's when fourth-seeded freshman sensation Kelsey Barnard, who after the first GS run was in fourth, had a mishap when his ski pre-released and was a DNF.

With the sudden turn of events, the Rayders were concerned but they've been there before. Coach Sue Miller promptly radioed assistant coach George Pete and instructed him to have fifth seed Taylor Fisher make it down the course at all costs.

Miller said that not only did he finish the race, but he had perhaps the best run of his life by finishing twenty-third and solidified Charlevoix's second place GS finish, 14 points behind Petoskey and 40 points ahead of third place Iron Mountain.

Mike Dupuis ended up forty-second.

With their commanding lead over third place Iron Mountain and fourth place Kingsford, to qualify for states, all the Rayders had to do in the afternoon SL was stand up. That ended up being harder than expected.

In the first SL run, their top four seeds made it down and once again they had four skiers in the top twelve. Next up was GS hero Taylor Fisher who had trouble at the bottom and was a DNF. Lexi Wilson was solid and ended up in the middle of the pack.

As long as the Rayders didn't make any mistakes in their second run, they looked assured to qualify.

In his second SL run, Barnard pushed defending state SL champion to his limit and was a solid second. That's when the meet got interesting.

York Smith, known for his cool nerves and fast skis had a glitch and ended up hiking. He finished thirty-second. Meanwhile, the teams behind Charlevoix were coming on strong, which meant the next three Rayder skiers had to finish strong or their chances of returning to the states could be in jeopardy.

Serrels and Johnson did their jobs by skiing conservatively and finished thirteenth and twelfth to set up the heroics of Lexi Wilson. The senior skiing in the sixth seed did the improbable and finished twenty-ninth.

Wilson's run secured Charlevoix's second place finish and earned them a trip to Marquette to take on Petoskey, Iron Mountain, Glenn Lake, Suttons Bay, Traverse City Christian/St. Francis, Cranbrook, East Grand Rapids and Detroit Country Day.

Shulick gets 30-50 years

Thomas Aryon Shulick, 22, of Charlevoix, will be spending the next 30 to 50 years of his life in prison for the April 29, 2001 murder of Elk Rapids resident Scott Cook at the Charlevoix Municipal Marina.

Shulick learned his fate at a sentencing hearing Feb. 20 in the Charlevoix County Circuit Court. He had previously been convicted of second degree murder in the killing of Cook.

Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur said she, as well as Cook's family, is pleased with the sentence.

"He (Shulick) will be 52 years old before there is even any thought of letting him out," she said.

The sentence was a deviation from the sentencing guidelines. Under the guidelines, Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas could have given Shulick a minimum of 13-and-a-half years to 22-and-a-half years or life in prison.

Pajtas said the sentencing guidelines do not take into account the fact that Cook did not die instantly and suffered for many hours. Pajtas said Cook knew he was going to die and was in great fear.

"I am sure there were many people in this county who went out last night and got drunk, were offended, but did not go out and kill somebody," Pajtas said. "(Shulick's) only explanation is the demon liquor made him do it."

A tearful Shulick addressed the court and the family of Cook at the sentencing, saying, "I am sorry. Sorry doesn't even come close to how I feel. I know there is nothing anyone can say, especially me, that can ease anyone....I am at your mercy, your honor."

He added, "I want Mr. (Scott) Cook's family to know, if I could take his place, I would."

Cook's mother and father fought through tears as they read a prepared statement to the court and Shulick.

"Tom Shulick, you stood before all of us and said he (Scott Cook) did not deserve to die. He meant everything to us," said Susan Cook, Scott Cook's mother. "Shulick, we wish you had been made to attend Scott's funeral. You would have seen how many people he touched."

Ken Cook, Scott Cook's father, added, "The pain you have inflicted on our family is too much to bear. You ended his life on this Earth and we weren't ready to give him up. Every day we wake up with a heavy sadness that lies in the background of our emotions."

He added, "Your honor, we will never hear the sound of our son's voice saying, 'I love you, mom. I love you, dad.'"

"Now Shulick, it is your turn to be a victim of your choice. Shulick, when you are in jail, remember every Sunday at 4:02 p.m.," Ken Cook said.

Police chief returns from Olympics

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix City Police Chief, Dennis Halverson, arrived back in town today after three weeks of intense, volunteer security work at the Olympic Winter Games.

"I was an Olympics fan before, but it's hard to grasp the magnitude of it from home. The security and the amount of work that goes into it is amazing — there are 26,000 volunteers there. It's quite an undertaking to put this on," he said.

During his three-week stay in Salt Lake City, Utah as part of the Olympic security team, Halverson walked almost 200 miles, met Olympiads from across the globe and earned his own piece of Olympic glory.

Halverson said it was an amazing and gratifying experience to be part of the most extensive security undertaking to occur on United States soil in the history of the nation. He was one of 600 police officers from local communities that took time off from their work, families and lives to voluntarily promote safety at the Olympic Games.

"There's a lot going on. I have made no arrests, but security is very tight," he said Feb. 21 while still in Salt Lake City.

Not only is there a massive group of volunteers but, Halverson said, there were more soldiers from the U.S. Army stationed in Salt Lake than there were in Afghanistan.

This was Halverson's first time visiting Utah and he said the scenery was breathtaking. Salt Lake City is a community that rests in a valley between two mountain ranges.

He didn't have a lot of time to soak in his surroundings. In fact, he worked 12 hour days, six days a week, from Feb. 12 until he left. He said the activity was physically challenging and the community's high altitude, compared to that of Charlevoix, made things difficult at first.

Several of the security officials were sick from exposure to outdoor weather conditions for almost 10 hours a day.

At 7:45 a.m., Feb. 21, Halverson and a group of officers from Alaska, California, Wisconsin and New Jersey were en route to their daily, morning security briefing. He said the briefings alert security personnel of any important information from previous shifts.

After the briefing, the 100 federal and local officers were paired up into two man response teams — one local

Northwest band going to state finals

The Northwest Academy Band recently qualified for the State Band Festival scheduled to take place the weekend of April 19 through April 21.

At the District II Band Festival of the Michigan Band and Orchestra Association in Petoskey, Feb. 23, judges hailed the Northwest band as small but mighty.

One of the judges wrote, "It is so gratifying to hear so much music coming from this group. You are a testament to the fact that 'small' doesn't mean inferior!"

The band, one of the smallest in attendance, is made up of 23 Northwest students from grades seven through 12.

This group has a total instrumentation of four flutes, two clarinets, one bass clarinet, one alto saxophone, one tenor saxophone, one baritone saxophone, four trumpets, one baritone, three trombones, one tuba, one string bass and three percussion.

Band director Gary Stutzman said other groups in District II were comprised of over 100 players.

The Northwest players received an "I" at the district competition, the highest possible score.

The Northwest Band performed three selections for its "prepared performance" competition: "The Nutmeggars," which is a march and two concert selections; "Variations on American Sailing Songs" and the "Waltz from Eugenia Onegen."

They were also judged for sight reading during which time the band played two selections after only seven minutes of study.

Stutzman proclaimed this festival to be the high point of his long career.

"In my years of directing bands, we have received many first division ratings, but never before have I had a band receive so many superlative comments on the judging sheets. The band members, their parents and the community of Charlevoix should be duly proud of what these young people have accomplished," he said.

The location of the festival has not yet been determined.

The Northwest Academy Advanced Band recently took top honors in district competition. They are (back row, left to right) Josh Toton, Brandon Londgren, Trevor Londgren, Emily Vandeweigh, Gary Stutzman, director, Jeff Riley, Rick Smith, Joe Sievertson, Margaurite Gilewitz, Elizabeth Shepard, Amanda Seidel, C.J. Toton, Craig Wellscot and Devon Toton. (Front row, left to right) Heather Starks, Jacque Riley, Rachel Bellairs, Carolyn Bellairs, Jerusha Londgren, Trisha Watkins, Kristy Trudeau, Peter Londgren, Kelly Hand and Celia McGee. City should work to preserve our history

EDITORIAL

Losing reminders of its history can damage a community.

History is one of the greatest teachers for a community. It gives a community respect and pride in itself, as well as teaches.

One of the easiest reminders of the history of a community can not be found in ancient government documents at city hall or a historical society. The true history of a community can be found in the very buildings that make it up.

The buildings that make up a town, are the face of that town. They tell the story of past generations who worked hard to build a community.

But, far too often, our leaders do not realize this.

For many in government, they do not understand the benefit of spending money to make and restore an old building. To them it is more beneficial to just tear down the offending structure and replace it with something new.

Such is the case with the Brookside Cemetery Chapel.

Here we have a building that speaks volumes on the early history of our community. The cement blocks that make up this structure alone tell of the great pride we took in fine craftsmanship.

However, the building is in need of repairs and the city leaders are not sure if we should spend the money to make those repairs. Instead, they think it may be more cost effective to just tear the old building down.

Can we really put a price on our history? Is it really cost effective to take examples of our history away? No.

The Brookside Chapel should be saved and restored.

As for money to repair the building, it is there in the form of state grants and donations. Heck, if our city leaders can find close to $2 million in grants to tear down the Wharfside building in downtown Charlevoix, they should be able to find some money to save a building too.

Instead of spending all our time finding ways and money to destroy our history, perhaps it is time our leaders found a way to preserve it.

Great Depression gave writer great life lessons

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

I am uncomfortable with people who describe themselves as having been personally blessed.

It seems to suggest that the whole world has somehow been altered in their favor, and, I have to suspect, to the disadvantage of some unknown others. But for myself, I must say that a rural, agricultural, poverty-stricken childhood during the Great Depression did provide some of what must be called blessings.

We certainly did not have the blessing of great food, although there was most often a sufficiency of it. I suppose it is heresy of a kind, but I must say that my mother was not much of a cook. Once you got past what was truly remarkable chocolate cake — we called it devil's food — mother knew little about cooking or canning beyond the bare necessities.

She had other things that needed doing, like milking cows, feeding chickens and providing a clean house for people who carried in more dirt, grease and dust daily than most households see in a lifetime. All that in a home where the nearest source of water was a well about 75 yards away.

Nor were we blessed with great education, although there was a school. My teacher for seven of the first eight grades was Miss Laura Kvaal, who attended a six month teacher training program at what was called a Normal School. At the tender age of 18, she was put in charge of the education of approximately 30 people varying in age from 5 to nearly 16.

After 16, a person could leave school even if they had not completed the eighth grade. We did learn, but under conditions that in today's world would cause the state to close the school immediately.

What blessings were available? I did not realize what they were for decades, until I eventually compared my youth with that of contemporaries I met in later life.

During the years before school and all through the summers, my sisters and I spent enormous amounts of time with our parents. Before I was able to work in the fields, that is before I was about 12 years old, we all helped around the house.

When I was quite young, I spent hours on end watching my mother doing all the things she did in the course of a day, from churning butter out of the accumulated cream to washing clothes in a gasoline-powered machine with a hand-cranked wringer.

During those hours we talked; not all the time, but often. I harbor the suspicion that our conversations were more instructive than any number of hours in school. I did not learn geometry at my mother's knee, but I learned a great deal about living and how one goes about it.

When I was old enough to help with the field work, the time was most often with my father. We regularly worked 10 to 12 hour days together, often near enough to speak to one another. I learned what my father knew about work and how it must be done. My father had little by way of philosophical bent, but he was 30 years older than I was and had an interesting life. I learned much of what his life had taught him; things for which there was no educational curriculum in any school.

I would not trade what we have now by way of education and life experience for what we had in the 1930s, but if there were a way of causing children and young people to spend the sort of time with caring parents that we spent with ours, I would pursue it diligently.

We were blessed with the time and thought of our parents in ways that are nearly impossible for most people now.

I certainly don't want to go back there, nor would I wish my life on anyone else, but the blessings of intense, almost continuous, daily, diligent parental interaction with growing children may still be as valuable as they were then.

Thank you

Editor:

I am incredibly proud of and grateful to all of the blood donors, volunteers, Community Reformed staff and the American Red Cross staff for the wonderful blood-mobile on Jan. 17 in Charlevoix.

The day was wintery. It was snowing and blustery, and yet, donors arrived steadily throughout the afternoon and waited ever so patiently with old and new friends to give blood.

Donors and volunteers gave generously of their time. Prior to the drive, donors were called by volunteers and many ovens were switched on to bake a simply irresistible buffet of desserts for the blood drive. Posters were displayed all over town and city employees put up the bloodmobile banners.

The Lions Club of Charlevoix worked to set up and take down the Less school breaks

Editor:

I am a young lady attending the Charlevoix Middle School. I think we should decrease the number of breaks during the year so we may have a longer summer vacation. We get out of school on June 13 and we are back the day after Labor Day. Look at Concord Boyne — they get out on June 7, but it's still earlier than us.

One reason to have a longer vacation is because it's earlier. All breaks have become longer and more frequent than when most parents were in school. Also, as a result of extending mid-term breaks, we get a shorter summer vacation.

Another reason is to have a more educational summer. Other schools with shorter mid-term breaks get a longer vacation and experience new things if they have time to travel. Even with shorter/less frequent breaks, we would still get the required number of days of school.

Finally, this is another way to save money. Half days cost just as much as full days, but have less education. The buses still need to go to and from people's houses. I hope that you will consider making the breaks shorter or less frequent so summer vacation can be longer. Thanks again.

Charlevoix Middle School

Editor:

I'm a sixth grade student attending the Charlevoix Middle School. I've been wondering, is the middle school going to be put to a good use? Well, I think we should turn it into a recreation center. First, if we turned the school into a recreation center, we would be preserving a historical building. The middle school was built in 1927 and is now considered a historical site. Also, in Charlevoix, there are not many historic sites left to see.

Another reason is that the center would provide good activities for everyone. There would be all different kinds of athletics. Day care would also be available and so would other activities for all ages.

This center would give everyone a place to go whenever they want. Some parents work in the summer and kids have nothing to do. With a recreation center, they could go hang out and have fun. Finally, gyms aren't always open to people for use. Normally, the gyms are locked and you can't get in unless you have a key. I hope you will take my thought into consideration and maybe put it into action.

How to improve traffic

Editor:

I am a sixth grade student at Charlevoix Middle School. I would like to tell you my ideas for improving downtown traffic and increasing customers in the summer. Traffic is so bad it takes about 10 to 20 minutes just to get through town. I think, if you wanted to improve this issue, you could eliminate the parking spaces on either side of Bridge Street and make them into lanes. Next, you can attempt to make more parking spaces on the side streets.

Also, the bridge goes up too much. When boats come through, it takes 5 to 10 minutes just for the bridge to go up and down. Instead of opening the bridge every hour and half hour, you could open it every hour, or every two hours. Doing this could enlarge the number of people going to downtown businesses. The tourists might like all the commotion, but some of us residents don't. If you attempt to change this, you could get more customers year-round.

Support school uniforms

Editor:

I'm a sixth grader at Charlevoix Middle School. I think that there should be uniforms at school. For one reason, people get teased all the time, just because of what they wear! I think that is very rude. People who wear better clothes are more popular and that does not surprise me at all. Also, we'll all be equal if we get uniforms. No one will get teased or be hurt. Actually, people will feel better about themselves. Everyone is even and no one is richer than one other person.

Next, no one can break the rules about wearing clothes. You can't break the rules if we have uniforms because you couldn't wear clothes that wouldn't be approved by the handbook. You would be following the dress code. Then there will be a lot less trouble here at Charlevoix Middle School.

Finally, we'll all be happy, even the teachers will be happy. I hope the parents and Charlevoix Public Schools will require uniforms so we will all be happy.

Recipes, who needs them?

By DAN GILMORE
Pastor
Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene

Beacons of Blessing

The title pretty well sums up my sentiment when it comes to cooking.

I enjoy cooking, but do not particularly like following a recipe. They are so hard to read anyway, especially when you've just spilled tomato sauce on the page.

Furthermore, the dish can always be improved by my expert modifications. When the recipe calls for all purpose flour, any cook worth his salt knows you should substitute whole wheat flour. Ingredient lists always call for too much sugar, and never enough eggs. Then, there's the brilliant substitution of pinto beans for beef in those Mexican casserole dishes.

By now, I'm sure you recognize that you're peering inside the mind of one of the world's foremost chefs. The challenge, however, is convincing my family of that fact.

When dad's in the kitchen, suddenly going out to eat swells to majority opinion (countered, of course, by the reminder that our home is a monarchy, not a democracy.)

Mercilessly, I'm assaulted by complaints like, "Dad, what did you put in this stuff?" or, "Mom, is cooking tonight isn't she?"

Consider the sting of hearing your daughter say, "Dad this is yucky! But I still love you." Alas, a master chef is not without honor, safe in his own house.

All joking aside, we are free to "improve" cooking recipes, but the recipe for true success and eternal life cannot be tampered with.

Far too many people approach the Bible the way I approach Betty Crocker, with a take it or leave it attitude. Unlike human recipes, the Holy Bible is absolutely perfect, exclusively revealing our only means of salvation, and God's will.

Jesus was not stating his opinion when he said, "I am the way, the truth and the life: No man cometh unto the Father but by me," (John 14:6). He was proclaiming an eternal reality with nothing less than everlasting consequences.

God's clear decree is, "As I live, saith the Lord every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God. So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God," (Romans 14:11-12).

Tragically, so many go out to meet the Lord every day, unprepared. Others recklessly sit as judge of the Bible.

Instead, we should consider that God Almighty says, "To this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word," (Isaiah 66:2). How blessed are they who heed the truth, "that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live," (Deuteronomy 8:3).

May you enjoy salvation and sanctification in Jesus Christ the Lord, by the quick and powerful "recipe" of God. May you possess the peace and joy that comes by living in the word of God daily. God bless you. "Worship the Lord in the beauty of Holiness," (1 Chronicles 16:29).

Committee to determine fate of Brookside Chapel

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix City Council recently passed the 2002-2003 city budget, which allocates $10,000 to demolishing the chapel in Brookside Cemetery, but that doesn't mean the building will come down.

"Even if we leave it (the money for the demolition) in the budget we don't necessarily have to use it, do we," Norman Carlson, first ward councilman, asked City Manager Mike Wiesner during the Feb. 18 city council meeting.

Wiesner told Carlson the budget could be passed with the money there, without guaranteeing it would be used.

"From a staff point of view, we don't plan on bidding it out for demolition; we are waiting for further direction from council," Wiesner said in a later interview.

The demolition money for Brookside Chapel is part of the city's capital plan for the upcoming budget year. But, community interest may have saved it from demolition.

A group of residents told city administrators they feel the site is of historic value and should be kept.

In lieu of the community interest, on Feb. 18, city council met at the site with interested community members, and has held out the possibilities for its future.

John Haggard, an advocate for saving the chapel, said the most critical question that now needs to be answered is how the building can be used in the future.

Haggard mentioned the possibility of the building acting as a Mausoleum for people who wish to be buried above ground or renovating it for funeral service use.

Before motioning to pass the budget, Carlson suggested the city form a committee to perform a feasibility study concerning the possible uses of Brookside Chapel.

"There is enough support to warrant a committee to look into the possibility of renovating the building. We should leave that option open," Carlson said.

Council agreed this option deserves further attention and moved forward with passing the new budget which will go into effect April 1, 2002.

History of hotels discussion

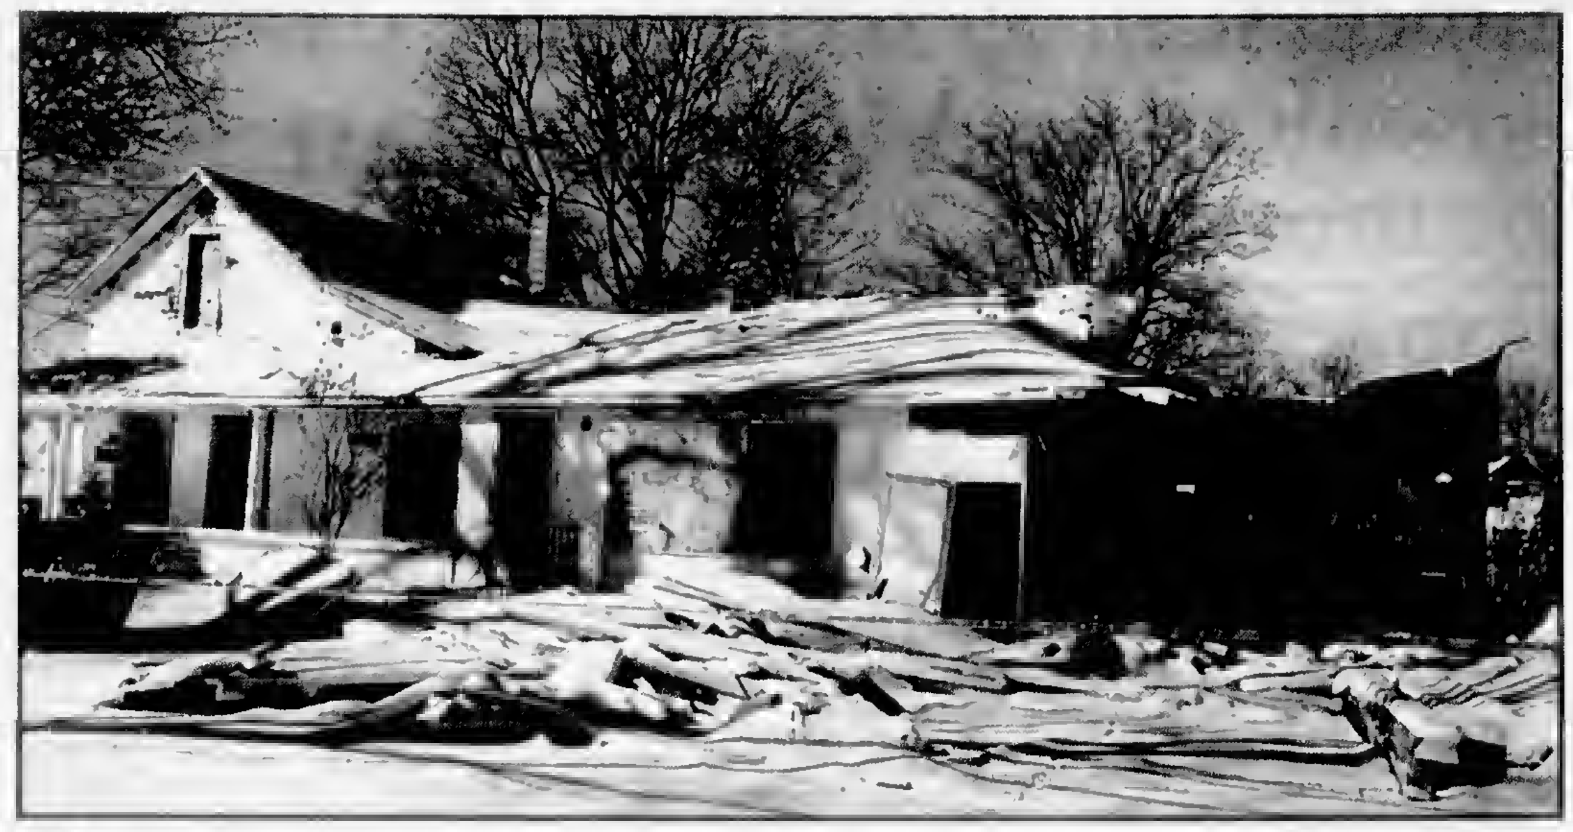
The Charlevoix Historical Society's co-director, David L. Miles, will discuss A Century of Hotels in Charlevoix, 1867-1967, at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, March 5 in the historic Depot at the east end of Dixon Avenue.

In addition to the history of several smaller hotels, the presentation will include the development of the Belvedere, the Inn, and the Beach, the three big hotels which together made Charlevoix one of the premier resort destinations of the Midwest in the first half of the twentieth century.

Meeting in the very depot where years ago hundreds of vacationers with their trunks and hat boxes arrived every day by special resort trains, listeners will also hear about the great liners that carried resorters into the harbor and about the growth of the tourist industry of the past 135 years.

The public is invited to attend at no charge.

Call the Charlevoix Historical Society at 547-0373 for more information.



Cause determined

According to Charlevoix Fire Chief Douglas Carver, the fire that destroyed this Mason Street home Feb. 15 started in the garage (far right) probably in a light fixture. He said the wiring in the home was very old and there was no other source of heat in the garage area to start the fire.

Shulick sentenced for murder at marina

Shulick's attorney, Ardjen Greydanus, argued for lenience, saying Shulick made a terrible mistake under the influence of alcohol. He added Cook's death was not premeditated by Shulick.

"We don't have a case of an evil person. He caused the death of Mr. Cook under certain circumstances, but he (Shulick) is not an evil person," Greydanus said. "I have represented bad persons in the past and Mr. Shulick is not a bad person."

Greydanus said Shulick did a terrible thing that night at the marina and has said from the beginning that he would take responsibility for it.

However, Kur argued, Shulick should be removed from society for as long as possible because he is unstable and dangerous.

"It is incomprehensible to any reasonable person that he (Shulick) took the action he took," she said. "Is he a loose cannon, set off by every little thing or was this an aberration? I urge the court to rule on the side of caution."

Shulick left at 7 a.m., Feb. 21 for a Jackson prison. Depending on his security needs, he could be transferred to another prison in the future.

Cook's death resulted from an incident in the early morning hours of April 29, 2001 at the Charlevoix Municipal Marina where Shulick stabbed Cook in the abdomen with a knife. Cook died around 4 p.m. on April 29.

Charlevoix council votes to support Yucca plan

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix City Council voted in favor of writing letters to state and federal government officials supporting plans to centralize storage of spent nuclear fuel currently being stockpiled in Charlevoix and across the country.

The letters will be sent to Debbie Stabenow, Michigan's Senator; Spencer Abraham, secretary of the Department of Energy; and Bart Stupak, a United States Congressman.

Council's decision followed a Feb. 16 announcement, by president George Bush, about the government's proposal to relocate used nuclear fuel nationwide, to Yucca Mountain in Nevada.

The plan is a follow up to the Department of Energy's Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982, which mandated spent nuclear fuel be stored at one central location.

Just after Bush made the announcement, the state of Nevada filed a lawsuit to block the plan. However, the federal government can override the suit in the 90 day time frame that follows the filing of the claim.

Tim Petrosky, director of public relations for Big Rock Point, told council the earliest Yucca Mountain will be opened is 2010. If shipping of Charlevoix's fuel starts in 2010, Petrosky estimated the site would be fuel free by 2011.

The government has spent $7 billion and 20 years studying the mountain, making it the most extensively studied piece of real estate in history. The money for the study was funded through $18 billion in funds collected by the Department of Energy from rates charged to users of nuclear energy by Consumer's Power.

Nevada has no nuclear power plants, but federal nuclear weapons testing was once done at the site and the government said it has found the site to be a safe storage location.

"If there is a better site in the world, I don't know where that is," Petrosky told council.

When asked about the possibility of Yucca Mountain being an easy target for terrorists, Petrosky said one site is easier for the federal government to protect than numerous sites.

"I believe it is obviously safer to store the fuel in one central location rather than 77 sites across the United States, including four on the Great Lakes," Petrosky said.

Michigan currently has four different locations where the fuel is being stored.

Big Rock was constructed in 1960 and the plant went critical in 1962. It was the first commercial nuclear power plant to be built in Michigan and the fifth built in the United States.

Petrosky further urged council to support the plan as, "the government has no back up plan." He said if Yucca Mountain doesn't happen, Big Rock Point will turn into a defacto storage location.

He added that this possible reality shouldn't frighten people, the site has safely stored the fuel for 40 years and will continue to do so.

He explained the plan's benefits for Charlevoix residents. Those he cited include: the material being removed from the area — as was promised by the federal government — Charlevoix rate payers getting what they paid for and the Big Rock Point property being returned to its natural state.

As to what will happen to the property after it's returned to its natural state, Petrosky said, there has been strong interest in the site expressed by both developers and those who would like to see it kept natural.

First ward councilman Norman Carlson motioned to support the Yucca Mountain plan and all but two members of council agreed. Second ward councilman Bill Bellows was vacationing at the time of the vote and fellow second ward councilman Gabe Campbell voted against offering council's approval.

Campbell based his vote on a past decision made by council regarding drilling for oil in the Great Lakes. When drilling was proposed, Campbell wanted council to write legislators voicing its opposition to the plan but, other council members said they should stick to issues in Charlevoix's city limits.

Campbell's vote reflected that decision as both Yucca Mountain and Big Rock Point, are not within the city's boundaries.

Regardless of whether or not the material is moved, the Charlevoix site will remain a nuclear historic landmark.

The decommissioning process currently underway at the site is on track and Petrosky said it will be classified a green field in 2004, making the site free for unrestricted use.

Charlevoix had representation at Olympic games

HALVERSON

officer and one federal officer. As usual, Halverson and his federal teammate then walked the Olympic Square, the Ice Center, the Media Center and the Medals Plaza.

The teammates radioed information about any suspicious activities to one another until 6 p.m. when they headed back to their bunks to get some sleep.

From a security standpoint, Halverson said, the Ice Center posed the greatest challenge, as the public can access a lot of tickets to get inside. He estimated that on average, 70,000 people filtered through the center each day. And, on Feb. 16, 100,000 people were using the facility.

Halverson said the media center is another place he patrolled where intense activity was always taking place.

However, access to the media center was heavily restricted. Because of his security role he stopped in during shifts and spoke with journalists from across the globe including France, Latvia and Israel.

He described the media center as "cosmopolitan," with almost 10,000 journalists buzzing around. He estimated the center itself to be about three-quarters the size of Grand Traverse Mall in Traverse City.

The Medals Plaza wasn't an unpopular venue either. Halverson said it attracted huge groups of people both before and after the medal ceremonies. After medal ceremonies, big name bands were featured. Halverson worked within feet of Sheryl Crow, Creed and Bare Naked Ladies.

Other big name acquaintances he made include current and former Olympiads.

Last week, he chatted with Canadian skater Jamie Sale who was part of the "Love Story" pairs skating saga. After days of media attention and close review by the Olympic Committee, Salé and her partner, David Pelletier, traded in their silver medal for a gold, the prize many viewers and others thought rightfully belonged to them.

He also talked with Scott Hamilton, a former Olympic skating competitor and current commentator. Hamilton was an advocate of the Love Story pair's medal exchange.

When Halverson wasn't talking to the stars and looking for suspicious characters, he participated in an afternoon ski outing and visited venues set up by other countries participating in the games.

During an afternoon of shopping, he even caught a scuffle at the Roots clothing store in a nearby mall where the coveted Olympic beret was in short supply. He said tensions ran high Feb. 19 as people stood in line for up to five hours to get their hands on the hat. Because the hats sold like hot cakes, consumers were permitted to buy only one beret per customer.

Halverson said, start to finish, his participation in the Olympic Games was an amazing experience.

He described the energy running through the veins of the people in the city as electrifying, especially as America took home even more medals than the 20 that were expected.

As of Feb. 21, Halverson's favorite Olympic story for the 2002 winter games was the skeleton racer, Jim Shea, who is America's first, third generation Olympian. His grandfather, Jack Shea, a former speed skater, 91, was killed in a car accident, four weeks before the event.

After he took the gold for the United States on Feb. 20, Shea pulled a picture of his late grandfather out of his helmet and raised it to the sky in recognition of his family's achievements.

Area Zonta Club to have Sensational Sessions

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Second Annual Charlevoix Area Zonta Club Sensational Sessions program will take place this weekend in Charlevoix.

The sessions will include 25 different interactive presentations including everything from designing a summer flower garden to Feng Shui and canc furniture crafting.

Linda DeGrow, event chair, said 60 participants have pre-registered for the afternoon event, 10 more than last year.

"Our goal is for the community to have a fun day, for the presenters to improve their businesses and for us to incur funds to put back into the community. Everyone gets something out of this," DeGrow said.

Those who haven't pre-registered are asked to arrive during the registration time; 8 to 8:45 a.m., March 2 at the First Congregational Church, located at 101 State Street in Charlevoix.

The first session on March 2 is scheduled to run from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m., the second from 10:10 a.m. to 11:10 a.m., the third from 11:20 a.m. to 12:20 p.m. and the fourth from 1:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.

The one hour time lapse between the third and fourth sessions has been allotted for a lunch break. Lunch will be provided by the Zontians through the $18 registration fee.

The afternoon will also include raffles through which participants will have the chance to win prizes.

Sensational Sessions is one of four fundraisers the professional women's club has each year. The event brought in $1,500 last year and the club is aspiring to exceed that number this year.

Proceeds from the sessions will benefit local women and women across the globe. One third of the club's annual proceeds go to international endeavors.

Some of the local projects the Charlevoix Area Zonta Club is involved in include scholarship opportunities for women and sponsorship of the Women's Resource Center.

DeGrow described Zonta as a worldwide organization of professional and executive women that work to improve the status of women worldwide.

Zonta Clubs were started internationally in 1919 and the Charlevoix chapter was formed in 1989. The club currently has 32 members.

Club members meet from 11:45 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month at Grey Gables.

For more information about the sessions or the club contact DeGrow at (231) 547-4109.

Ski team takes second at state

For the second year in a row the Charlevoix Ski Team earned the State Runner Up Trophy at the MHSAA State Ski finals at Marquette Mountain on Monday.

In a meet, which saw three time defending State Champion Petoskey claim the crown, the Rayders battled from behind all day, but it came down to the end.

In the morning GS, an event that the Rayders have dominated all season, they dug themselves a hole by placing only one skier in the top ten. York Smith finished seventh; Roscoe Serrels, a two time All-State skier competing in his last high school meet struggled and finished eleventh; Kelsey Barnard, a future All-State skier competing in his first state finals, finished twelfth and Chad Johnson finished seventeenth.

Charlevoix also got a solid GS performance from Taylor Fisher who was twenty-sixth.

After the morning GS, the Rayders were on the outside looking in, sitting in forth behind Petoskey, Iron Mountain, and Traverse City St. Francis/Christian.

In the afternoon SL, the Rayders needed to make up nearly 36 points to overtake the Northmen and nine points to climb in second.

Barnard shocked the entire field by placing second. Smith made it to the podium with a tenth, Johnson fourteenth and Serrels seventeenth. Fisher was fifty-forth and four-year letter winner Lexi Wilson, also competing in her last meet, was forty-fifth.

As bad as it looked for the Rayders, it was a tight battle to the end with Charlevoix overtaking Iron Mountain and Maple City for second and the meet came down to Petoskey's fifth seed.

Petoskey freshman Eric Behan came down with a strong finish and sealed the win for the Northmen.

Coach Sue Miller and her team were disappointed with their second place finish, but were happy with their successful season. They felt going into the meet that this was their year, and they wanted to have their seniors, Wilson and Serrels, go out as state champs.

Charlevoix basketball team continues to roll over others

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders' basketball squad moved two steps closer to an undefeated season with two more impressive wins over outmatched foes. The Rayders (18-0 overall, 10-0 conference) routed Roscommon, 97-40 last Tuesday and pulled away from Boyne City last Friday, 91-63.

"Hopefully, our best games are still ahead of us," coach Keith Haske said.

That sentiment would be hard for the rest of the Lake Michigan Conference to comprehend. Boyne City looked to ruin Charlevoix's perfect season and played the Rayders close for most of the first quarter, but as happened so often this season, they ran out of gas playing at the Rayders' tempo and without the Rayders' depth.

Boyne literally packed fans into the aisles for their biggest game of the year and the crowd roared as Boyne scored the first bucket of the game and led briefly at 6-5 with 4:15 left in the first quarter.

Scott Parrish scored on a feed from Pat Gowell for Charlevoix, then followed that with a three-point basket to put the Rayders ahead for good.

Keith Daly scored, as did Nate Teuscher on a steal and layup for a 14-6 Charlevoix lead. The Ramblers managed to cut the lead to 16-13 and trailed only 18-13 at the end of the first stanza.

Boyne hung tough early in the second quarter, again pulling to within three at 24-21 on four straight points from Cass Dolbow. Even that effort took a lot out of Boyne and they called a timeout to catch their breath.

Coming out of the rest, the Rayders scored seven points in one minute on a Scott Friske basket and a three and a two-pointer from Jim Shepherd. Parrish then scored four straight points and the lead rose to 35-21.

Later back-to-back three pointers by Gowell and Neil Friske extended the lead to 45-27. Another Neil Friske hoop closed the scoring for the half with Charlevoix ahead 47-30.

Dolbow had 13 in the half as did Parrish. Shepherd had 10 and Neil Friske had nine.

The second half was more Charlevoix dominance as Dolbow, who had been such a factor for the Ramblers in the first half, was held scoreless. Meanwhile, the Rayders extended the 17 point halftime lead to 28 largely upon a 17-8 run to end the period during which seven different Charlevoix players scored.

The Rayders' largest lead in the game was 88-57.

Parrish finished with 19 points. Shepherd had 16 points, six rebounds and five assists. The Friske brothers each had 12 points.

Nate Teuscher scored 10 points. Gowell scored eight points and handed out eight assists.

Senior center Rob Boss missed the game with an ankle injury.

"We've been getting solid play from Scott Parrish and Jim Shepherd every night," Haske said. "Neil Friske and Nate Teuscher played well for us the last few games. They've given us a scoring spark off the bench."

Earlier in the week, Charlevoix dominated Roscommon.

"They were so physically outmatched that it wasn't much of a game," Haske admitted.

The Rayders led by 40 in the first half at 62-22, a record this season even for them. Sixty-two points in 16 minutes of basketball is more than some teams could do in a gym with no defense whatsoever.

For the game, Shepherd led all scorers with 22 points and had six assists. Scott Friske scored 21 points. Parrish hit for 15 points, pulled down six rebounds and dished out six assists. Neil Friske had another fine all-around game with eight points, seven rebounds and six assists.

Gowell had seven assists and four steals. Travis Smith scored eight points.

The Rayders close the regular season at home against Traverse City St. Francis then begin district play at 6 p.m. on March 4 against Harbor Springs at Mancelona High School. Charlevoix traveled to Kalkaska on Tuesday but results were unavailable.

Volleyball team showing impressive record this year

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders volleyball team went 2-1 in recent Lake Michigan Conference action, falling only to undefeated conference leader Kalkaska.

The Rayders, who were winless in the regular season last year, moved to 9-4 in the league and 21-16-3 overall. Details on the Kalkaska loss were unavailable at press time.

Earlier, Charlevoix had moved into a tie for second place in the league with wins over Elk Rapids, 9-15, 15-10, 15-13 and Boyne City, 18-16, 9-15, 15-6.

The win over the Ramblers was especially sweet since the Rayders had lost to Boyne earlier in the season.

Lighthouse may be turned over to the city in future

> Commander of Ninth Coast Guard District

Lighthouses are no longer the primary technology bringing ships safely to port and, in the future, the Coast Guard plans to transfer its ownership of Charlevoix's lighthouse.

For the past 10 years the Coast Guard has been slowly transferring ownership of lighthouses from its hands, to those of municipalities and community groups interested in historic preservation.

Commander Joe McGuiness, assistant chief of the aids to navigation branch of the Ninth Coast Guard District in Cleveland, Ohio, said he has found there is almost always someone who wants to take care of the light.

The ninth district covers the Great Lakes region, which includes Charlevoix.

"If no one else wants it, then we continue to take care of it. Unless it's a public safety hazard. Our goal is to find the right owners who will preserve them (lighthouses) in the way they deserve to be maintained," McGuiness said.

City Manager Mike Wiesner said when the time comes to decide who will maintain the Charlevoix lighthouse, city council would make a decision based on a proposal from the Coast Guard. The city has not yet been approached about the transfer.

Dave Miles, a member of the Charlevoix Historical Society, said he foresees a private organization forming that would work in tandem with the city to maintain the local lighthouse.

St. James Township on Beaver Island recently took over the brick lighthouse at the point near the Gull Harbor Nature Preserve.

Don Vyse, the township supervisor, said the transfer took over a year and township residents supported the project. St. James Township is now moving toward grant requests to refurbish areas of the lighthouse that are deteriorating.

The Coast Guard's role is to maintain aids to navigation which include buoys and lighthouses. McGuiness stressed the Coast Guard is in no way abandoning the lighthouses. With these transfers, the Coast Guard maintains in the deed that it can access the facility to continue maintaining the aid to navigation light.

The structures are expensive to maintain. St. James Township is paying almost $3,000 to insure the lighthouse and, when it comes time to renovate, may be allocating more money to the structure.

McGuiness said the more expensive part of ownership is maintaining the building and the towers in a way that interprets the lighthouse in a historical context.

He offered the example of when a lighthouse needs a new roof and gutters. He said it may be cheaper to get material for the project from a large department store, but if you want to preserve the structure in a historical context it would require more expensive copper and bronze pieces.

In McGuiness' opinion, the lighthouse will be better off after the transfer.

He said local communities have a direct interest in the structure and may be more dedicated to it. The Coast Guard hopes transfers will result in public access to the sites, preservation of history and pristine maintenance.

The local steel lighthouse was built in Milwaukee, Wis. It has been a fixture in the community since 1948 when it replaced a wooden lighthouse at its current location.

Wind turbine issue back on the table in Eveline

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

After facing a possible delay, the special use permit request made by Bay Windpower in Eveline Township for a wind monitoring tower will be on the township board's March 13 agenda.

The Michigan Supreme Court ruling in Brown vs. Shelby Township, has uprooted the Eveline Township Board's decision to start the approval process for the revised township zoning ordinance over.

The re-approval process would have delayed the special use permit decision for the wind monitoring device.

At its Feb. 12 meeting, the Eveline Township Board found the township zoning ordinance, that had been adopted in October of 2001, was invalid.

At the meeting, Dan Skrzeczkoski, township supervisor, told the board, Bryan Graham, the township's attorney, reviewed public notices, posted during the zoning ordinance revision process. Graham found that because some words were missing from the notices, the ordinance wasn't valid.

The board decided it was in its best interest to go through the approval process again.

However, during the afternoon of Feb. 20, Graham called Skrzeczkoski and informed him of the court's ruling in the Shelby Township case, which meant re-noticing wasn't necessary. Graham also told Skrzeczkoski that the precedent set in the state Supreme Court means the ordinance is valid.

Skrzeczkoski said because there was a motion on the floor at the Feb. 12 meeting to re-notice the ordinance, a second motion will have to be made by the board, rescinding that decision at its March meeting.

If the permit is granted, the 164 foot wind monitoring tower would be located on the property of Charlevoix resident Dawson Way, near Brock and Ferry roads.

Bay Windpower is proposing to locate seven of the wind turbine generators on the properties of Way and Ralph Richardson if the anemometer readings show the wind power is adequate.

The township still plans to closely review the zoning ordinance. The township planning commission met Feb. 13 and reviewed applications from prospective planners to help in the review process.

The commission's recommendation was the key topic of consideration at a special meeting of the township board Tuesday night. Information from that meeting was not available by press time.

For more information about the special meeting contact Don Hayden, township clerk, at (231) 582-3119.

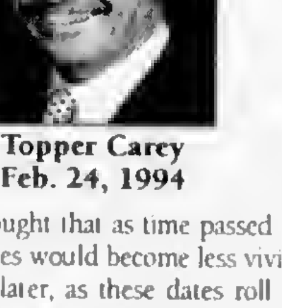
In Loving Memory...

Robin Merten
Jan. 30, 1994



Topper Carey
Feb. 24, 1994

Jan. 30th and Feb. 24th...after the first few years, we thought that as time passed the significance of those dates would diminish...that our memories would become less vivid...our feelings less intense. But, surprisingly, even eight years later, as these dates roll around again, the significance, the memories, the feelings, have not diminished at all. We still feel your presence in our lives. So many things remind us of you...and always will. Our sadness still surfaces, but then we focus on the joy you brought to us and what you wanted for us...to move ahead with our lives. In the words of an Eskimo legend

Perhaps they are not stars in the sky, but rather openings where our loved ones shine down to let us know they are happy.

We feel you "shining down" and we are grateful, and blessed, that you are forever a part of us.

We will always love you.

Natashia Kleiber led the offense with 13 kills while Krista Swenor and Jenny Miller had eight apiece. Becca Kanine had 30 assists and played what Grunch termed her "best defensive effort of the season."

Other leaders on defense, according to Grunch, were Kleiber, Miller and Shayna Drost.

Against the Elks, Miller led the offensive effort with 13 kills. Kleiber added eight kills. Kanine once again led the passers with 26 assists.

Defensively, the Rayders were led by Kleiber, Kelly Reid and Krista Swenor and Kate Madison who each had two blocks.

Fountain City House was first Charlevoix hotel

By DAVID L. MILES
Charlevoix Historical Society

Amos Fox and Hiram Rose, two of Charlevoix's first prime movers and shakers, built their huge 900-foot dock in Lake Michigan in the mid 1860s to provide wood fuel for the steamers that plied the Great Lakes from Chicago to Buffalo.

They had to bring in a crew to construct it. To house the men they put up a boarding house on the north bank of the channel where the Weathervane Terrace Inn now stands.

Richard Cooper, a man they knew in Harbor Springs, was hired to move here to run it. By 1867, with the dock completed, he purchased the building from the two men and turned it into our first hotel, the Fountain City House.

The name is confusing since Charlevoix has never been referred to as Fountain City. It comes from the passenger steamer "Fountain City" which began calling here in 1866. James Gibson, its captain, became one of Cooper's closets friends, and since he brought the little hotel so much of its business, he suggested it be named after his boat, and Cooper agreed. In 1882, the "Fountain City" was the first large vessel to enter Round Lake through a channel widened to the extent it enjoys today.

For its several years, the Fountain City House was where many settlers and homesteaders spent their first night before venturing on to life in the village and county. Cooper's face was the first they saw and his advice was the most sought — a font of information for their new venture.

Cooper knew everyone and everything that was going on. His building was the most important in the fledgling community, a virtual community center in a place that boasted only a handful of houses, one store, a sawmill and a harbor dock. In 1868 the number of buildings in Charlevoix numbered less than two dozen. But, that was about to change dramatically.

In 1965, Bernice Wexstaff, who wrote a Now & Then column for the Charlevoix Courier, told of the Ben Nowland family who arrived by schooner in 1867, had their belongings transferred to a rowboat, came upstream and "anchored at channel-bank to the shore" below the hotel. Then, "the family tugged their possessions, which included a cow, pushed off the lake schooner to swim alongside the rowboat, up the steep slope."

In 1872, a three story addition arose from the compact 1.5 story beginning. The top floor held a ballroom/meeting hall. But, demand for rooms was such that this was transformed into eight more rooms in 1873.

At that time, the Fountain City House was the largest hotel in northern lower Michigan. Cooper claimed he could accommodate 100 guests. It was also the terminus for the stagecoaches that ran from here to Petoskey.

Four years later, a three-story addition was added on the north, with further enlargements in 1879. It had no central heating, but a network of eight chimneys connected to half-chimneys which led into the rooms where individual stoves warmed the guests. For this time, this was very up-to-date.

In July of 1886, Abraham Lincoln's sister and niece stayed there. In August of 1891, the sister of General George Armstrong Custer was a guest. She was the Librarian of the State of Michigan.

In 1894, Willard Smith, editor of the Charlevoix Sentinel, told of whiling away the boring winter months with a group of cronies at the hotel where they could warm their cold feet. "In the center was a large box stove, set in a large box of sand. On the winter evenings as we played euchre and sometimes penny ante, a line of socks surrounded the big stove from which arose a perfume that today would drive every guest from the house.

"Charles Chaddock's fiddle and George Miller's mouth organ were nearly as bad. Dr. Lewis, George Miller, F.L. Kiser, and myself (Smith) were boarders, so were half a dozen Indians and a Negro. We had but one common table. We had but one 'resorter' and he was a delirium tremens subject from Chicago. Steamboats were the only thing that relieved the monotony."

Cooper's son took over from him, followed by Henry's daughter, Mrs. Harrison Bedford, whose father-in-law had assassinated King James Strang on Beaver Island in 1856. The Bedford home was where the Captain's Watch condos sit now on Park Avenue across from the Congregational Church.

More family members maintained it into the 1950s. Except for a few latter years when other interests tried but failed to make a go of it. Until it reverted Bedford hands, the Fountain City House was the domain of this one Charlevoix family. It sat idle for only the last two of its 90 years and was torn down in 1955, a vacant lot until the Weathervane Terrace was begun in 1962.

The venerable old structure's verandahs and rooms witnessed more history unfold from their vantage point over the crossing of highway and channel than from any other building in the history of Charlevoix.

Charlevoix's hotels will be an important part of the Charlevoix Historical Society's new book, Bob Miles' Charlevoix II, scheduled for publication on Memorial Day weekend. Advanced orders for $35 plus tax, a $10 savings off the bookstand price, are available at the Harsha House, 103 State Street, from 1 to 4 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday, at the Charlevoix Public Library and at the Chamber of Commerce. Credit card orders can be called in or faxed to (231) 547-0373.

David L. Miles will also be giving an illustrated program on, "A Century of Hotels in Charlevoix, 1867-1967," at 7 p.m., March 5 at the Depot, located at Depot Beach on the far east end of Dixon Avenue.

Sewer line issue gets date for discussion

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The city of Charlevoix's proposed sewer extension to the new Charlevoix High School, being built in Marion Township, will face two forms of review at a public hearing March 11.

City administrators applied for site plan review at the Marion Township Planning Commission's regular meeting Feb. 25. The commission decided the public hearing will take place at 7 p.m., March 11 at the township hall off Marion Center Road.

At the upcoming public hearing, the planning commission will conduct a site plan review of the project and a Section 10 hearing.

Tim Matchett, planning commission chairman, said, "I think we'll be able to get through both issues in one night."

During the site plan review, the Charlevoix reminded that it is still winter

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix residents were reminded winter is still here last weekend.

After a period of light snow, a large storm blew into the area Saturday, bringing heavy snowfall, blowing wind and very cold temperatures with it. Remnants of the storm continued to drop snow on the area Monday.

According to Jim Caldwell, of the Charlevoix Water Department, there was 11-and-a-half inches of snow on the ground by Monday morning and the snow was still falling as of Monday evening.

During the start of March last year, Caldwell said the department only recorded a half an inch of snowfall.

The storm that struck the area was the result of a low pressure system that developed over the central plains last week, ac-

Get yourself ready, tax deadlines are close

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Tax day is right around the corner and many people are scrambling to get their finances in order and praying for a return.

Two Charlevoix certified public accountants (CPA), Robert Hoffman and Ron Agnello, have offered tips to decrease your stress and increase your chances for successful filing.

Robert Hoffman

"The most important thing for taxpayers is to be organized by keeping good files. People should have a 2002 tax file already set up. So, when the end of the tax year comes around, you have a big file. Some things may not pertain to anything, but run everything by a tax professional," Agnello suggested.

Once the end of the tax year arrives, Hoffman offered a few pointers to avoid commonly made errors.

He said documenting the wrong social security number is a common filing error. Hoffman suggested individuals who were married and changed their name, but did not notify the social security office, do so — the Internal Revenue Service is now cross checking names and numbers.

Ron Agnello

Also, make sure you have entered the social security numbers for every dependent you are claiming on the tax form.

Agnello said for those preparing your own returns, and assisting working students, there is a new rate reduction credit on this year's form. The credit can be found on line seven of the 1040-EZ form. Students who make over $4,500 may be entitled to a rate reduction credit.

Hoffman said if you earned miscellaneous income it should be claimed, even if you didn't receive a 1099.

However, when you file your sources of income, you do not need to include the advanced refund check you received last fall, it is not taxable.

The deductions everyone loves can come from a myriad of sources, so, Agnello and Hoffman encourage people to ask questions and claim all deductions you are legally entitled to.

"By not claiming your legitimate deductions you are probably overpaying your taxes," Hoffman said.

Deductions, Agnello said, sometimes overlooked are child tax credits, education credits and license plate fees.

Certain itemized deductions are only deductible to the extent they exceed a certain percentage of your adjusted gross income — 7.5 percent for medical and 2 percent for miscellaneous deductions.

Before you attach W-2s to the return, make copies of everything you include in the package. And, to avoid calls from the IRS, make sure you sign your returns.

One last thing to remember, the government has consolidated offices and changed the address you are mailing your tax information to. This year, Michigan taxpayers will mail their returns to Andover, Mass., not Cincinnati, Ohio.

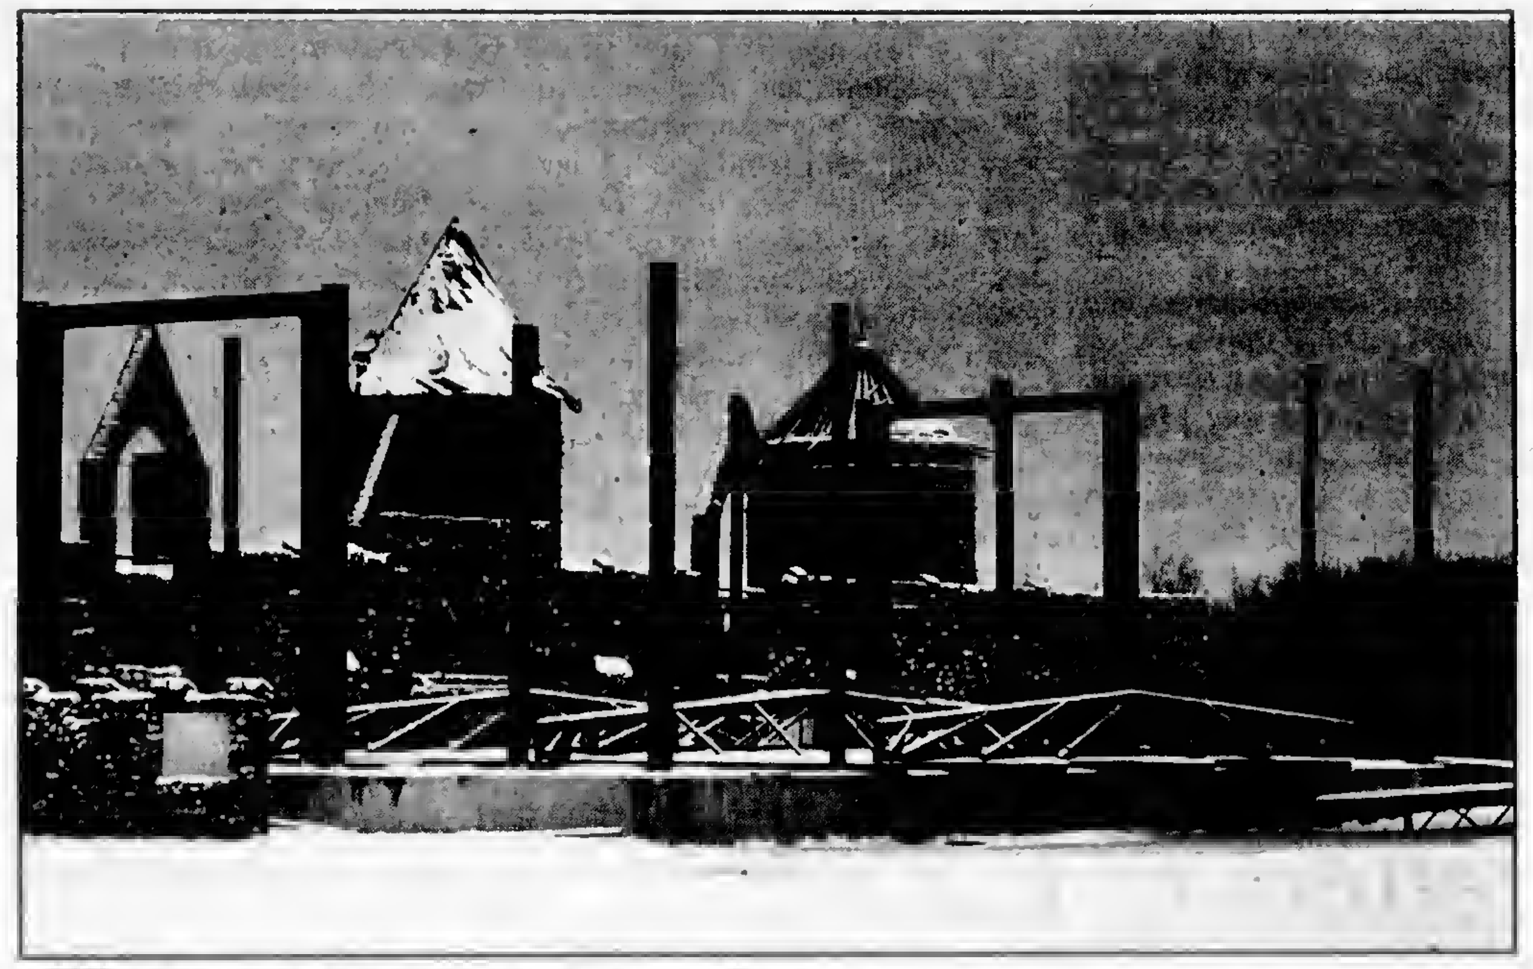
If you are a corporation and can't get all of this done by March 15 or are an individual who can't seem to meet the April 15 filing deadline, Hoffman suggests filing for an extension. He urges filers to get their information to the IRS in a timely manner, even if you can't pay the entire tax.

He said late filing penalties are 10 times worse than any late payment penalties.

Hoffman warns that if you are called or notified of a problem in writing by the IRS, not to ignore them, because "they will not go away."

Tax forms are available at the Charlevoix Post Office located by Kmart off M-66 and online at the IRS web-site.

If filing is too much to handle on your own, there are several accountants in the Charlevoix area to assist you in the process. To contact a local CPA look in the yellow pages under accountants-certified public.



The roof comes down

Last week marked the end of an era at Charlevoix's historic Castle Farms. The roof of the stage that covered acts from Ozzy Osbourne to the Moody Blues was removed — the beginning of its dismantling. Linda Mueller, a resident of Charlevoix and Mississippi is restoring the site to its original design for use by the community. Repairing the roofs and silos will start in the spring. Are your children getting up too early?

EDITORIAL

Sometimes it takes the community's youth to show the error of our ways.

Adults tend to look over the children of a community in planning for the future, making up policy and basically running things. But, many times, the youth of the community have the answers that are too blurry for adults to see.

Take for example the issue of school hours in Charlevoix.

Many sixth grade students have been writing to the Charlevoix Courier lately that they think school starts too early. To catch a bus to school, many of these students are getting up at 6:30 a.m., then standing outside in the winter cold waiting for their ride while it is still dark.

Once at school, these students must try to turn their brains on to concentrate early in the morning to grasp the new school lessons they are learning. Then, after school, many of these very students are taken by their parents to various sports practices and games that can last into the early evening hours.

Perhaps these students are right to complain that school is starting too early in Charlevoix. In fact, many scientists agree with them.

Studies show that middle school age students are not getting enough sleep at night. They are getting up too early for school and their brains are not ready to digest information.

Some scientists say school hours should start later in the morning, not earlier as the trend has been.

There is also a safety factor that should be considered here. There is some danger in having young students stand outside in the dark, next to a street, waiting for a bus in the early morning hours. When it is dark, there is less visibility for drivers, and when there is less visibility, standing next to a road is not advisable.

However, on the flip side, the school district argues that its would be costly for the school to start later in the morning. This is because the district would need more buses and drivers.

Regardless of the cost, this issue is one that deserves some thought by our school district and parents. Perhaps there is some middle ground that can be found.

The bottom line is, the students have alerted us to this problem and it deserves some attention.

Sometimes, just getting groceries can be tough

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

When people ask me, "Where are you going this winter?" I gladly tell them that I am staying right here in Charlevoix!

I know I'm right after reading Sharon Blossom's description of her grocery shopping trip in Spain. Those of us who have "been there and done that" need not be reminded that there are always unexpected happenings when one is visiting a foreign country.

The scene: Sharon Blossom and friend Pete stocking up on provisions at El Campo Super Mercado, which is similar to our Meijer stores, for their Atlantic crossing, on their sailboat "Twowowie" with five people aboard on the 14 day trip.

But first they need to get a grocery cart in the parking lot. To unlock the cart you need to insert a 100 Peseta coin, which you retrieve when you return the cart. Their shopping list includes freezer food, pizzas, chicken, meat, sausage, cheese, Corn Flakes, and fruits, plus freezer bags and 36 rolls of toilet tissues.

"After shopping for two hours," Sharon tells us, "We reach the checkout counter with our Carta Credit card and my Passport. Our bill is 333.55 Euros, the new standardized currency. Need I say that the senoritas at the check out counter were not used to dealing with Pesetas, Euros and the American Dollar all at the same time? I give my Visa card and passport to the cashier but it won't read. She calls for her supervisor, who has the same problem, and disappears for 20 minutes. When she returns she tells us the card is no good! I suggest we call the Visa office, but am told they are closed for the usual two hour lunch. I am taken to an automatic bank machine, but since I don't have a pin number the card won't work. I ask the cashier if they will accept American dollars and am told they will only accept $20 or $50 bills. I walk to the bank, change my $100 bills into Euros, and return to the store where we finally are able to pick up our load of groceries.

"But that's not all. When we load up our rented Citroen in the parking lot it is raining hard. As we head back to the boat we remember to stop for gas at a Shell station. Pete takes the keys from the ignition and opens the fuel cap and pumps the label marked 'Gasole.' Minutes later he returns with a stricken look on his face. Big mistake! He filled the tank with diesel fuel!

"Fast forward with a few phone calls, an hour later a tow truck with a Verde Citroen arrives on its flat bed. Relieved, we unload our stash of groceries and head back over the mountain to the dock."

Sharon's final word of caution: "Notify your Visa office number shown on the back of the card and tell them you will be in another area. They think they are helping you out, when they deny your card after repeated use in a locale different from your own."

"After just one such phone call, the next time we went to El Campo we had no problem."

Thanks a lot, but I'll remember that there's no problem shopping for groceries right here in Charlevoix!

Start school later

Editor:

I am a sixth grader from Charlevoix Middle School. I think school should start later. Since school starts at 7:45 a.m., kids usually have to be awake by 6:15 a.m. As a result of this, they have to go to sleep at a decent hour, have all homework done and be organized for the morning. Plus, they have less time to do homework and spend time with family. They would have less time for after school activities too.

Also, when it's dark outside in the morning you could injure yourself. In the winter it's icy, snowy and dark. This makes the winter especially dangerous. I would be very pleased if these thoughts of school starting later would not just stay thoughts, but be turned into actions.

Stop fighting school

Editor:

Scrooge, it is time for you to write books for children. Get off our new school. Have you looked in the looking glass at yourself? We shall have a new school and your Scrooge has not helped, you have only cost more money to our city. Think, as the years go by, and a time when your Concerned Citizens for School Fiscal Responsibility are you one to say I live in Charlevoix the Beautiful? We shall have a new school. However you try to stop, the people of Charlevoix are giving our children a school, the best is none too good. Think about what you have done to Charlevoix.

Thank you

Editor:

Thank you Charlevoix Firefighters and volunteers, the Charlevoix City Police Department, water department and street department for your effort to save our house and the homes of neighbors on Friday night, Feb. 15!

An especially heartfelt thank you to the two middle school students who noticed and reported the fire.

We are the owners of the house at 301 Mason and were looking forward to remodeling it in keeping with its 1920s era architecture. When we received the call Friday night from our contractor our immediate thought was of the firemen's safety and the safety of our neighbors' homes. How grateful we are that there were no injuries.

We have heard from many kind people of Charlevoix and look forward to meeting and working with the neighborhood and city when we arrive back in Michigan the middle of March.

Again our sincere thanks to everyone.

Education Yes! a good idea

Editor:

Congratulations to the Michigan Department of Education and the State Board of Education for initiating "Education Yes!" the new accountability framework that focuses on teaching for excellence, not just on teaching for the MEAP test.

Arts education advocates throughout the state also applaud the inclusion of the arts as a core curriculum subject. This follows the dramatic revision of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, Leave No Child Behind, signed by President George Bush last month.

Recent academically accepted research has validated what educators have long suspected: arts education contributes significantly to a student's development. This is not to suggest that arts education is a panacea; arts education is only successful when part of a strong curriculum that provides excellence in reading and language, mathematics and problem solving and social studies. Research has also shown a correlation between arts education and improvements in other academic areas, such as higher SAT scores for high school students who have had arts experiences and improved reading and math scores for students in high-poverty schools that have implemented arts programs.

While arts education is important in its ability to stimulate creative thinking skills and exploring the human experience to enrich our lives, business leaders are increasingly finding that employees with arts education experiences are the company problem solvers. Because most often school venues are the only institutions able to provide access to the arts for the vast majority of students, Education Yes! that includes arts as core accountability standards for Michigan schools is more significant than ever!

Allow pop, pizza in gym

Editor:

I am a sixth grader attending Charlevoix Middle School. I think all the people at the Charlevoix Rayder basketball games should be able to bring pop and pizza into the gym.

At the concession, they would sell more food. If people can't bring some items into the gym, they won't buy those items. Also, the Sports Boosters would be getting more money for the items sold.

People feel that pop and pizza are part of the entertainment. People like to snack and nibble while they watch the game. Candy will keep the little kids occupied so they are not in their parent's hair.

Three to four hours of watching a game can work up an appetite, and you don't want to miss any part of the games. Some people go straight to the games and skip dinner; you can get hungry not eating dinner.

Those are some of the reasons people should be able to bring pop and food into the gym. I hope this helps to change the rule.

Give teens more to do

Editor:

I am a sixth grader at Charlevoix Middle School. I think there should be more places for teens downtown. I think it would be good because most of us don't get out too often. Also, some of us get home and wait for our parents to get home and do nothing productive.

My second reason is, we need something to do. The only thing I can do downtown is shop because I'm either too old or too young to do anything. It could also prevent some people from smoking or doing drugs because they will be too busy to do that.

In addition, I think an electronic store could get Charlevoix more business. It would be a good idea because most people like video games and/or music. I think that would be a good idea because we don't have a good one in town. I hope you see the importance of my letter.

Create a hockey team

Editor:

I am a sixth grader at Charlevoix Middle School in Mrs. Gowell's fifth hour class. My idea is that the Charlevoix High School should have a hockey team because Petoskey, Traverse City and Gaylord have hockey teams.

People who don't play any sports can play hockey, so they don't get into trouble. They need exercise to lose weight.

Another idea is that people will not be lazy on the couch watching TV. Also, people will not be bored at home doing nothing.

Next, people won't take drugs to be cool in front of their friends. Instead, they will be hanging out, practicing, passing or shooting on the hockey net with their hockey friends. I hope you like my idea.

Eastern Star donates to children at shelter

Members of Charlevoix Chapter 72, Order of the Eastern Star, decided to forego the exchange of Christmas gifts this year and instead would buy and donate stuffed animals to be donated to the children at the Women's Resource Center Safe Harbor Home.

The children there are from homes of abused and battered women who are receiving much needed aid there. It was felt that the stuffed animals would be of much comfort to the children.

The Eastern Star members donated over 50 teddy bears, Beanie Babies and other stuffed animals from the smallest to some that were two to three feet tall.

The gifts were presented to Jan Mancinelli, Executive Director of the Women's Resource Center this past week by Worthy Matron Peggy Evans and Worthy Patron Bob Kelley and will be given to the children for comfort and love.

School hours may be too early for kids

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Classes at Charlevoix Middle School start bright and early at 7:45 a.m. but, many sixth grade students feel that's too early and some scientists agree.

Zarin Bloomer, Meighen Havens, Leah Kelly and Shelby Goss, all sixth grade students at Charlevoix Middle School, recently wrote letters to the Charlevoix Courier, concerned that the early start to their school day is negatively impacting their learning experience.

They each explained difficulty in kick starting their brains for early class periods.

"I'm tired in the morning and I wake up by second or third period. But, I have to get up at 6 a.m. I think 8:30 a.m. would be a better time to start school," Bloomer, 11, said.

The difficulty the kids are having is no new phenomenon. Every year the Courier gets several letters from students exploring the need for a later start to their day. This year, the letters are part of Kathy Gowell's sixth grade English course.

Gowell explained, the aim is to teach students letter writing skills and "the power of the pen."

In the letters, the students claim sleep deprivation is effecting their academic lives — some are dozing off in class while others are having difficulty concentrating.

They also say the early start throws their routine off, causing many to miss breakfast.

Havens, 12, wrote in her letter, "Another issue with kids going to school so early is that it's hard for kids my age to get up so early in the morning and be able to follow directions in class. Therefore, students are getting terrible grades in their morning classes."

Both the academic and routine issues the students alluded to, are magnified for those like Bloomer, who have to ride the bus and be ready to leave the house by 6:30 a.m.

Their opinion may seem to be just one of those things that kids complain about but, scientists have found that during adolescence kids require between eight and nine hours of sleep and have a harder time going to bed early.

In 1999, when California was considering mandating later start times for students, a list of expert opinion was configured supporting the change.

Mary Carskadon, Ph.D., with Brown University's School of Medicine, wrote on the subject, "Kids are waking up and going to school at a time when their brains are still in nighttime mode. Even in second period they are not ready to learn, not ready to be engaged in education."

And that is just what Bloomer, Havens and some of their classmates are saying.

Gowell agrees that a later start time would be beneficial and suggested the middle school swap start times with the elementary school.

Zarin Bloomer, Leah Kelly and Meighen Havens wrote to the Charlevoix Courier about school starting too early. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Her suggestion could be possible. But, according to Dr. John Sturock, superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, a single bus run that would allow high school, middle school and elementary school students to start school around the same time, is costly. He said timing and transportation are the two major factors deciding school start time.

"You add more buses and more bus drivers when you do a single bus run and that can get pretty expensive at $50,000 a bus, plus the cost of another driver," Sturock said.

Charlevoix currently operates on a double run schedule with high school and middle school students being picked up first, then elementary students.

Charlevoix Elementary School to have musical

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

This year marks the 30th anniversary of the Charlevoix Elementary School musical.

The performance, featuring over 500 students, will take place at 7 p.m., March 20 in the Charlevoix High School gym.

"The musical establishes memories. That night, every child contributes to the show. And, in the process, they learn about culture, history, geography, mathematics and every subject," Marina LaBlanc, music instructor and musical director, said.

The students also learn set design through the instruction of Mary Beth McGraw, the elementary school art teacher. McGraw has been involved with the musical for 22 years.

LaBlanc, who has been leading the musical for the 30 years it has existed, described the upcoming performance as a strong patriotic show featuring songs like "America the Beautiful" and "God Bless America."

The title, "America, the Dream Goes On," was chosen in lieu of the terrorist attacks on America that occurred Sept. 11, 2001.

After that day, many teachers and parents had the difficult task of explaining terrorism and war to children. LaBlanc said their discussion included exploration of the value of freedom and Democratic values.

Admission to the musical is free and the public is encouraged to attend. Bleachers from the elementary school and 300 chairs are added to the gym to provide seating for over 1,300 guests.

LaBlanc said friends, neighbors, family and community members often attend to enjoy the "nice evening of entertainment."

The students offered a special invitation to President George W. Bush. They wrote letters to Bush inviting him to the performance and LaBlanc crafted the cover letter.

The students have been practicing the performance numbers once a week for seven weeks.

Marion Township ponders land use issues

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Marion Township residents and business owners attended the township planning commission meeting, Feb. 25, to discuss township goals and land use issues.

This was the third meeting to take place, where updating the township land use plan — a policy document developed to guide future growth and development in the township — was discussed. The meeting was intended to gather community input.

The planning commission said it feels public input is vital to the process to ensure the land use plan accurately reflects a balance of the desires of the township residents, property owners and businesses operating in the township.

Tim Matchett, planning commission chairman, said the update has no direct relation to the city of Charlevoix's sewer extension project. But, he added that the two are indirectly related.

"The update is partially a result of the changes going on; it will make sure we are up to date. There's a potential for a lot of change. You want to be proactive and have things in place before more big issues come around," Matchett said.

This will be the first update to the plan in seven years.

"A good land use plan needs to be updated regularly and there have been a lot of changes to the township over the past seven years. It's time to sit back and ask questions to see if the land use plan is what the people still want," Matchett said.

At the meeting, the planning commission and those who attended, reviewed the existing land use map.

Matchett said the goals that were already in place were only slightly revised.

Those who attended expressed interest in preserving the township's rural character and making an effort to encourage preservation of open space. However, Matchett said more definition of these terms is needed.

Marion Township is working with Mary Campbell, owner and principal planner for the firm M. C. Planning and Design of Boyne City. Campbell's company has been contracted to update both the land use plan and the zoning ordinance.

The information gathered during the land use plan update will be considered in conjunction with the township zoning ordinance update. Matchett explained, the plan and the ordinance should work in tandem as the ordinance is based on the land use plan.

The township zoning ordinance was last updated in September of 2001 when "small" changes were made to the special use section.

This revision will be a complete review of the ordinance.

Matchett said Campbell's Boyne City planning firm suggested the ordinance be revised to include information about wind turbine generators and sexually oriented businesses.

"These were two areas the consultants picked up on. Wind generated energy wasn't an issue two or three years ago; there are new things coming up and these are two areas that need to be addressed," Matchett explained.

He added, a public hearing for the land use plan will likely take place in late spring or early summer and a public hearing for the zoning ordinance would be scheduled for early 2003. Dates have not been determined for either of the two public hearings.

The Marion Township Planning Commission meets at 7 p.m. on the fourth Monday of each month at the Marion Township Hall off Marion Center Road.

For more information contact Matchett, at (231) 547-2154.

Strawbridge, Moore are the voices of the Rayders

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Two Charlevoix men shared the excitement and eased the pain of people left in town last March when the Rayder boys' basketball team competed for the state title in East Lansing.

Ron Moore and Dave Strawbridge, broadcasted the Charlevoix vs. Kalamazoo Christian game over the AM airways to make sure anyone tuning in knew the Charlevoix team was a force to be reckoned with.

Not only was this dynamic duo busy keeping Charlevoix residents and Rayder fans informed of the second by second happenings of the state championship game — they're doing it every game of the season. So, even when you're sitting couch side, you feel court-side.

"I'm from Charlevoix and the town has a strong basketball tradition. It's (volunteering to commentate) a home town thing and we enjoy doing it," Strawbridge said.

Strawbridge had worked with Charlevoix residents Randy Carey and Jim Fowler. Then, in 1998, he went in search of a new sidekick.

What better choice than Moore, a fellow Lions Club member, a fellow sailor, a patient of his dental practice, a Charlevoix resident of over 30 years, an avid Rayder sports fan and a former college radio personality.

Moore broadcast for Western Michigan University's WIDR.

For the past three years he's been back on the airwaves every Tuesday and Friday helping Strawbridge bring the game to radios across Charlevoix County.

Strawbridge, who has been commentating Rayder boys' basketball games on and off for 15 years, handles the play-by-play while Moore adds some humorous spice.

"It's my job to come up with interesting side pieces," Moore explained.

One example of Moore's quick wit was heard by listeners when the two sat court-side at the state tournament and a foul ball careened toward their heads. Strawbridge, a former hoopster, caught it without incident and Moore exclaimed, "shoot."

Moore said when he accepted the offer, basketball wasn't his specialty, but Strawbridge has been a good teacher.

"He taught me everything I know," he said.

One of the more amusing events in their three year, co-host relationship happened last year when they lost transmission contact with the station and broadcast the whole game without a minute of it hitting the airwaves.

"Here we are broadcasting away and no one can hear a thing," Moore said.

It's laughs like these, the exciting games and their community pride that keep Strawbridge and Moore coming back.

During basketball season these radio personalities are on the go. Moore is a school psychologist with the Charlevoix and Emmet counties Intermediate School District and Strawbridge owns his own dental practice in Charlevoix. The radio show is a volunteer effort they do on the side.

To hear them in action tune in to WMKT 1270 on the AM band, every night the Rayders play. At 8 p.m. tonight the team faces Elk Rapids at Mancelona.

cording to Dan Valle, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service.

"There was quite a bit of precipitation associated with it. It produced heavy snowfall amounts," he said. " Most folks saw about 12 inches along the lake shores, but there was some lake enhancement."

Valle added the storm also brought in quite a bit of wind, creating problems with blowing and drifting snow in the area, in addition to frigid wind chills.

But, while the storm left a lot of cold white powder on the ground and created hazardous driving in the area, no major problems were reported.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater said most calls were about snowmobile accidents and minor traffic accidents with no injuries.

"I think people were driving cautiously," he said.

According to Valle, there was a positive result of last weekend's storm. He said it has helped the area come closer to its average snowfall amount after its light start to winter.

"This is going to be an average winter with an average snowfall amount," he said.

Rayders end season with perfect record

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

It was a packed house — perfect.

They scored 100 points — perfect.

A Carey boy scored the last points in the last game in the "old" Charlevoix High School gym — perfect.

The Charlevoix Rayders finished their season 20-0 — perfect.

The Rayders closed their gym in style, beating Traverse City St. Francis 100-67. Charlevoix won their last 20 games played on their home court, going undefeated at home in the 2000-01 season as well. The Rayders will play in the new high school currently under construction next season.

"It was a very fitting way to end the usage of the gym," Charlevoix coach Keith Haske said. "For Todd Carey to score those points after what his family has meant to sports in Charlevoix. The 100 points, the dunk (an alley-oop by Scott Parrish from Patrick Gowell to open the second half). It was special."

The Rayders took control early on a steal and lay-up by Gowell just seconds into the game. The lead expanded to 23-6 late in the first quarter on back-to-back hoops by Scott Friske. The determined but outmanned Gladiators clawed back to within 12 at the end of the first quarter at 27-15. Eight different Charlevoix players scored in the first stanza.

Jim Shepherd connected on three three-pointers in the first three minutes of the second quarter to key a Rayder surge that pushed the lead to 42-23. Following a St. Francis basket, great interior passing led to a basket by Rob Boss, assisted by Scott Friske; a hoop by Scott Friske, assisted by Parrish; then a third basket by Parrish to push the lead to 48-25.

The first half lead reached its peak at 29 as the Rayders doubled up the Gladiators at 58-29 with 25 seconds left in the half.

The second half opened with the crowd-pleasing alley-oop on a perfectly thrown pass by Gowell to Parrish. Though it appeared the play might have been drawn up in the locker room at the half, Haske indicated otherwise.

"They called that play on the floor. Patrick called it," Haske said. "We've been encouraging him to call more plays based on what he sees."

The ovation shook the rafters of the gym and before the dust had settled, Parrish scored again followed by a Ryan Rafacz bucket to push the lead to 64-33. The lead hovered around thirty for the remainder of the third period, with Charlevoix leading at its conclusion, 85-54.

The only mystery remaining in the game was whether the Rayders could reach the century mark for the first time this season in their last time playing in their old gym.

Boss tried to aid in the cause, launching three three-pointers, two of which fell short for airballs and one that powered too strong off the glass.

"Finally, we realized that Rob Boss shouldn't be shooting three-pointers," Haske observed.

The Rayders came within striking distance of the 100-point mark on a Nate Teuscher bucket to give them a 98-63 margin with 3:19 left in the game. It appeared that someone had put lids on the hoops, though, as Charlevoix failed to convert time after time. Finally Carey connected on two pressure filled free throws with 57 seconds left on the clock to bring the crowd to its collective feet and to bring the curtain down on some wonderful years of basketball played in the old gym.

Shepherd led the scorers with 22 points. Parrish had 18 points, eight rebounds and four assists. Scott Friske added 17 points, 12 rebounds and four assists. Boss, coming back from a two-game layoff, scored 12 points while Gowell handed out eight assists and made four steals.

Earlier in the week, the Rayders played a very different type of game as they weathered their biggest storm of the season, pulling out a 69-58 win at Kalkaska.

"It was a great game for us," Haske said. "We struggled a bit but Scott Parrish really stepped up. We had a chance to get tight and fold but we didn't."

Although the final margin was eleven, the Rayders led by only two with 6:52 left in the game.

The combination of Kalkaska's deliberate style and poor shooting by Charlevoix led to a 9-3 Rayder first quarter lead.

Midway through the second quarter, three straight big plays by Gowell helped Charlevoix extend the lead to 21-7 on what appeared to be a decisive run. Gowell scored on a putback on the offensive end, then followed that effort by taking a charge on the defensive end. To cap the run, Gowell fed Parrish on a drive for an easy bucket.

The scrappy Blazers wouldn't say die, however, and cut the lead back to seven at the half at 26-19. Kalkaska would have been even closer had they not missed three free throws in the last thirty seconds of the half.

Kalkaska seemed determined to end the Rayders' perfect season as offensive rebounds led to four straight Blazer points to open the second half, slicing the lead to 26-23.

The teams traded hoops but fouls began to mount for the Blazers as Daly went to the line twice and was two for four, to push the lead to 30-25. Daly then scored on a dish from Parrish and moments later, Scott Friske scored with the assist by Shepherd to bump the lead to ten at 35-25 midway through the third.

Missed free throws continued to dog Charlevoix as they made only three of seven for the rest of the period. In the meantime, Kalkaska was heating up, scoring on a three-point play, a three-point shot and a rare four-point play to end the quarter with the score, 42-40 Charlevoix.

Kalkaska was fouled on the inbounds play to open the fourth quarter and had a chance to tie the game at the free throw line. The Blazer shooter missed the front end of the one-and-one and the Rayders rebounded the miss.

The Rayders continued to struggle at the charity stripe, hitting on two of four free throw attempts in their next two trips down the court. Kalkaska returned the favor missing a free throw that would have cut the lead to one on a potential three-point play. Parrish finally ended the free throw shenanigans by making two, but the Blazers followed suit and sunk two free throws of their own to keep the lead at two at 46-44 with 6:28 left to play.

Parrish responded with another jumper to double the lead to four.

Two pivotal plays fought off Kalkaska's challenge. The first was Teuscher grabbing an offensive rebound and then feeding Parrish with a perfect post pass that Parrish converted. He was fouled on the play, made the free throw for a three-point play that extended the lead to 52-44.

The second key play down the stretch was Rafacz picking the pocket of a Blazer guard and then racing in for a lay-up to keep the lead at eight at 54-46.

Shepherd and Gowell combined to make six straight free throws down the stretch as the Rayders extended the lead to the final margin of eleven.

"Parrish was unbelievable," Haske said. "He stepped up like a first team All-Stater should."

Parrish's stats backed up the claim as he scored a career-high 34 points and pulled down 13 boards. Daly added 10 points while Scott Friske pulled down 11 rebounds. Gowell dished out eight assists and made three steals.

The Charlevoix JV team also closed its season with two victories, finishing with an 18-2 record.

Volleyball team closes out impressive season

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders volleyball team closed out a fine 21-18-3 campaign by reaching the district finals with wins over Elk Rapids (15-5, 14-16, 15-7) and Mancelona (15-5, 15-1) before falling to last year's Class C state runner-up Suttons Bay (15-6, 15-8).

"We played real well against Suttons Bay at first," said coach Liz Grunch. "But in the first game we were tied 4-4 and just couldn't get the serve. It was 9-4 before we could get a sideout."

Natashia Kleiber and Jenny Miller led the offense with 16 kills. Kate Madison added seven.

"Kate Madison was outstanding," Grunch said. "It was the best she had played all season. It was great for her to end her career in that way."

Also receiving accolades from Grunch was Shayna Drost.

"Shayna played great defense for us. We really missed Kelly Reid defensively (out with surgery) in the back row," explained Grunch. "Shayna stepped in and never let down and played very hard for us."

The Rayders finished third in the conference, a vast improvement over last season's winless conference mark.

"I'm really happy with the season overall. Our expectations were just to be competitive going in," Grunch said. "They definitely played above their expectations and mine. They've really worked hard all season. It shows what hard work can do."

The future looks bright for the volleyball program, according to Grunch.

"This was supposed to be a rebuilding year for us and we did a lot better than that," she said. "Some teams thought, 'Oh, we're playing Charlevoix, this will be an easy win.' Next year they'll be ready for us. The program is headed in the right direction."

The team's next meet will be March 9 at the Charlevoix Invitational.

Rayders prepare for tournament action

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

> "Tournament time is the most fun of the season."
>
> Patrick Gowell,
> Charlevoix High School varsity basketball player

What a difference a year makes!

Last year, a young Charlevoix Rayders squad went into the state basketball tournament 17-3 and unranked in Class C. They came away only three points from a state championship following a miracle win over McBain in the regional finals, and back-to-back wins over number one St. Ignace and number two Detroit St. Martin DePorres and a near-miss in a heartbreaking state finals loss to Kalamazoo Christian.

This year, the senior-dominated Rayders blew through their regular season with a 20-0 record winning every one of their games by double-digits and being ranked no lower than number four in the various polls around the state all season long.

"It's a different perspective than last year. We were more of an underdog and we didn't really know what to expect in the tournament," senior Jim Shepherd said. "This year we have all of the expectations in the world. We know our goals and we know what we want to do. It makes it tougher because you have a target on your back. But at the same time, it's kind of exciting."

The expectations haven't just come from the team this year. The players have heard the talking in the community as well.

"This year there is more coming from the community, like how much are you going to win by tonight? Or I already have my tickets for that game or my hotel room for that one," senior Scott Parrish explained. "It makes you more nervous, but there's nothing you can do about it but go out and play your hardest."

Shepherd added, "Once I'm out there shooting a free throw, I'm not thinking about something someone said to me the day before in the store or at the bus stop."

Another concern has been the Rayders' lack of close games this season with the exception of the narrow win last week at Kalkaska.

"It was good to have a close game like that," senior Patrick Gowell said. "If you don't want to buckle, you have to get used to it."

The Rayders open the tournament with the districts in Mancelona. Charlevoix beat Harbor Springs 98-53 in the lidlifter. Details were unavailable at press time but will be reported in next week's Charlevoix Courier.

The Rayders face Elk Rapids on today, Wednesday, March 6. The winner of that game will face the winner of the East Jordan-Boyne City contest on Friday, March 8.

Following the districts, if successful, the Rayders would travel to Cadillac for regionals and a potential rematch against McBain.

"If you follow basketball in northern Michigan, you're waiting for Charlevoix-McBain," Parrish said. "But we have to get there. You can't look past anybody."

The team is focused, led by its coach, Keith Haske.

"We've been talking about not leaving the tournament with a loss you think of the rest of your life," Haske said. "If a better team beats you, you can live with that."

Haske's words have clearly had an impact on the team.

"I've been thinking a lot about that," Parrish reflected. "I know that I don't want to walk off the court during this run thinking I could have given it more or played harder. That's going to have a big effect on us."

Gowell summed it up well saying, "Tournament time is the most fun of the season."

Charlevoix fans couldn't agree more.

1937-38 Team honored

Members of the 1937-38 state runner-up basketball team were at the last Charlevoix home game Friday. The team was honored with a new trophy, modeled after the one they won in 1938, which was damaged due to its age. They are: Perry Smith, richard Bergmann, Warren Allison, and Danford "Chick" Gallagher. Standing with them are current Rayders Patrick Gowell and Scott Parrish and former Rayder Jeremiah Teuscher. Grant deadlines approaching

Once again, it's time to put local charitable dollars to work on behalf of the community.

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation and the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation are inviting nonprofit organizations, educational institutions, and municipalities who are in need of funding to submit grant requests in support of their projects.

During the next few months, the Community Foundations and their Youth Advisory Committees (YACs) will review grant proposals to help fund health initiatives, community development projects, education, the arts and cultural events, environmental efforts, and human service programs. The YACs, which are made up of representatives from high schools throughout Charlevoix and Emmet counties respectively, will award grants to programs that serve children and teens.

Programs chosen for funding must serve residents of Emmet County or Charlevoix County, meet an urgent need, or enrich life for local residents in some way. The deadline for grant requests is April 1, 2002.

Grant applications are available by calling the appropriate Community Foundation office. All applicants must call and discuss their proposals in advance. Foundation staff is available to offer advice and assistance to organizations interested in applying for funds.

For more information about the local Community Foundations, grant applications, or help for grant-seekers, please contact the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation at 616 Petoskey Street, Petoskey, MI, 49770, by phone at (231) 348-5820, or the Charlevoix County Community Foundation at P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, MI, 49727, by phone at (231) 536-2440.

Sewer line in Marion to be discussed at meeting

SEWER

commission will look closely at the proposed line and the sewer pump station.

"We'll basically be looking at the area where they want to put the pipe relative to what exists in the area. We'll decide if what is proposed is comparable to what exists," Matchett explained in an earlier interview.

The planning commission has the final say in the site plan review.

The Section 10 hearing looks at the sewer project in relation to the current land use plan. The commission makes this comparison and then formulates a recommendation for the township board as to whether or not it feels the project should be approved.

Both the hearing and the review are required before the township board will consider approval of the project.

The township board has to enter into a sewer contract and franchise agreement with the city of Charlevoix before the project can move forward.

Contract approval will be a topic of discussion at the township board's March meeting.

According to Bob Drebenstedt, township board secretary and the zoning administrator, this meeting will take place at 7:30 p.m., March 18 at the township hall located off Marion Center Road.

"Hopefully, the planning commission will be able to give us its recommendation by then," he said.

Once contracts between the city and Marion and Charlevoix townships are in place, the city can consider awarding construction contracts for the project.

Being a community bank means being part of the community. That's why our most important work isn't done from behind a desk or in some corporate boardroom, but face to face with the people who make Charlevoix great. We care about this community, and we want to see it succeed. After all, it's our community too.

For some, Transfer on Death account is best

Many people are enticed by the claims of promoters of living trusts — that having a trust offers your estate good protection from creditors and saves time and money.

By and large, for average persons these claims about trusts do not hold water.

According to the Michigan Office of Services on Aging (OSA), creditors are better able to make claims against assets in a living trust than they are against assets in many probate estates.

For example, some gifts to surviving spouses and children cannot be claimed by creditors if probate is used, but this protection is lost under living trusts.

There is little effective difference in the time it takes to transfer property to beneficiaries through a trust or a will, because under either system your estate should wait until creditors have had time to make their claims before distributing assets.

Generally, there are no cost savings with living trusts. Although certain probate fees can be avoided, this savings is usually less than the additional costs of preparing living trusts and transferring your property twice — once into the living trust while you are alive and again from the living trust to your beneficiaries after you pass away. Only one transfer, after you pass away, is necessary with probate.

For many people, a third alternative offers most of the promises and protections living trusts fail to provide. That alternative is a Transfer on Death (TOD) account. This is sometimes called a Pay on Death (POD) account.

TOD accounts are available for most types of "paper" assets, like checking and savings accounts in banks and credit unions, certificates of deposit, stocks, bonds and other securities.

Under current Michigan law, one cannot own real property such as a house or tangible personal property, such as a car, in this fashion.

TOD accounts are very different from joint accounts.

The owner, while alive, is the only person with any rights to the property. Upon the owner's death, the property is immediately transferred to the named beneficiaries, usually without any added cost and without much possibility that the creditors of the deceased owner can make claims.

The owner has the right to change beneficiaries at any time. This is just the combination of ease, low cost and creditor protection that many individuals seek.

TOD accounts are very simple to set up. Typically, all you have to do is contact your banker or broker and request forms to fill out. Usually there is no need to seek legal assistance. The law authorized these accounts, but does not require banks and brokers to offer them. If you are interested and have found out that your bank doesn't offer TOD accounts, you might consider changing banks.

Even though TOD accounts offer many attractive advantages, they aren't for everyone.

They are generally not a good idea for wealthy individuals because of complexities in the current tax laws. Another problem is that you should have the same distribution pattern in your will and trust as you do in your TOD accounts. Otherwise, it would be very difficult to predict who would receive what share of your estate.

TOD accounts are not as flexible as wills and trusts. In wills and trusts you could have a very complicated distribution plan, even involving conditions. Financial institutions will generally not allow such complexity in TOD accounts.

Frey Foundation continues giving to community

When a group of civic leaders launched the Charlevoix County Community Foundation in 1992, the Frey Foundation was one of the first organizations to come forth with financial help.

Now, as the local community foundation nears its tenth anniversary, Frey has once again confirmed its support with a three-year pledge totaling $150,000.

The 2002 - 2004 commitment, which brings Frey Foundation support to $875,000, will be used to support endowment building, grant-making, and general operations.

"All of us are very grateful for the Frey Foundation's continued support," said Bob Tambellini, president and CEO of the community foundation. "Their investment in our organization gave us needed stability during our start-up period, helped us become more visible in the area, and allowed us to accomplish a lot in a relatively short time."

In past years, the Frey Foundation has spurred local philanthropy by providing support to community foundations like the Charlevoix County group. As a grassroots charitable organization, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation addresses local issues, responds to timely needs, and makes grants to many kinds of projects that contribute to the overall well-being of the area.

"We're pleased to help the community foundation grow," said Milt Rohwer, president of the Frey Foundation.

The Frey Foundation, based in Grand Rapids, is one of Michigan's largest family foundations. Grants are provided primarily to nonprofit organizations in western lower Michigan for projects to enhance children's development, protect natural resources, promote the arts, and expand philanthropic and civic action.

The Frey Foundation was endowed in the late 1980s from the estate of the late Edward J. and Frances T. Frey. Frey was longtime chief executive officer of Union Bank (now Bank One) and founded Foremost Insurance Company in Grand Rapids. It was the next generation, David G. Frey, Edward J. Frey, Jr., John M. Frey, and Mary Caroline (Twink) Frey that developed the family foundation that operates today.

For more information about the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and its grant-making activities, call the foundation office, (231) 536-2440, or write, P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, Michigan, 49727.

Road money goes to good use

This is the first story in a three part series focusing on the allocation of millage money at both the township and county levels.

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

We're fast approaching the busiest time of year for road work and some Charlevoix townships are counting road millage money and preparing to make improvements.

Over the past three years, Charlevoix County's Eveline, Hayes, Marion and Norwood townships have each allocated special millage money to improve their roads and township officials from all four say they are reaping the benefits.

Dan Skrzeczkoski, Eveline Township Supervisor said a road millage was passed in that township because the money just isn't there to maintain roads in the manner people expect.

"When I first started on the board, about 13 or 14 years ago, every meeting was packed with people complaining about the roads. But, by the time we paid for dust control and seal coating, we didn't have money left over in the general fund to do the roads," Skrzeczkoski explained.

"Then, the residents passed the millage, and the township started actively improving the road system."

In 1999, Marion Township voters approved a road millage of 1.4431 mills for three years and, in nearby Eveline Township, just under a mill was passed for roads. The Eveline millage was passed in 2000 to run through 2001.

Skrzeczkoski said last spring and summer, several Eveline Township roads were improved as a result of road millage money.

City Hall renovations postponed until spring

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Planning issues have pushed back initial schedule projections for renovations to Charlevoix's City Hall until late this spring or early in the summer.

"Details need to be worked out before the renovation starts. We have to be comfortable that the city has addressed any possible potential problem areas so, when the construction starts, there are no long delays as a result of unforeseen problems," Jim Shull, the city's project correspondent and former Officer in Charge of Coast Guard Station Charlevoix, said.

The total project includes a major renovation to the interior of the building and a small addition, two floors high and 30 feet by 36 feet. The addition will provide additional space to the police department, new public toilets and will expand city council's chambers. It is estimated to cost $2.3 million.

While all the changes are being made the city staff will relocate in shifts to the old post office.

At the Nov. 5, 2001 special city council meeting, a timeline was presented, depicting the renovation process. The timeline showed the city approving the final building design in mid-December and city staff moving to the old post office on Mason Street in May.

Welke honored for rescue of Gault family

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Paul Welke, owner of Island Airways and a Beaver Island resident, was presented a "Life Saving Award," by Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater on March 7.

Paul Welke has been a pilot for 35 years — he knows planes and he knows Beaver Island like the back of his hand. On the morning of Feb. 9, 2001 this expertise and a hunch, landed him in the right place at the right time.

A twin engine, turboprop, chartered plane, piloted by Curtis Logan, 51, of Little Falls, Minn. and Stephen Ehrhart, 23, of Elgin, Ill. had disappeared around 7:30 p.m. the night before. The plane was transporting Mirth Gault, then 43, and her three children, Adam, 13, Emma, 9, and Alec, 5, all of Orland Park, Ill.

Robert Gault, father of the children and Mirth's husband, waited on Beaver Island for word from rescuers.

The rescue effort, which included Beaver Island Firefighters and Emergency Medical Technicians, United States Coast Guard personnel and numerous Beaver Island residents who volunteered their time, started soon after the plane was lost.

Welke decided to voluntarily join the search, at a time when the weather was precarious and even the Coast Guard was having a hard time conducting an aerial search. He said the rain stopped just long enough for him to take off.

When Welke hopped into his plane, he was searching for the wreckage but wasn't expecting to find life. Even if the impact of the crash hadn't killed the passengers, 15 hours of exposure to the brutal weather, that included freezing rain and snow, might have.

On his third run through a search pattern, Welke caught a glimpse of the wreckage in a wooded swamp area, lost sight of it momentarily, circled back and that's when he saw Mirth standing on top of the plane, feverishly waving a bright orange life preserver.

"They (the Gaults) saw the plane circling like an angel looking down on them, locating them," Lasater said.

Welke directed rescuers to the location where the plane went down and from there, they were transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Heavy snow started to fall just 15 minutes after the rescue. Making the Welke-Gault encounter one of those meetings that was just "meant to be."

Lasater presented the award on behalf of the Gault family. He said a "Life Saving Award" is rarely given out and is a prestigious honor.

"In the eyes of the family, Paul is their hero, he helped save their lives. Paul will always be very close to the Gault family because of those efforts. They've since been back several times and always ask for Paul," Lasater said.

Welke said he talks with the family once a month and on July 4, 2001 he had the honor of bringing them up for a leisurely 15 minute sightseeing flight — the first time they had flown since the tragedy.

Pilots Logan and Ehrhart did not survive the crash.

St. Patrick's Day perfect for celebrating heritage

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

Get out your green clothing, put on your fish tossing gloves and buy a leprechaun hunting license — St. Patrick's Day is here again!

St. Patrick's Day is one of my favorite holidays. From my childhood when grandma would get me and my sister to go leprechaun hunting to my current trips to Beaver Island to enjoy the fun, St. Patrick's Day has had a special place in my Celtic heart.

What makes this day so great is that everyone takes part in the festivities celebrating the Irish and everyone lets their hair down for a bit. For me, this is also a day when I celebrate the heritages that make me who I am.

From my youth I was always taught the differences in Celtic cultures because I am Scottish and Irish. My Irish comes from my Fitzgerald blood and my Scottish from my McBain blood — by the way, my family founded the town of McBain making it very interesting for me whenever Charlevoix plays them in sports.

But not only was I taught to enjoy my Celtic blood, I was taught to respect other cultures, thanks in part to a small percentage of non-Irish or Scottish genetics in my system. Adding to my fine Celtic blood — kind of like an exotic spice — is a dash of Spanish, which gives me a nice tan throughout the year.

I was always taught that my Spanish blood is just as important to me as my Irish and Scottish blood. These combinations of cultures came together to form me, therefore they should be respected equally. By not respecting one, I am not respecting a portion of myself.

So, I learned to play the bagpipes for my Scottish side, am learning Irish Gaelic for my Irish side and enjoying the Latin fire in my heart that comes with my Spanish side.

This teaching of my cultures always seemed to come to a head on St. Patrick's Day, when my Irish grandmother would try to pinch my Scottish grandfather for not wearing green, usually resulting in a speech about the differences between the two cultures.

Therefore, St. Patrick's Day has become a day that I celebrate the great mix of cultures in the United States, as well as in myself. But still, I am amazed, and somewhat annoyed, when cultures are confused, especially the two predominant Celtic heritages: Scottish and Irish.

In America today it is common to see men in kilts and playing the bagpipes on St. Patrick's Day. Some Irish Americans even wonder what tartan their family has.

Problem is, the kilt, the bagpipes and the tartan are all from Scotland; a land located north of England and across the water from Ireland.

Being a person who plays the bagpipes and wears a kilt at times, I hear these types of mistakes all the time. Therefore, I thought it would be best to give the readers a short list of Celtic information. Feel free to cut this out and carry it in your pocket on March 17:

- The kilt — This is an outfit that looks like a plaid skirt, but worn by a man. First of all, it is not a skirt and it is not plaid. It's a manly outfit made out of tartan — a pattern that represents certain Scottish families. Let me also stress, the kilt is Scottish.
- Kilt etiquette — Just because a man is wearing a kilt in front of you does not give you permission to try to reach up it. I don't know why people have the urge to do this, but from the many experiences I have had wearing my kilt, they seem to think it is natural — especially women. This is not proper treatment for a kilted man. If you must know what we have on under our kilts, the answer is: shoes and socks.
- The bagpipes — There are two kinds of bagpipes you need to know about: the Great Highland Bagpipes and the Irish uillean pipes. Great Highland Bagpipes are very loud and played by a person who is standing. The uillean pipes are played by a person who is sitting down. The Great Highland Bagpipes are traditionally Scottish, however most of the songs played on these pipes pick on the English, making it OK to play them for the Irish.
- Green and orange — It does not matter what color Scottish people wear, they typically are more concerned with the pattern of the tartans on their kilts. For Irish people, traditionally those of the Catholic faith wear green and those of the Protestant faith wear orange. If you are an instigator like me, wear both - An Irish accent — If you do not normally have an Irish accent, please don't fake one on St. Patrick's Day.

Now that you have these tidbits of knowledge, I encourage you to go out on Sunday, or Saturday as the case may be, and enjoy your Celtic blood. If you are not Celtic, I also encourage you to take part in the festivities.

Make St. Patrick's Day a celebration of the American melting pot and a chance to learn about the many cultures that make up this country.

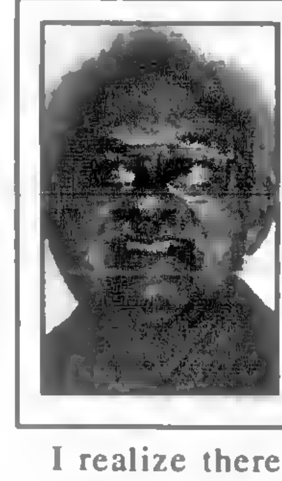
Planting a tree can make you feel like a God or poet



Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

I realize there is snow on the ground and that every third vehicle you meet still has a snowplow attached, but it is time to begin thinking about planting trees.

We all know the usual reasons for such planting: beauty, clean air, shade, increased property values, among others. Last week I was reminded again of a further and possibly compelling reason to plant trees.

Aldo Leopold died in 1948, but left a draft of what was later edited and published by his son. The book was called "A Sand County Almanac" and has become something of a bible for much of the conservation and environmental movement. In part the book chronicles the thoughts about and work done on a small, poor-soil farm in central Wisconsin — the sand counties.

Leopold wrote about planting trees. He also wrote about cutting trees down. If you care even in a small way for the natural world that surrounds us, it is a good idea to read "A Sand County Almanac" at least once a year. It is not a long hook and well worth whatever time you can give it.

Leopold had this to say about planting trees: "Acts of creation are ordinarily reserved for Gods and poets, but humbler folk may circumvent this restriction if they know how. To plant a pine, for example, one need to be neither God nor poet; one need only own a shovel. By virtue of this curious loophole in the rules, any clodhopper may say, "Let there be a tree — and there will be one."

I don't believe anyone has ever stated so plainly the relationship of trees to people. Who would not want to be such a God, putting a visible imprint on the next several centuries and by extension of the tree's producing seed, on the next

What is purpose of sewer?

Editor:

I believe that I must be one of the handful of Charlevoix residents quoted in the Petoskey News-Review article of Feb. 28, concerning the proposed sewer to the school construction site. I attended the Marion Township Planning and Zoning Board meeting on Feb. 25. The newspaper article is in error, there was no site plan presented concerning the construction of a sewer.

Rather, Mr. Gerry Harsch made a rather vague presentation concerning the construction of a pumping station. Then, using the same logic that dictates the school needs a sewer in the first place, he stated that of course, it's only common sense that if you build a pumping station then it will be connected to sewer pipes. End of subject.

So, it seems that the city/school intends to avoid entirely the concern of a sewer by saying that it is only to be expected if you build a non-threatening pumping station. Then again, I am not really certain that it was Mr. Harsch's intention to build a pumping station; he read through a rather poorly prepared text, which seemed to have several large sections missing and which pointedly avoided any of the natural concerns of a sewer construction, because after all, the city was not building a sewer. He then tried to leave the building as quickly as possible, without answering any questions concerning his presentation.

The more one looks at virtually any aspect of the high school project, the harder it is to see anything: there is or is not contamination, there is or is not a traffic hazard, there is or is not a problem with the water table at the construction site, there is or is not a vastly oversized sewer being built into an agricultural area. I find it very hard to believe that the city, school, or anyone else can honestly believe that a huge sewer system is not going to attract huge users.

There certainly is no other reasonable explanation. If I and all of my neighbors built up every accessible portion of our properties it still would not require the services of a sewer system of such volume. I don't see the city making any great sewer expansion along US-31 or M-66, although there is a lot more industrial and residential development already occurring along those routes.

Strangely, Marion Center Road seems to be the center of attention for the city and the school. If the purpose of all this is supposed to be greater educational opportunities, then I think I have learned enough.

We need to protect streams

Editor:

A year ago, at a meeting of the Michigan Association of Drain Commissioners (MADC), a drain commissioner from downstate unrolled a large map. Squiggly blue lines covered the paper.

"Your streams," I asked.

"No," he replied. "Our drains."

Today, I know that there is a fool proof recipe for turning a trout stream into a drain. It worked all over the state and sadly, it has started to work here also. If we do not pay attention, we will sacrifice the loveliness of our streams and rivers, our fisheries and water quality to the same forces that have so negatively impacted communities to the south.

For a creek to stay healthy, its banks must have vegetation, brush and trees to slow runoff. Without vegetation, seasonal cycles of rain and runoff break down banks. A small eroded area can expand, dumping tons of sand into a creek. Although sand looks clean and pleasant, it is not a habitat that can support a fishery. By far the largest contributor of pollutants and sand to streams is construction.

The very best protection for streams and lakes is a greenbelt or buffer. Rapid runoff of water caused by straightening of streams and the creation of hard surfaces of roads and buildings sends water rushing quickly to the streams. The symptom of this is often E-coli at our beaches. Water flashing to roads, ditches and drains replaces the gentle replenishment of groundwater.

Groundwater is born of rains and snow. Caught by trees and brush, and the vegetation of the earth, the water soaks into the soil and is returned gently to the streams. Streams that are ravaged and neglected become eyesores, and after years of abuse, they are channeled and ditched, to run silently under parking lots, housing developments and recreational fields.

This year, at the MADC convention, workshops addressed how the banks of ditches could be repaired and how wetlands and flood plains can be recreated. Everyone now understands that storm water must be controlled and planned for on a watershed level. Grants and projects in southeastern Michigan encourage greenbelt easements, purchase of flood plains and wetlands. The cost of poor development is loss of natural resources, fisheries and our quality of life. Poor development ushers in costly flooding of basements and yards, erosion and public and private property destruction.

While the southern part of Michigan tries to repair the damage to its streams, lakes and rivers, here in Charlevoix County we have a wonderful opportunity to learn from mistakes and to protect our natural resources for our children. It will not be easy. Unwise development pressures do not respect sensitive banks and the critical importance of fragmented wetlands in protecting water quality and in storm water control.

The good news is that we do not have to repeat mistakes of our downstate neighbors. The bad news is that no one likes restrictions. What is clear is that if we are to be successful in protecting our streams and lakes and natural resources, our communities must insist on fair and enforceable planning, zoning and regulation.

Leopold teaches love of the land

KNUTSON

thousand years or more.

Who would not wish to leave the poem of a tree written on the wind and sky for children, grandchildren and neighbors to cherish. Any other reason to plant a tree pales to insignificance beside Leopold's admonition to act like a God or poet.

This spring's orders are to either plant a tree or read "A Sand County Almanac." If you do the second, I can almost guarantee that you will also manage the first. You may even come to understand land as Leopold did.

He said, "We abuse land because we regard it as a commodity belonging to us. When we see land as a community to which we belong, we may begin to use it with love and respect."

Land on which you have planted trees with your own shovel becomes less of a commodity and more of a community — less subject to abuse and more likely to be respected if not loved.

County roads use every drop of money given

ROADS

During that time, Phelps Road was rebuilt, Bracey Road was partially rebuilt, a section of Shaw Road was graveled and dirt roads were treated with calcium chloride to control the dust.

However, even with the millage money, the township had to dip into the general fund to pay for all the improvements. Skrzeczkoski estimated, $144,000 of road millage money was used to fund the projects.

"Its so darn expensive doing roads. Reconstruction is $200,000 to $250,000 a mile," Skrzeczkoski said.

He anticipates using approximately $144,000 of millage money during the upcoming season.

Eveline's main focus this season will be on Ridge Road where work will include reconstruction in some areas and widening of the entire road. The same process is planned for Peninsula Road and the township will install curbs at the intersection of Peninsula and Ferry roads.

Re-gravel efforts in Eveline Township will include Gaunt Road and sections of Loomis Road. Seal coating plans have not yet been set in stone. Skrzeczkoski said the township plans to wait until spring to see where the freeze thaw cycle has caused the most damage.

According to Bud Boss, Marion Township Supervisor, the Marion Township Road Millage brings in about $40,000. Last year, the money was used to gravel all non-seasonal roads and to seal coat existing tar and chipped roads.

Boss said, this year, the township will work to finish gravel work on the non-seasonal roads and will seal coat more of the existing tar and chipped roads.

Both Marion and Eveline townships' voters will be headed back to the polls this August to decide whether or not to renew the millage.

"It's up to the (voters). If they want us to continue improving roads, vote it in, if they don't want it done, vote against it," Skrzeczkoski said.

Road millages for Hayes and Norwood townships were passed in August of 2001. Norwood is collecting a full mill each year through 2003 and in Hayes, just under a mill will be collected each year through 2004.

The dollar amount the township collects is based on that township's equalized value.

Norwood estimated that for the fiscal year 2002 the millage would generate $27,450.

Last year, Norwood worked to improve Richardson and Stover roads.

According to Mark Maynard, Norwood Township Board Trustee, millage dollars will be put to work this year, after the ground thaws. Township administrators are currently working on road improvement plans.

Maynard said the plan will most likely include improvements to Ferry Road.

Hayes Township's road millage went into effect for the 2001 tax year and township residents paid the road millage in December as part of the winter tax bill. Hayes anticipates generating $114,624 for road repair from the millage, to be spent on projects this coming season.

Ethel Knepp, Hayes Township Clerk, said the total project budget will also include $60,000 that was left over from 1999 road millage collections.

Recent Hayes Township road improvements have focused on repairing Old US-31 from Burgess Road to Boyne City-Charlevoix Road. The Old US-31 project will be tackled in two phases.

After H & D of Bay Shore fixes the first phase of the project, which was funded by a former road millage, the township hopes to direct repairs north of Burgess Road along Old US-31. The section that has already been worked on cracked in many sections.

According to Tim Boyko, Hayes Township Supervisor, no major projects for this coming road work season have been firmly decided. It will base its project list on an extensive list of road work information the board received March 7, from the Charlevoix County Road Commission.

Boyko described the information the commission collected as, "a long range planning tool, a guide for the township."

The list includes roads that require gravel work including portions of Dalton Road, one mile of Stephens Road, Stolt Road, Berg Road, Brown Road, .15 miles of Hyek Road, and .2 miles of Evers Road.

It also outlines a wedging, widening project, for the length of Burnett Road and reconstruction of a portion of Burgess and Stolt roads and Nine Mile Point Drive.

According to the list, seal coat projects for the near and distant future in Hayes Township include: portions of Pincherry, Quarterline, Stolt, Townline and Murray roads and all of Burnett, Upper Bay Shore, Shrigley and See roads.

Boyko said this list underwent review by the township board at its meeting March 11. The board is beginning to prioritize the projects.

Even with the millage money, township officials are struggling to keep up with needed road repairs.

They are given financial support from the Charlevoix County Road Commission. According to Pat Harmon, road commission manager, there are several ways the commission helps out.

In road resurfacing projects the county will offer assistance in paying for the third inch of black top.

The road commission also offers to do all the project engineering at no cost to the townships and, in gravel projects, it meets the townships halfway. The townships pay for the gravel and the road commission crew spreads it. The same rule applies with seal coating; the township provides the material and the road commission supplies the equipment and labor.

St. Patrick's Day to be focus of some events

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Irish and non-Irish celebrants running around March 17 proclaiming the virtues of St. Patrick and looking for related events this year are finding Charlevoix is home to a few related happenings.

But, the week before St. Patrick's Day and straight through March 17, some Charlevoix organizations, churches, restaurants, bars and schools will join the rest of the world in celebrating the life of Irish Saint, Patrick.

Members of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce will kick the festivities off early in the week with Business After Hours. The event, which will feature a St. Patrick's Day theme, will be from 5 to 7 p.m., March 14 at the Villager Pub. Sponsors for the event are the Villager Pub and John Cross Fisheries.

Starting at 1 p.m., on March 16, Michigan's Emerald Isle, Beaver Island, will have its annual St. Patrick's Day celebration starting outside of the Shamrock Bar in St. James. Participants can compete in events such as the Fish Stomp, Fish Toss, Shopping Cart Race, Limerick Contest and the King and Queen contest.

On March 17, everyone is invited to fill up on Irish cuisine and libations at Stafford's Weathervane Restaurant — the restaurant is hosting a day-long happy hour. The festivities start at noon and end when the bar shuts down. Free Irish appetizers will be served at 4:30 p.m.

St. Mary's Church and school is sponsoring its annual St. Patrick's Day Dinner. The event will take place from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., March 17 at the St. Mary's Family Center located at 1003 Bridge Street in Charlevoix. Dine in, carry out and delivery are all options.

The cost of the meal is $7 for adults, $6 for seniors and $3.50 for children. The menu includes corned beef, cabbage, ham, mashed potatoes, green beans, a salad bar and an array of homemade desserts.

While dining, why not clue your fellow revelers in about why they're celebrating.

According to Encyclopedia Britannica, St. Patrick is believed to have been born in the late fourth century. He was the patron saint and national apostle of Ireland credited with bringing Christianity to Ireland.

Most of what is known about him comes from two books he wrote, Confessio, a spiritual autobiography, and Epistola, a scathing review of British mistreatment of Irish Christians.

In Confessio, St. Patrick described himself as a "most humble-minded man pouring forth a continuous peaen of thanks to his maker for having chosen him as the instrument whereby multitudes who had worshipped idols and unclean things had become the people of God."

One theory as to why his life and accomplishments are celebrated March 17 claims it to be the date of his death.

And, why are you wearing a shamrock on your shirt? Well, according to Encyclopedia Britannica, a shamrock is "any of several similar-appearing trifoliate plants (divided into three leaflets)."

Irish legend maintains, St. Patrick chose the shamrock as a symbol of the church's Holy Trinity — three leaflets representing the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, all bound by one common stalk.

Wood sorrel is a common shamrock that is shipped in mass from Ireland to other countries for St. Patrick's Day.

So, now that you know some interesting bits of information related to St. Patrick, get out and have fun and don't forget to wear green on Sunday.

Venetian fireworks court trial postponed

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A trial scheduled to take place during April and May in Charlevoix County's 33rd Circuit Court, involving nine plaintiffs claiming damages from the July 27, 1997 Venetian Festival fireworks accident, has been postponed.

Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas, recently issued a stay in the case, pending a final decision by the Michigan Court of Appeals.

The appeal followed Pajtas' decision to dismiss Second Chance Body Armor Inc., a Central Lake based retailer that sells bullet resistant vests, from the suits.

"The Court of Appeals will review the trial court's decision. It can affirm the decision or overturn it and remand the claims against Second Chance for trial before a jury," Pajtas, stated in a briefing regarding the change in status of the fireworks cases.

"If the trials were to proceed next month and the appeals court later remanded the claims against defendant Second Chance for trial by jury, all the cases would have to be tried over again. Therefore, all parties agreed it is better to wait for a decision from the Court of Appeals before the trials begin," he added.

The appellate court recently made the decision to hear the plaintiffs' appeal.

Daniel Steele, attorney for Second Chance, said the plaintiffs' claim, Second Chance participated in the 1997 display. However, Pajtas found there wasn't enough evidence to support that claim.

"Judge Pajtas spent a lot of time on this case and we believe he made the right decision in dismissing Second Chance Body Armor from all of the fireworks cases, because Second Chance Body Armor had no involvement with the fireworks show in Charlevoix in 1997. We are confident that the Court of Appeals will uphold Judge Pajtas' decision and we will still be out of the case," Steele said in a written statement..

Steele estimated the appellate court would hear the case several months from now.

Pajtas said, "I cannot say when we will get the case back from the Court of Appeals and reset the matters for jury trial. Hopefully, it will be soon although the matter on appeal is complex."

Other defendants who have been dismissed from the cases include: United Pyrotechnics Inc., Hunan Provincial Fireworks and Firecrackers Import/Export Corp., Temple of Heaven and Marvin McKay, PyroShows Inc., city of Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson, former City Clerk Jo Anne Patrick, the city of Charlevoix and City Manager Mike Wiesner, city Fire Chief Doug Carver, 1997 Venetian Festival Chairman John Taylor and the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

The nine plaintiffs are Charles and Diana Cradduck, Taddeusz and Janet Dobrowolski, Gary and Bryan Kress, Frances Ladi, James Sr. and Winifred Snider, Mark and Lisa Sokolowski, Laura Wilson, Shannon Wilson and Deborah Yager.

The plaintiffs' trial brief, which was filed jointly by their attorneys, explains what occurred the day of the accident.

The brief states, "This explosion occurred when a 12 inch ball type pyrotechnic shell exploded prematurely while still in the mortar. The explosion shattered the mortar and caused a sympathetic explosion and mortar break in one or more of the adjacent launching tubes."

Defendants currently remaining in the cases are: Richard Davis, Fireworks North, Wolverine Fireworks Display Incorporated, Glen Crawford, Lawrence Grise and Michael Jaye.

The lawsuits were filed against the defendants seeking compensation for injuries sustained by the plaintiffs when they were hit by fragments and debris from the explosion. Charlevoix resident Mark Yager was killed in the blast.

The primary claim stated in the brief is against Davis, display operator, permit holder for the fireworks display and defendant in the cases. Davis is also owner and president of Fireworks North, a corporation he formed to conduct fireworks displays throughout Michigan, and part owner of Second Chance Body Armor.

The plaintiffs argue Davis violated well-known and universally accepted industry standards as well as common sense in conducting the display.

The plaintiffs' brief states, "The most outrageous of his many violations was allowing the spectators to assemble at less than 10 percent of the required separation distance. According to the standards promulgated by the National Fire Protection Association the separation distance for the Charlevoix display should have been 840 feet."

The brief states the standards used by the fire protection association base crowd separation distance on the size of the fireworks being displayed. It states, "Spectators should be set back 70 feet for each diameter inch of the largest display mortar."

The plaintiffs claim, and Davis testified, 12 inch mortars were used at the Charlevoix display. Thus, according to the fire protection agency's standard, the crowd should have been 840 feet from the trailer but the brief states people gathered 50 feet away.

It states that during Davis' deposition he admitted to having no formal pyrotechnics training. He further claims that before the 1997 Venetian accident he had no knowledge of the National Fire Protection Association or any other of the generally accepted industry standards or guidelines concerning the discharge of fireworks.

The brief states during Davis' deposition he said he constructed homemade launching trailers to perform the Charlevoix display.

The plaintiffs claim the design of the trailer he used also violated standards for fireworks launching equipment and posed a significant risk of injury.

The plaintiffs also filed suit against Wolverine Fireworks Display Incorporated, a defendant in the case. Wolverine Fireworks Display is a fireworks supply company based in Kawkawlin who sold shells as well as mortar tubes to Davis in 1997. Davis testified these were used at the Charlevoix display.

However, according to the brief, no expert has been able to identify the shell involved in the accident as being supplied by Wolverine, as it was consumed in the explosion.

Wolverine Fireworks Display Inc. also sold Davis launching equipment at the beginning of the 1997 season.

The plaintiffs are claiming negligent sale and product liability against Wolverine.

The plaintiffs explain their negligence claim in the brief. It states, "In addition, Wolverine supplied fireworks and launching equipment to Davis despite its knowledge that he intended to handle and display these explosives in violation of industry standards and federal law."

Crawford is Davis' brother-in-law and a defendant in the cases. The plaintiffs' brief states Crawford played a role in the construction of the launching trailer and participated in the Charlevoix display.

Crawford also testified that there were several modifications made to the trailer he and others constructed before the Charlevoix Venetian festival display.

Grise, a defendant in the case, played a role in the construction of the launching trailer and participated in the Charlevoix display.

The brief states, Jaye, participated in the Charlevoix display and investigating police officers noted he had been drinking.

Davis and Fireworks North Inc. carried no liability insurance for public fireworks displays.

City Hall changes should start in spring, summer

CITY

To prepare for city hall to operate from the old post office location, remodeling needs to take place. The original timeline showed these changes starting Feb. 23, 2002. But, as of March 6, 2002, no construction changes were started.

Shull estimated post office renovations would begin in late spring or early summer.

He said, while the renovation design for city hall has been decided, smaller details like, transferring records, relocating city meetings and furniture questions, are taking more time than expected.

Possible meeting locations include the Coast Guard training room below Bridge Park and the basement of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, Shull said.

However, he added that finding solutions to the small issues isn't the city's biggest challenge.

"Our biggest challenge is renovating the building to meet the future needs of the city," he said.

Shull, 40, of Marion Township, has been working with Fuller-Nichols, Harbor Springs architects assigned to the project, for one year and has spent the last few months in the city's vault organizing documents and records dating back to the 1800s.

City Manager Mike Wiesner said, when he drafted the initial timeline, he underestimated the size of the task. He pointed to many of the same small details Shull outlined as the cause of the hold up.

"There are a lot of planning issues that make a renovation like this more complicated than a new building construction project would be," he said.

Shull and Wiesner recently met with the city hall renovation committee and Kirk Grimshaw and Joe Troyer, representing Grand Rapids based Intaglio.

Marion Township discusses sewer line

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

After four hours of informational presentations related to the city of Charlevoix's proposed Marion Township sewer extension, the Marion Township Planning Commission decided to adjourn the meeting and reconvene at 7 p.m. tomorrow, Thursday.

The planning commission will begin to deliberate whether or not the proposed project is consistent with the township master plan and whether or not the proposed project is comparable with what exists.

The meeting will be at the Marion Township Hall off Marion Center Road.

Eight presentations were made during the March 11 public hearing. Presenters included representatives of the three parties involved: the new Charlevoix High School which the proposed sewer would initially service, the city which is running the line and concerned residents of Marion Township.

The meeting began with John Martin, a planning commission member and city street department superintendent, disqualifying himself from the conversation due to a conflict of interest.

Gerry Harsch, the city planner and John Adams, owner of John Adams and Associates, the Ypsilanti engineering company who crafted the construction plans, presented the project.

One of the residents' main concerns is the threat of urban sprawl and the loss of rural character that may result if the line is constructed.

Katherine King, a representative from The HumaNature Project of Ann Arbor, an environmental group, described the sewer as a development magnet.

Jim Braithwaite, a professional engineer and chairman of Boyne City's Vector Resolutions, echoed King's claim when he said, "This is the first phase in a much larger project planned by the city. This is the first phase of massive urban sprawl."

Braithwaite and King urged the commission to take a close look at the long-term, cumulative impact of the project. Braithwaite warned once the sewer line is in, requests for zoning upgrades and special use permits will follow.

A remark made by several residents was, "If you build it, they will come."

Harsch addressed this concern. He said there are 14 parcels of land proposed to be included in the project that can be served under the agreement the city is requesting be made with the township.

"There would need to be another agreement to change that," Harsch said.

City officials claim proper zoning and planning controls development.

The proposed line is eight inches in diameter and many questioned why a pipe this size is needed if the school only requires a four inch line for its waste disposal.

City representatives cited two factors contributing to the size: design and pre-planning.

Adams said, "When you're building a sewer system in a municipal area or any other area, you plan ahead so, if someone comes in, you have capacity rather than repeating what you have already done."

Harsch said because of the gravity design of the sewer system, Michigan law requires it to be eight inches.

Another factor the commission has to address is the Sewer size questioned at township meeting

SEWER

Michigan Environmental Protection Act (MEPA). That is, does this project constitute an environmental risk?

The city contends it does not and the sewer would reduce the environmental impact of township waste by improving the aquifer.

Adams explained the aquifer is vulnerable to potential contamination when installing a large, on-site septic, the school's alternative.

City representatives cited a township survey in which residents said they value clean air and water and scenic views.

"Construction of the sewer will in no way impact any scenic views," Adams said.

The sewer line will be run underground using the latest in technology to dig the trench and lay the pipe to lessen any environmental impact the construction itself may have.

The project has also been awarded an easement by the Belvedere Club to run the sewer line on its property to save trees.

But township residents and King said the secondary impacts should not be dismissed when discussing MEPA. King said the commission should consider future ramifications of sprawl including: loss of scenic views and open space and should consider the loss of prime farmland and rural character.

"What legacy do we want to leave behind? (If the sewer project proceeds) there will be a shift in the fabric of this community that will happen over the next 20 years," King said.

Marion Township resident, Bob Bird, agreed secondary issues associated with the project should be at the forefront of thought by the commission in deciding whether or not to grant the project site plan approval.

He said, "It's not if, it's when I'll have an industrial park right in my front yard. If the city wants a sewer out there, let them run it and have the school tap into it."

Air attack

The office of the Charlevoix Courier had a visit last week from a hawk. The bird flew into a window at the newspaper March 5 and knocked itself out. Classified manager Valerie Pedersen thought the animal was dead and brought it inside to put it in a box, however, the bird soon came back to life. After it flew around the office and dive bombed the employees for a while, Pedersen was able to capture it and release it outside. (Photo by Kim Taylor)

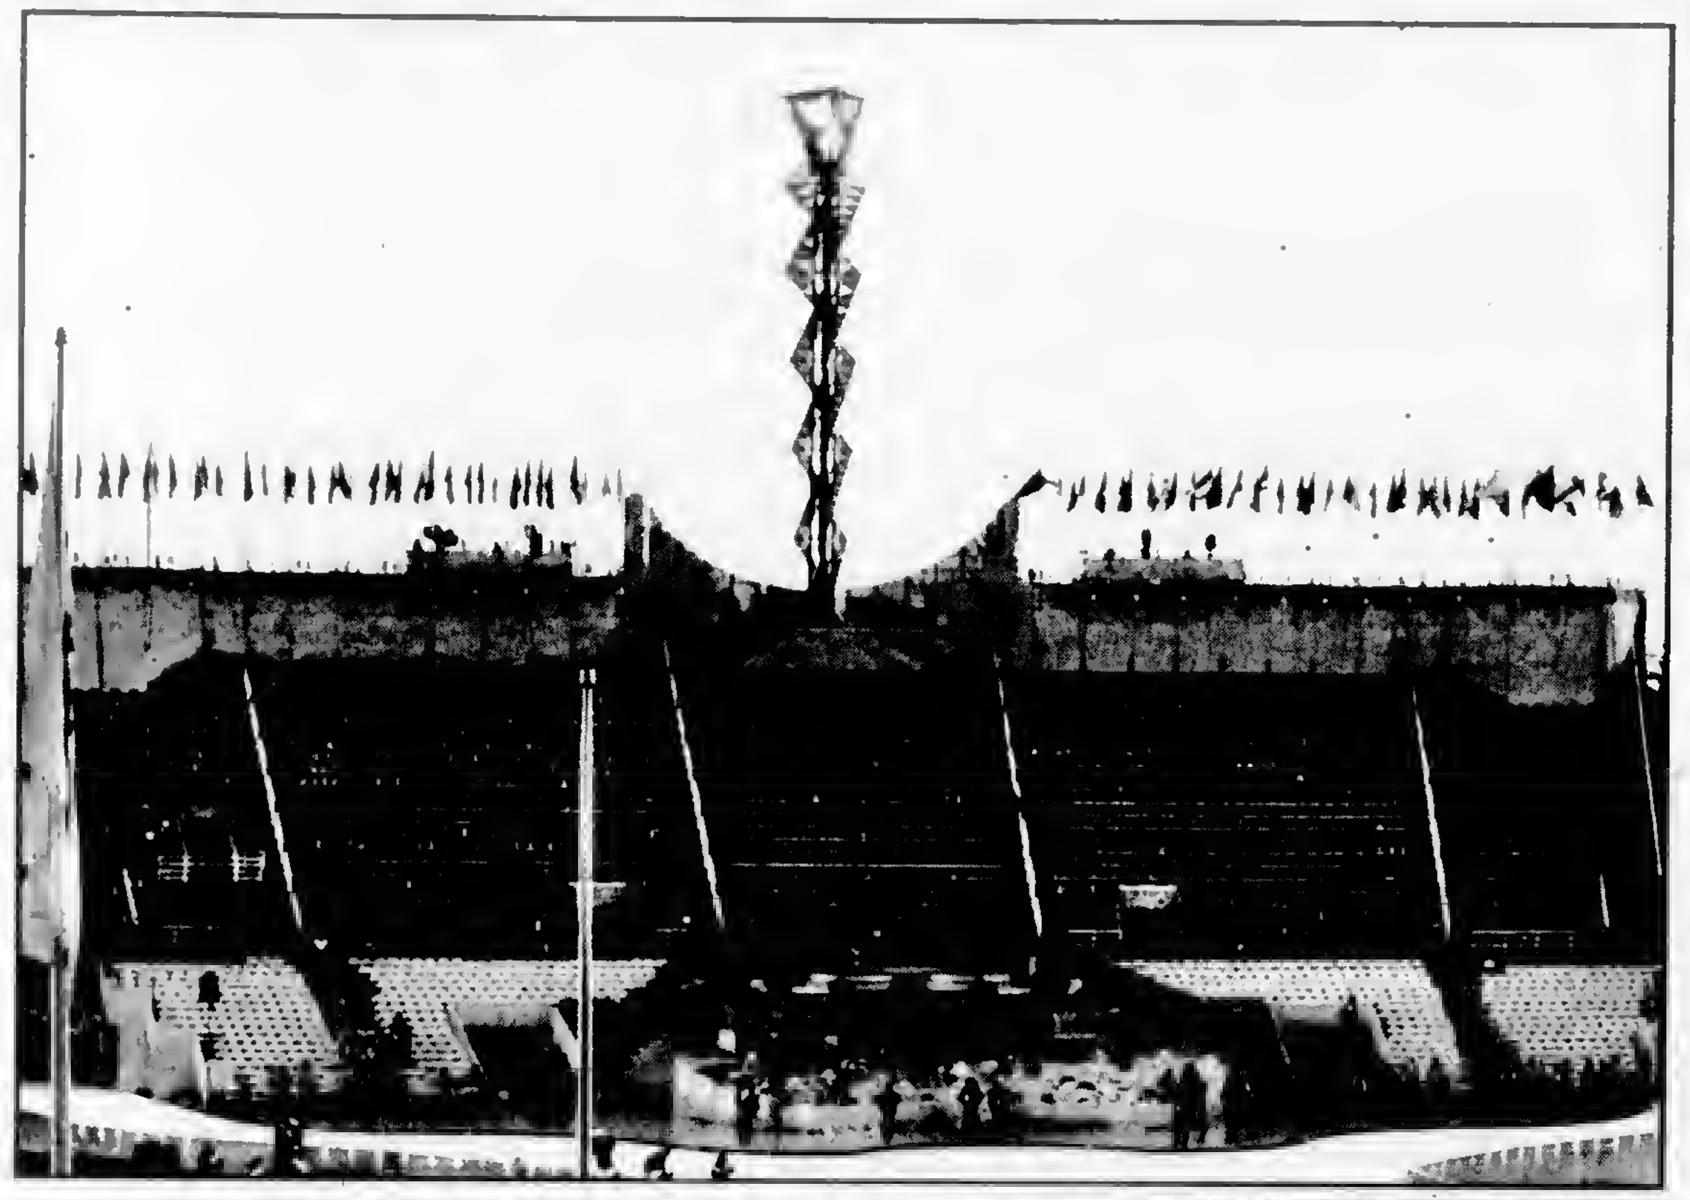
Olympic security

Charlevoix city police chief Dennis Halverson returned from Salt Lake City, Utah Feb. 27 after almost three weeks of volunteer security work at the Winter Olympic Games.

During his stay, Halverson patrolled several venues in the Olympic Square including the Ice Center, the Media Center and the Medals Plaza. At each stop he met interesting new people and learned new "major event" law enforcement techniques, further broadening his vocational skills. (Photos courtesy of Dennis Halverson)



(Above) Jennifer Robinson, Canadian Champion from Windsor, Ontario, Canada, came in seventh in the women's figure skating event. Halverson ran into Robinson several times and snapped this shot while she practiced. (Left) He also attended closing ceremonies Feb. 24. He said when the torch went out, it was very emotional for everyone involved.

(Right) This is one of the Supervised VSA points, a vehicle screening area. Any vehicle that entered the Olympic Square had to come through one of these points. When this photo was taken, Halverson was monitoring the VSA along with 15-20 Army personnel who worked under his direction. The soldiers called Halverson LEO which stands for law enforcement officer. When Apollo Anton Ohno, the United States short track skater who won the gold medal, came through, his luggage had not yet been checked and it was up to Halverson to complete the search. This happened the night of the race. (Below) USA Today named Halverson and his fellow law enforcement officials who patrolled the Winter Olympics, the Killer Bees, because of the yellow and black winter uniforms they wore. In this photo, Halverson and his fellow response team members stumbled upon this bee outside a Utah restaurant. They are Halverson, Rod Natale of Southern California and Mike Robinette, a U.S. Marshall from Indianapolis, Ind.

Halverson took advantage of an afternoon off by taking on the mens downhill run. He skied it six times and his legs felt all six runs the next day. Judge Richard May of the 90th District Court for Charlevoix County joined him for a run during a visit he and his wife made during the games.

Bullies may cause more trouble than you think

Everyone remembers at least one classmate who was well-known for aggressively taunting and teasing kids with braces or glasses, or even pushing around the kids who were smaller than others, just to get some laughs.

You might even recall teachers and parents dismissing the behavior as "kids being kids" or telling those tormented to just ignore the bully. But ignoring a bully, whose behavior may be rooted in immense frustration or even abuse, usually isn't the answer.

Child and adolescent mental health specialists at the University of Michigan Health System say both parents and childcare providers need to be aware of what creates a bully's behavior and the toll it can take on the bully's victim to know when intervention is necessary.

"When you really take a close look at bullying, it's happening with kids who feel the need to be aggressive after being treated in an aggressive manner themselves," Paul Quinlan, D.O., director of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry Inpatient Services at the University of Michigan Health System, said.

"They're the kids who may be suffering from abuse or from just not having their needs met at school or at home," he added.

Quinlan said between two and 16 percent of the population under the age of 18 bully others. According to Kids Health, the most obvious signs of bullying are hostility and aggression — either physically, verbally, emotionally or sexually — that is directed toward another child who is physically and emotionally weaker. And the National Parent Teacher Association says one of every 10 children is the regular victim of a bully.

So, what makes children become a bully? Often children who are dealing with difficult situations at home, such as divorce or in school, will bully others as a way to feel more important or in control of things happening in their lives. Typically a school-yard bully is a child who has low self-esteem and is looking to achieve popularity.

"I don't think they really mean what they're doing," Karthik, an elementary school student, said about why some kids bully.

"I think they just want to try and bully someone so they feel cool. But really, they're not cool — they're just doing something very bad to someone else."

And if the bullying persists and becomes chronic behavior, Quinlan warns that the child is at a higher risk to continue to engage in anti-social behavior, such as stealing or attempting to physically hurt others as an adult.

"Bullying is something that needs to be dealt with in a very thorough manner," he said.

grams that deal with children need to work to recognize and identify this problem behavior and offer assistance to families."

When the problem has been identified, Quinlan suggests parents take a close look at where the behavior is occurring — whether it's only happening in school and at home, they should consider getting a mental health referral from their pediatrician to get the situation under control.

"The good news is there's good results with intervention. The situation will be controlled and parents can really begin to help their child," Quinlan said.

Yet, with bullying, the tormentor isn't the only one who may need a little extra help from their parents. At some point, in every person's life, he or she will be the victim of a bully, maybe because they are different from the rest of the kids or they're more vulnerable and easier to pick on, Quinlan said.

Kelly, an elementary school student, knows all-too-well what it's like to be bullied.

"I have been bullied by someone in my neighborhood and he's taken my lunch money and hit me a lot of times — he just hates me and he won't leave my stuff alone," she explained.

Because of such situations, parents always need to be on the look-out for signs of bullying, especially since children often feel embarrassed about the situation and may be reluctant to tell their parents about the bully.

Some signs that a child may be the victim of a bully include: making excuses for not wanting to go to school, difficulty sleeping or eating; increased anxiety about school or certain situations at school like riding the bus, using the restroom or going to recess; missing personal items or the need for extra school supplies or money; excessive trips to the school nurse, especially during unstructured time like lunch or recess and unexplained bruises or torn clothing.

To help a child deal with a bully Quinlan suggests parents encourage their child to speak directly with the bully, but never be physically defensive because bullies are often bigger and stronger than their victim. And, Kelsey, an elementary student, agrees.

"If you feel like your being bullied, you should tell an adult, but if there's no adults around, you should stand up for yourself. But two wrongs don't make a right, so don't push them or hit them back," he said.

Parents also need to provide extra support to boost their child's self-confidence, help them build social skills to avoid conflict and make friends, and encourage them to seek the help of an adult or friends when a bully is around.

Rayders blow out district competition

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

March Madness has come to Charlevoix and the bad news for Charlevoix Rayder basketball opponents is that the team, ranked second in Class C by the Associated Press, has seemingly saved its best basketball for the tournament run.

"We're really starting to click," Rayder coach Keith Haske said. "Everything is starting to jell."

The Rayders opened tournament play with three very impressive victories to win their fourth straight district title. The team has won 42 of their last 43 games and is currently 23-0 on the season.

"During the season from time to time we had some lapses but the team is much more focused now," Haske said. "They're pretty determined and focused."

The Rayders defeated Harbor Springs, 98-53, Elk Rapids, 72-35 and Boyne City, 110-63.

Charlevoix began its march toward its goal of a second straight trip to the state finals with the conquering of Harbor Springs.

The Rayders jumped out quickly, leading 14-3 midway through the first quarter. The highlight in the early going was a Scott Parrish monster jam off a Patrick Gowell steal and feed. Parrish was fouled on the play and converted a three-point play.

Charlevoix never looked back, taking a 27-12 lead on a Travis Smith three-pointer at the end of the first quarter.

The Rams cut the lead to 29-20 with six minutes to go in the half, but back-to-back steals and resulting layups by Keith Daly and Jim Shepherd put the lead to 13. Ryan Rafacz scored followed by a Shepherd three-pointer to cap the 9-0 surge that put the game away.

The Rayders led 47-30 at the half led by Shepherd's 16 points.

In the second half, the Rams defense extended to cover Shepherd and beautiful interior passing by the trio of Parrish, Rob Boss and Scott Friske took advantage, feeding each other on numerous occasions as the lead grew over 25. In the third stanza, Scott Friske tallied eight points.

The Rayder bench kept the game going with a 20-0 run to push the lead from 74-49 to 94-49. Three-point plays by Todd Carey and Spencer Bryan led the way. Bryan scored seven in the fourth quarter.

For the game, Shepherd finished with 21 points. Scott Friske scored 16 and pulled down seven rebounds. Parrish added 13 and Boss had 10. Gowell dished out nine assists and had four steals. Rafacz pulled down six boards, picked up four steals and handed out four assists.

Elk Rapids used a deliberate slowdown offense to keep the Rayders close for one quarter. The Elks led 9-8 with 1:57 to go in the first period before a Gowell three-pointer gave Charlevoix the lead to stay at 11-9. The Rayders led 13-11 at the end of the first quarter on a Nate Teuscher steal and layup.

Shepherd shredded the Elks' defense scoring the Rayders' first eleven points of the second quarter including three three-pointers. Buckets by Boss and Parrish off offensive rebounds closed the half with Charlevoix ahead, 30-17.

The Rayders ended any mystery by using an 11-0 run to open the second half followed by a later 14-0 run to blow the game wide-open. Charlevoix led 56-26 after three quarters. Smith's six straight points in the fourth quarter and Donovan Swanson's five points down the stretch highlighted the fourth period.

Parrish led the Rayders with 16 points and seven rebounds. Shepherd added 15. Rafacz tallied four steals, five rebounds and four assists.

In the district finals, the Rayders scored early and often but Boyne City did as well, trailing only 26-23 at the end of the first quarter.

Charlevoix put the game out of reach with a huge 34-13 second quarter led by Shepherd's 16 points and eight by Parrish including a breakaway slam dunk.

The only questions remaining in the second half was how many points would the Rayders score and how large would the margin of victory be. Charlevoix blew the game open to a forty-point deficit with the running clock resulting on a Bryce Daly jumper to put the lead at 97-57.

Shortly after, the Rayders reached the 100-point mark on a Smith three-pointer with 4:07 left in the game.

Shepherd scored 28 for the game, including six three-pointers. Parrish added 22 points and 10 rebounds. Boss had 12 points and nine rebounds while Scott Friske tallied 11 points and pulled down nine caroms.

Gowell finished with four points, 10 assists and five steals. Rafacz had five steals and five assists. Teuscher dished out eight assists.

"I was very pleased with our effort, especially on offense," Haske said. "We shot the ball real well. You hear about how hard it is to beat teams three times—to do that (beating Harbor, Elk Rapids and Boyne City by blowing them out all three times), that was impressive."

The Rayders now move on to regional play at Cadillac High School. They played Tuesday, March 12 against McBain but results were unavailable at presstime. If Charlevoix wins, they play Friday at 7 p.m. at Cadillac against the winner of the Rogers City-Maple City Glen Lake matchup.

The winner of the Cadillac regional moves on to the quarterfinals at Cheboygan High School on Tuesday, March 19 against the winner of the Upper Peninsula regional.

Airplane crash takes man with vision for area

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

There have been many wealthy, influential men who have come to Charlevoix and discovered the potential and beauty of our area and left a lasting mark on the community.

One of those was I.T. "Ted" Quarnstrom, who first sighted Charlevoix in 1952. He owned the 800 room Whittier Hotel in Detroit. He came to Detroit from Sweden when he was 24 and took a job in a tool shop until he learned to speak English. Then, he began to look into richer fields to conquer. He owned six manufacturing plants of Detroit Mold Engineering (DME) and in 1954 he established Charlevoix's American Mold, one of the city's first industries. He later sold American Mold. This plant is now called DME Company, located on Ferry Avenue.

He listed some of the things which Charlevoix needed to do, saying Charlevoix could not exist without the tourist trade, which is true today. He felt it was necessary to accelerate promotion and advertising of our tourist attractions and that we should improve and add to our facilities to attract and hold these tourists.

On Sunday, Sept. 25, 1964, the new paved and lighted Charlevoix Airport runway was dedicated. Quarnstrom was among the dignitaries present. They were former Mayor E.D. "Pat" Hawley, City Superintendent James Taylor, chairman of the council's airport committee Jerome Whitley, Mayor William Fochtman, assistant director of MDA L.C. Andrews and MDA project engineer Darrell Downey, who was in charge of the Charlevoix airport expansion program.

The Charlevoix Flying Club sponsored a fly-in in connection with the dedication ceremony. More than 100 planes from throughout the state flew in during the day. The Charlevoix Lions Club served breakfast to more than 600 people from the time the fly-in started shortly after 6 a.m. until mid-morning.

Offering plane rides at a penny a pound, more than 700 joy riders took advantage of the offer.

A cold northwest wind was blowing, but did little to chill the festive mood of the day. All of the speakers praised the expanded facilities and commended Joseph McPhillips and Mrs. McPhillips for the fine job they have done in managing and developing the airport.

Later in the day, Quarnstrom's plane was leaving on the new east-west runway. The plane was a twin engine Beechcraft.

It crashed as it was departing for the return trip to Detroit at about 6:15 p.m. It burned upon impact. Those aboard were Quarnstrom; his son, Carl, 26; Edwin Niebeck, the pilot, 36, and Mrs. Barbara Stewart of Detroit.

As the plane was airborne, it veered to the right and then to the left before bounding off the embankment of the railroad spur to the Medusa Portland Cement Company property located south of the airport.

It then struck a double bottom fuel tanker truck, parked in the rear of Harold DeYoung's Sunoco station, before crashing about 30 feet north of US-31. One of the tandem tankers overturned and another car and truck were damaged and pushed through the back block wall of the station.

Clayton A. Smith, of Smith's Little Acre, who was working in his yard about 150 yards west of the crash, raced down the highway to the scene to find two men who had been thrown clear of the crash and badly burned. Smith jumped on the wing of the burning plane when he saw a man attempting to climb through a rear door.

The man, later identified as I.T. Quarnstrom, was pulled through the door by Smith and another man. They returned and tried to get Mrs. Stewart out of the plane, but the flames were very intense and they couldn't reach her.

Fire department personnel, sheriff and police officials were at the site in minutes. The injured were taken to the Little Traverse Hospital, except for young Quarnstrom, who was taken to Charlevoix Hospital by patrolman Richard Wells. All were in critical condition.

A doctor said the younger men suffered burns over 60-70 percent of their bodies. The elder Quarnstrom was not as badly burned, but also suffered a broken back and a fractured hip. Mr. Quarnstrom later died from his injuries.

Jerome Whitley, who had served as master of ceremonies at the dedication ceremony, had been scheduled to return to Detroit aboard the plane, but shortly before take off, he changed his mind. He was leaving the airport when he saw the plane crash and became involved in an accident as he attempted to reach the crash.

In 1964, the American Mold employed 110 people. Mr. Quarnstrom had plans for a development on Lake Charlevoix and had completed three plush villas and had them rented for the entire summer at $150 to $200 per week to yachtsmen from around the Great Lakes. He placed advertisements in yachting publications, which brought the results he expected.

He was a visionary and would have been an asset to our town, had he lived. Charlevoix has proved through the years to attract those who visit and many of them have built here or begun a business. For that, we are thankful.

Committee accused of breaking state law

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix County Commissioners were lambasted by Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur March 13 for an unposted Personnel Committee meeting the week before with a recently fired employee of Kur's office.

Kur said the meeting, which took place on March 6, was a violation of the Open Meetings Act. All commission and committee meetings must be posted in public at least 18 hours in advance of a special meeting according to state law. Regular meetings are posted once a year. The Personnel Committee had a regular meeting the next day.

"I want no part of this, as a public official, this back-handed secret approach to government," Kur said to the commission. "There is no place in county government for this."

Kur has also informed the state Attorney General, Jennifer Granholm, of the possible Open Meetings Act violation. She sent a letter to Granholm about the meeting on March 15.

Wind monitor request tabled by township

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Last week, wind turbine generators again came under serious fire by Eveline Township residents, resulting in the tabling of a special use permit request and talk of future zoning ordinance changes.

An angry crowd filled the township hall March 11 forcing the Eveline Township board to again table Steve Smiley's request for a special use permit. The permit would allow Smiley's company, Bay Windpower of Sutton's Bay, to put up a 164 foot wind monitoring tower on the Eveline Township property of Dawson Way near Ferry and Brock roads.

The request will appear for a third time, on the township board's April 9 agenda.

Emergency service use rises as area grows

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

As more people moved to the Charlevoix area in 2000 and 2001 records reveal most emergency services were in higher demand.

Population numbers in Charlevoix's outlying townships increased in 2001, as did the number of city ambulance and city police runs, the expected correlation, but the number of city fire department runs went down.

"The number of fires we responded to last year went down dramatically. We have no idea why, there's no reason for it," Doug Carver, city fire chief, said.

The City of Charlevoix Fire Department services the city of Charlevoix, Norwood and Marion townships and a portion of Eveline Township.

In 2000, the fire department was on-scene at 146 fires and in 2001 this response number dropped to 109.

One contributor to the overall decrease may be grass fires. The department responded to approximately two grass fires in 2001 and Carver said in the average year, there may be several.

He said the most serious fire the city department responded to in 2001 was a house fire at a home located on the corner of Loeb and Ferry roads. And the most dangerous fire it responded to was an apartment fire at Pine River Place.

"Fortunately the firefighters did a good job and put it out quickly," Carver said of the Pine River Place fire.

He explained that the number of elderly people living in the building coupled with the possibility of the fire spreading made for a potentially extremely dangerous situation.

However, trends in the fire fighting business are less predictable than in the emergency medical service and in the police department. Carver said overall the trend has been an increase in fires each year since 1992 but the numbers have been erratic.

With 2002 off to a busy start, two major fires in the first two months, Carver expects to see an increase for the year as compared to last year.

Even though the population of the city of Charlevoix went down, city police officers were busy in 2001 responding to over 4,200 complaints, motorist issues and assist situations. This number was up 135 responses.

Dennis Halverson, city police chief, attributed the increase to an overall population jump in surrounding townships.

"Year to year we anticipate a two to three percent increase across the board and that's proven true in our statistics. As our population and traffic volumes grow, so does the nature of our work," Halverson said.

He explained, the majority of calls coming into the office are related to non-criminal issues and can be taken care of in a few minutes.

"Most of the calls we get are of a general nature, sort of assist type calls. Anything from non-criminal incidents, assist requests, lost children, keys locked in cars — situations where people don't know who to call, so they call us," he explained.

The more time consuming calls the department investigates like criminal complaints, traffic accidents and medical responses accounted for an additional 399 runs in 2001. This number was up 111 runs from 2000.

However, with non-criminal response numbers on the rise, traffic tickets have realized a considerable decrease. Halverson explained that when non-criminal complaints go up, traffic stops go down because the two are competing for the same time.

Because of this, the police department has increased its officers traffic patrol and enforcement overtime. City police officers patrol 26 miles of city streets.

Community growth has also impacted the city's emergency medical service (EMS).

The city emergency medical technicians (EMT) service the city of Charlevoix, Charlevoix, Norwood and Marion townships and part of Hayes and Eveline townships.

The city EMS went on 783 runs in 2001.

Bob Roloff, a city EMT and fire department shift commander, said the most common incident to which they are called is related to an individual with chest pain or shortness of breath — a possible stroke victim. He said trauma cases, like car accidents, are the least common.

The EMS numbers for 2001 reflected a 12 percent increase in non-transfer calls over 2000. Roloff said the increase is correlated with the growing population.

He added that as Charlevoix Area Hospital widens its range of services, the EMS is being called out to conduct fewer transfers.

OPINIONS

Any Open Meeting violation is serious

EDITORIAL

Every government body in our country is run under the concept of open government.

It allows for an informed public. With an informed public, we have better oversight of the government and thus have a better government.

Under this idea, the state of Michigan created the Open Meetings Act, which requires all government meetings to take place in public, unless it falls under a very specific exemption.

Therefore, it is of great concern to any newspaper when a government body violates the Open Meetings Act. No matter how small the violation is, it is still a disservice to the public.

Such is the case of the alleged violation recently perpetuated by certain members of the Charlevoix County Commission's Personnel Committee.

The three person committee was meeting in an unposted special meeting with John Jarema, who was recently fired from his position as chief assistant prosecutor for the county. The commission also asked the representative of the Charlevoix County Clerk's Office to leave. The members of the committee are: Commissioner Carl Price, Commissioner James Behling and Commissioner Don Smith.

On one hand one can understand why they would want to meet privately. Here they were discussing a personal matter with Jarema and wanted him to be open and honest with them. One could say, "They meant well."

But, on the other hand they are elected officials who must abide by the Open Meetings Act in all government matters. Plus, each of these commissioners are aware of the law and are veterans of the commission.

This makes it hard to understand why they would not realize they were in violation of the law.

They should be ashamed of this action. It is of great concern to the American public when this happens, no matter how private the issue being discussed is. This is a violation of public trust.

Citizens of Charlevoix County should let their election officials on the commission know this will not be tolerated. And the elected officials on the commission should make sure that this never, ever, happens again.

In the meantime, the citizens will be watching a little more closely.

Computer woes make book writing a hard task

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

They say, "Everyone has a book in them." I say that after my experience on the computer, it's best that everyone keep the book right there in them!

Sure, we may picture a writer like Shakespeare, alone with his thoughts, writing masterpieces with a quill pen. Ha! That was then, this is now. Then, all the Bard needed to do to get off to a good writing start was to chase a rooster, snatch a feather quill, trim the tip and end up with a pen.

Today, the first thing I needed to do after getting a book assignment was to get more memory on my computer, so I hired the Computer Doctor from Traverse City, who took the computer apart and got me set up at $60 an hour. After working on-line for a while, and answering E-mail wedding etiquette questions from all over the world, I got a slew of six viruses.

This time, CTL Systems of Charlevoix came to help. They took the computer to the shop for repair, which meant I was behind schedule for three days. Considering I had a tight deadline, my workplace was not a happy scene. After my computer was returned, my printer went on the blink, on the weekend.

I was advised to get a new printer, which I did. Lo and behold, the new printer was not compatible with my old computer! I was advised to get a new computer, which I did. Thank heaven, this time friend David Garland came to the rescue. He installed the new computer for me, which is now compatible with my new printer.

Hallelujah! However, the new printer came with a new anti-virus system that took more getting used to.

Mike Bergeon showed me how to run the required six disks every so often and how to clear the viruses. I e-mailed all my friends and asked them not to send me any attachments, which often are the cause of viruses.

From experience, I learned that even attachments from friends were also suspect, because someone can go into your computer and retrieve the names of your addresses and then send you bogus virus messages.

Now I don't open any attachments except, of course, from my book editor. She is located in Pennsylvania and my publisher is located in Florida and both are having problems sending me pictures and galleys that are compatible to each other's computers and mine as well.

Fortunately Laurie Hodgson finally showed me how to use something called Acrobat and I am able to view the new cover of my forthcoming party book called, "Easy Entertaining."

Believe me, entertaining 100 friends or more sure is easier than trying to write about it! I shall always be in debt to the dear souls who jumped to my rescue during the ordeal of writing this book.

Right now my feeling is that even though I have another book in me, "That's where it is going to stay!"

Go Rayders

Editor:

As a faithful Rayder fan I would like to take the liberty of speaking for this entire community by telling you how proud we all are of this group, as players and as people.

As I left work the day after the McBain game, I stopped at Oleson's and the store was abuzz with "game talk." The theme was the same — no matter the speaker — how grateful we all are to have these events to come together, to support you and to cheer you on. I can only hope that you are as proud of yourselves as we are of you.

To the graduating seniors, we have enjoyed watching you on the court since you were in middle school. Good luck in your future. To those of you that will return next year, go Rayders!

Proud of Rayder Nation

Editor:

As I drove into Charlevoix after being in the car for seven hours, I noticed that once again the entire town was painted in maroon and white. I laughed to myself and laughed even harder when my parents told me that Charlevoix was now known as the "Rayder Nation." The next morning when my alarm signaled it was time to wake up so that I could be in line at the high school to purchase tickets for the basketball game the following night, I complained. When my parents told me that we had to leave for the game at 3 p.m., Tuesday, I complained. When we arrived at Cadillac High School and stood in line for two hours for the gym doors to open, I complained.

My complaining ended though as soon as I began to look around the gym at all the excited faces of the fans wearing their "Most Wanted" shirts. I enjoyed being able to watch the boys play such a nail biting game and I enjoyed being able to see many members of the community that I hadn't seen since Christmas break. There are not very many places in this world where a person can go to one event and run into nearly every person from their town. As Rob Boss went up with his last shot, and the buzzer sounded shortly thereafter, I found myself getting pretty teary-eyed. For someone who had done their fair share of complaining and mocking the "Rayder Nation," watching the boys bid farewell to their expected victory was a tough thing to observe.

Because I have a sister in the senior class, I have watched these very same boys both on and off the court since I was 9 years old. It was heartbreaking to see the dispirited looks on their faces as they exited the court Tuesday night. Although they may not have made it to Breslin, they did do something for themselves and for our community that they need to be extremely proud of. The bond that they share as a team made them as successful as they were and gave them the town support they deserved.

Being able to come home from college for spring break and witness the Rayder's final game is something I'll remember forever. It not only gave me the chance to see what a talented team they were, but it also gave me the opportunity to remember why Charlevoix is the place that I'll always call home in my heart. No where else in the world would one be able to feel the sense of family and caring within their community that one feels in Charlevoix — even more apparent at an event such as a Rayder basketball game.

So thank you Rayders for reminding those of us who have moved away from Charlevoix and those who still live here how much each member of our community cares about one another. And congratulations on a tremendous season — you guys are the best!

Thank you Rayders

Community should be proud

Editor:

First and foremost, I would like to thank the members of the Charlevoix Boys' Basketball Team and Coach Keith Haske for the wonderful and fun filled season. As a lifelong resident of East Jordan, and a long time fan of basketball, I had reservations attending my first Charlevoix Boys' Basketball game. The team and the fans accepted my cousins — team members who are recent transfers — with open arms. The community embraced and reached to my parents and myself by making us feel like we were true members of the Charlevoix community. The ability for a community to become such a close-knit family is an amazing thing. To watch at each game the numbers of attendees grow was unbelievable.

To the team, you have helped to set an awesome example for all upcoming Rayders and other area teams to strive for. Your great attitudes and ability to get the community involved in such a mass has proven that all of you are winners. You have taught the community not only to love the game of basketball, but to support and be proud of every single one of you. The most difficult lessons come in some of the most heartbreaking situations. I hope that years from now you will be able to look back and see the great accomplishments you have made, becoming ambassadors for northern lower Michigan, uniting a community, finally teaching many new fans what it is like to love the game of basketball.

To Haske, thank you for a memorable year. You are a true motivator, confidant and friend to all on the team. You respect and treat the team as if they were part of your family. The professionalism and ability to relate to your team is amazing. You also have helped the community find something deep down within itself. You helped me and my parents to realize that it does not matter what town you are from, what really matters is camaraderie and love for the game of basketball can be enjoyed by all.

Finally, to the Charlevoix community, thank you for embracing outsiders. To those trusty fans who would watch for us to arrive and wave us into the bleachers, it was greatly appreciated. As a community you have supported a team like no other. It's an amazing thing to sell out tickets for a tournament game in only 17 minutes. My parents and I look forward to seeing all of you during the upcoming seasons.

The boys on this team are truly remarkable. You will not be forgotten!

Thank you for the great memories.

No homework

Editor:

I am a sixth grader at Charlevoix Middle School. I think we should not have homework in school.

One reason is that homework takes up too much time. Even though the kids should get it done in class, some of them don't. They might have basketball practice until late that night.

Also, some homework is too hard for kids. For many kids have hard times figuring out how to do the homework, and they need help with each question. Even parents have hard times figuring out the problems. Some parents can't help their children with their homework because the problems are so hard and confusing.

That's why I think we should not have any homework in school.

More punishment for animal cruelty

Editor:

I am a student attending Charlevoix Middle School. I think that animal cruelty deserves more of a prison sentence than what it is getting.

Most people walk away with a fine, or one or two years in prison. I believe this is unfair because these people can go out and do it again, because, they don't get it! I think that people who do this should go to prison for, at least, 10 years. This might make them not want to do this any more. If not, they might think it doesn't mean much and, as I said before, do it again!

I believe we should put this into performance right away. Otherwise, one, then another, then other pets are going to go into shelters, and maybe even euthanized!

Please put what I request into action right away, because you never know how many animals can be carelessly killed because of a few people.

Student competing at national spelling bee

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Elyse Michrina, a Charlevoix Middle School eighth grade student, will represent Charlevoix at the upcoming National Spelling Bee competition in Washington D.C.

The 13-year-old is the epitome of an easy going, mature teen and her laid back approach to the competition may give her the edge to win. But taking home the trophy isn't her top priority.

Elyse Michrina

"Its not important to me that I win or get far in Washington. I'm glad I've gotten this far. I just want to have fun," Michrina said.

This will be her first time in Washington D.C. and she's excited to explore.

"I'm kind of a dork — I like museums. While I'm there I think I'll take a lot of tours," she said.

While the prospect of having an exciting vacation is part of the picture, Michrina's track record shows, she's a contender for the national title.

She took third place in the Emmet County Bee Feb. 8 and took first place in the 21st Annual Grand Traverse Regional Spelling Bee March 10 at the Dennos Museum in Traverse City.

She beat out almost 40 other students at the regional competition by correctly spelling the word "chandelier." She said the word choice earlier in the event was much more challenging.

Michrina will join 12 other Michigan residents and other students from across the nation to form a group of an estimated 300 student competitors.

This year is Michrina's first experience with competitive spelling bees. She remembers participating is spelling events during fifth grade, but those were within her class. The event which is scheduled to take place soon is national.

Michrina polishes her spelling skills by reading "a very lot."

She leaves May 25 for Washington, the national competition will take place May 29.

Hands-on class teaches problem solving

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Any one, or even all, of Charlevoix teacher Joe Wood's students could be future automation experts for America.

Using the skills they are learning in the Charlevoix High School Robotics and Automation, the students are designing, making, assembling and operating their own automated candy wrapping machine. Every part to the machine is being made from scratch by the students.

"We are actually applying different things we have learned over high school. And it is nice to learn new things about motors and controls," Allen Brooks, a student in the class, said. "It is good to learn about engineering."

According to Woods, once the project is complete, the machine will take a piece of candy, put it into a plastic container, put a clear plastic wrap over it and seal the candy into the container for shipment. Students are split into groups of three or four, with each concentrating on a different part to the candy wrapping machine.

The students are entering the project in an engineering contest that will be May 4-5 in New York. This will be the fourth time in five years Wood's class has entered an automated design into this contest. Two years ago, the class entered a different contest with the same type of focus.

Woods said the class teaches students a variety of skills. To make the machinery, the students can use computer automated design programs and engineering techniques.

In the process of building it, he said problems usually come up and the students must determine ways to solve them. At the same time, the students are learning to work as a team in small groups and with the entire class.

"The class has a wide range of students. We get a lot of crossovers," Woods said.

Jim Dilworth, a twelfth grade student in the class, said he really enjoys working on the project.

"Personally, I like design and making the parts we are putting together," he said.

Larry Feyer, a twelfth grade German exchange student in the class, added the class is not like normal high school classes. He said much of the class time is spent using real situations to test the student's problem solving skills.

Woods said many former students of his class have gone on to pursue similar subjects in college. He said students are located in colleges throughout the nation learning engineering, technology and building trades after originally learning about the subjects at Charlevoix High School.

A good diet makes for a healthy heart

Everything you eat, from cookies and cheeseburgers to fruits and fish, has an impact on your heart's health.

The typical high-fat American diet can be especially dangerous, contributing to an estimated 75 percent of premature heart disease through its effect on high cholesterol, high blood pressure and diabetes.

Heart disease is the leading cause of death in the United States. So, to keep your heart healthy, specialists at the University of Michigan Preventive Cardiology Program suggest enlisting the help of a registered dietitian to find a diet that's best suited to the health needs of your heart and blood vessels.

"The typical American diet is high in fat, particularly saturated fat, and sodium, and low in fiber, fruits and vegetables and healthy fats from fish, can help lower the risk of heart disease," said Katherine Rhodes, director of nutrition at University of Michigan's Preventive Cardiology Program.

To start eating a diet that's best for your heart, sign a registered dietitian on to your medical team. Dietitians have the expertise to create a personalized eating plan that can have a positive effect on your health and even reduce the need for medications. Reducing the need for medications may have a direct impact on your wallet too.

In a statewide study conducted by U-M, researchers followed the progress of patients who worked with registered dietitians to create a personalized heart-healthy diet. The study found more than 40 percent of patients who used a registered dietitian were able to reach their Low Density Lipoprotein (LDL) cholesterol goal without starting medication or increasing their current cholesterol-lowering medications.

Reducing LDL cholesterol decreases the risk for heart disease.

To start a diet that's best for you, the first thing to keep in mind, said Rhodes, is that it's never too early to start eating a well-balanced diet. In fact, she recommends a balanced heart-healthy diet for everyone over the age of two.

"Heart disease develops at a very early age in this country," she said. "We have an epidemic of childhood obesity and we're seeing more and more Type II diabetes developing earlier and earlier in our population. Heart disease is never far behind."

A variety of research studies have shown the importance of including fruits and vegetables every day to prevent heart disease, high blood pressure and decrease the risk of some cancers, says Rhodes.

The key to avoiding certain health risks is to tailor nutrition recommendations to an individual's health situation and lifestyle.

"What we've learned is that one diet doesn't fit all," Rhodes said. "Most people don't know how to individualize nutrition recommendations for their particular health status, cultural preference and budget-these are all things a dietitian can help with."

A heart-healthy diet begins with:

- Fruits and vegetables: Rhodes recommends five to nine servings of at least three different colors of fruits and vegetables each day.
- Fiber. Rhodes said fiber, especially soluble fiber, is an important part of every diet. Soluble fiber can be found in oats, beans, whole fruits and vegetables. It can help lower cholesterol, making it a key component of any low-fat diet. It also stabilizes blood sugars and helps to keep you fuller in-between meals.
- Low-fat meats and cheese are also important. Rhodes suggests including fish in a weekly diet and when buying poultry, remove the skin. Also shop for leaner cuts of red meat, particularly the ones labeled "round" or "loin"
- Every low-fat diet should include complex carbohy-

Commission approves sewer reviews

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Marion Township Planning Commission unanimously granted approval of three reviews it conducted related to the city of Charlevoix's proposed Marion Township sewer extension.

The planning commission's decision brings the city just three steps away from being ready to break ground on the line that will run up Marion Center Road to the site of the new high school.

Mike Wiesner, city manager, explained the city has to finalize contracts with Charlevoix Township and the Charlevoix School District and receive final approval from the Marion Township Board.

The Marion Township Board met March 18 to make its final decision.

The contract with Charlevoix Township will be considered tonight, March 20, by the Charlevoix Township Board.

Wiesner said a meeting between city officials and the school regarding the revised contract will likely be scheduled for March 25.

When the last three approvals are granted, the city will consider awarding the project contract to build the sewer. Wiesner said the contract will likely go to Corvette Construction of Grawn.

"They could start right away, as soon as (the contracts are signed and) the material and the equipment are on site," he added.

Of all the reviews it has faced, the major hurdle the city sewer project jumped occurred March 14 when the Marion Township Planning Commission unanimously granted it site plan approval, and approved its compliance with both the township master plan and with the Michigan Environmental Protection Act (MEPA).

Their decisions followed a lengthy public hearing that took place March 11.

Tim Matchett, planning commission chairman, said the commission based its decisions on findings of fact submitted by the city but altered by the commission.

With each decision the commission looked at several standards.

It found the proposed project met all eight standards set forth in the township zoning ordinance to be used during site plan review. During the review it found, the sewer extension would not have a negative regional environmental impact, alter the township's character or result in soil erosion or sedimentation issues. It further found, it does preserve the township's natural features, fulfills township drainage provisions and is accessible to emergency vehicles.

These combined findings lead the commission to grant the project site plan review.

The commission also unanimously decided the project meshed with the township's land use plan, meaning it passed the Section 10 hearing and it also fit with the guidelines set forth for projects by the Michigan Environmental Protection Act (MEPA).

Section 10 decided whether or not the project is consistent with the township's master plan.

> "Density is still going to be controlled by the ordinance whether there is a sewer or not."

Development has been a major concern in relation to the township's master plan which outlines the residents' wish to maintain the area's rural character.

And opponents of the project including Bob Mossman, a Marion Township resident, feel the project does not meet the goals set forth by the master plan.

Matchett responded to this concern during the Section 10 hearing.

"Density is still going to be controlled by the ordinance whether there is a sewer or not. There may be requests for rezoning but that doesn't mean they have to be granted," he said.

According to John Ochs, a planning commission member, their decision made it clear that any further extension of the line was not approved by their decision.

It also made the determination that the project complied with MEPA requirements which is not part of the township ordinance but is part of Michigan law and was included in their Section 10 discussion.

Under MEPA the planning commission must assess whether the proposed project would impair the township's natural resources and constitute an environmental risk.

As of March 15 Mossman, who has been privy to multiple lawsuits against the school district related to the high school building project, was waiting to hear from his attorney in this matter, Jim Olson, of Olson and Bzdok of Traverse City, as to whether or not the group would appeal the decision in court.

drates. Rhodes recommends eating carbohydrates that are rich in fiber instead of refined starches and foods high in sugar.

Recently Edward Davidson made a commitment to eat healthier. For the past 10 years, Davidson has been using medication to control his high blood pressure, high cholesterol and diabetes. But what he really knew he needed to do to improve his health was change his diet.

"A friend of mine used to joke that at every meal he'd try to eat at least one thing from each of the four basic food groups: Sugar, spice, alcohol and grease - basically the same food groups I enjoyed and indulged in," he said. "But it ceased to be a joke when he went in for his first bypass operation."

That's why Davidson decided to make a change in his diet and lifestyle. Although past diets had failed, Davidson's experience with a registered dietitian had great results. He learned more about different varieties of foods and how to make better choices about what he eats.

Davidson was surprised to find that even healthy meals can taste great. Now, he said, eating a healthier diet and making wiser food choices has become an integral part of his life.

I learned that the goal is not to reduce your cholesterol or to reduce your weight," he said. "It's to choose what you put in your mouth and how much time you spend working out. When you make those items your goals, the outcome will take care of itself."

Senior millage money brings new programs

This is the second in a series on local millages that have passed in recent years.

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix County voters passed a senior millage in November of 2000 which has been in effect for one year and has brought new and improved senior programs.

"Charlevoix needed to get in the swing of things — providing medical services and making them available to all seniors," Sue Bergmann, Director of the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging, said.

Since the millage was passed, the commission on aging, the distribution center for your senior millage dollars, has gotten to work to make sure those services are available.

The millage is .4 mill levied each year through 2003. From 2001 to 2002, the first year the millage was levied, Bergmann estimated $367,000 came in, all of which was dedicated to senior services across the county.

"The millage has increased the variety of senior services available and created a lot of services for seniors. A senior can call this office for just about anything they need," Bergmann said.

She explained, the money helped institute new programs including an Alzheimer's support group, adult day care in East Jordan, in -home foot care and medical management and lawn care and snow removal service.

"We've increased services including in-home service. Homemakers can come more often for those in high need," Bergmann said.

She explained bathing and respite services can now be more complete.

The money also helped establish a Beaver Island liaison service whereby a worker from the commission can be there to deliver meals. Because of the transportation issue, the program has been appropriately dubbed, "Meals on Wheels, Waves and Wings."

Bergmann said Charlevoix is the largest meals on wheels account the commission services.

The commission also recently hired a senior activities coordinator for the county. This individual will organize trips and, through the health department, will coordinate a standardized exercise program.

Recently the commission was able to offer seniors tax preparation services.

Bergmann said the millage not only benefits seniors currently living in Charlevoix County, but also attracts baby boomers to the area. She explained that when deciding where to retire, many look at what senior services an area offers.

In this way, Bergmann sees the millage as further benefiting the county economy.

Millage money generated in the future will be allocated toward continuing to work toward quality senior care.

"We are planning to continue to provide quality services and to make those services available to any senior in the county," Bergmann said.

The county designates anyone 60 years old and older, a senior.

Services provided through the Charlevoix Senior Center are not funded by the millage.

Earl Muma, Charlevoix Senior Center director said, "I'd like to change that, but we don't want to give total control over to Charlevoix County."

The commission on aging and the senior center are currently coordinating efforts to draw up a contract that would allow the center to benefit from the millage.

The Commission on Aging is located at 207 Antrim Street in Charlevoix. To contact the office call (231) 237-0103.

The Great Day

The St. Patrick's Day festivities on Beaver Island — also called The Great Day — were in full swing Saturday in downtown St. James and inside the Shamrock Bar. Participants took part in traditional games such as the Shopping Cart Race, Fish Stomp — sort of a relay with live minnows, Irish Limericks, The Fish Toss, Island Tug-of-War and the King and Queen Contest. Right, participants in the King and Queen Contest pose before going on stage. In addition to dressing up, contestants performed an Irish Jig and answered questions about Ireland. Most names are withheld to protect the silly. The events have been run and designed for the past 12 years by: Kathy Maudrie, Denise McDonough, Cindy Cushman, Lynn Cary and Rich Gillespie. Judges for the King and Queen contest were: Laura Gillespie, Jim McDonough, Don Bair and Fatch Wieremga. (Photos by Jeremy McBain)

Far right, a Fish Toss contestant prepares to throw a frozen trout, hoping it will be the farthest. Below, an Irish and American patriotic theme was the focus for these two contestants in the King and Queen contest.

Eveline residents speak out on turbines

WIND

"I really didn't want to do that (table the request). I don't know if the meeting was a plus or minus. In my estimation, that meeting was totally out of control. On the plus side I had a rowdy crowd that was extremely upset and they had their chance to blow off some steam and say what they wanted to say. Now, maybe we can proceed in an orderly fashion," Dan Skrzeczkoski, Eveline Township Supervisor, said.

In January of 2001, the planning commission voted to recommend the township board approve Smiley's request for a special use permit.

Eric Beishlag, Chairman of the Eveline Township Planning Commission and Township Board Trustee said, "We had no reason not to. There was no question about whether or not the request qualified because it is just a temporary thing."

"The request really and truly needs to be acted on. That part can go, (move forward) an anemometer (wind monitoring) tower isn't connected to the turbines," Beishlag said.

Both he and Skrzeczkoski explained residents are connecting the two as if the wind turbines are permitted by the same special use permit as the anemometer tower.

Barry Wood, the township zoning administrator tried to explain this to residents when he said, "An anemometer permit is on the table, there are no wind turbine generator permit requests."

Smiley and the two residents who want to lease their land for the energy generating windmills, Ralph Richardson and Way, would have to reapply for a second special use permit if they wanted to build the windmills.

"Having wind turbine generators is not a right. Just because you have 30 aces doesn't mean you are going to get a tower. It's not a given," Beishlag told the group.

Beishlag explained the proposed wind monitoring device collects data for six months and during that six month period he hopes to have changes made to the zoning ordinance.

Residents are eager to stop the project as they feel it threatens the township's rural character, open space and scenic views and will cause noise disturbances.

Nancy Ferguson, an Eveline Township resident opposed to the project, spoke on behalf of the residents.

She told the board, "You have a fiduciary responsibility to follow the master plan and to do what the people want."

But Smiley contends that the windmills support the master plan.

"I think the windmills do exactly what your master plan proposes. They protect scenic views and the agricultural landscape and protect the health of citizens," he said.

He added that 25 to 30 years down the road the farmland will still be there if the turbines are built. He claims the turbines close the opportunity for land developers who want the property for condominiums and golf courses.

The crowd responded to Smiley's comments with a resounding, "We would rather have condos."

Ferguson then presented the board with over 200 signed letters, authored by residents who feel the project is not in their best interest and would like zoning ordinance changes re-noticed.

Changes to the zoning ordinance were adopted in October of 2001. The changes allow for wind turbine generators with a special use permit.

Smiley's request for a special use permit to construct the anemometer tower followed the next month.

On March 14, at the Eveline Township Planning Commission meeting, residents returned to continue their fight.

At the meeting, they demanded a change to the zoning ordinance.

Beishlag said the commission decided changes will be made to the wind turbine section of the zoning ordinance.

"Our decision was we need to make changes. When we did the ordinance we didn't anticipate what we would be up against. At that time, wind turbines were in Traverse City and Mackinaw City. We weren't thinking it would be a big thing," he said.

However, Skrzeczkoski said the township would be violating the law if in making those changes it zoned wind turbines out totally. In regards to this issue, residents asked for a second opinion from a lawyer, other than Bryan Graham, who currently represents the township.

They said if it's found that the ordinance could not leave out wind turbines they would rather have no ordinance at all.

Don Hayden, the Eveline Township Board Clerk said, to have no ordinance at all would require the people to have a referendum.

To help in making upcoming changes to the ordinance, the township board approved the use of Charles Frickey, a planner with Energy and Management Services of Traverse City, as an impartial source of information.

Frickey has worked with Smiley in the past and because of this, residents asked that other avenues be explored.

"This is what I'm hearing from the group — we passed an ordinance and you don't like it. Now, we're trying to change the ordinance with expert opinion," Skrzeczkoski said.

New coaches greet spring sports season

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Rayder spring sports season at Charlevoix High School got underway March 11 with almost every team being led by a new coach.

Spring sports include: track, tennis, soccer, baseball and softball. New coaches have been hired for both junior varsity and varsity softball and baseball and tennis.

Jim Kanine, high school athletic director, said, "It (loss of coaches) is not something you want to happen. But, it was amazing how everything fell into place. There was no real conflict finding great, new coaches."

Liz Grunch

Phil Butler, longtime varsity softball coach resigned to work with his daughter Courtney, who also resigned, on her softball skills. Courtney, the former coach of the junior varsity team, will play softball for Lake Superior State University where she will attend school in the fall.

Liz Grunch stepped into the head coaching position for the softball program.

Grunch has a long history as both a Rayder athlete and a college athlete.

Wendy Viles

During her long softball career, she was all-conference all four years of high school, all-state honorable mention as a freshman and all-region during her sophomore through senior years.

Grunch played softball for two years at Lake Michigan College where she was honored with all-state classification both years. And she worked Lake Michigan College pitching and hitting clinics for three years.

Jim Kanine, Charlevoix High School Athletic Director, wrote in his recommendation of Grunch to the school board, "Liz has turned our volleyball program around. She is also an excellent classroom teacher. I feel Liz Grunch will be an outstanding softball coach."

Brian Certa

Grunch is in her first year as the high school's physical education instructor and accepted the varsity girls volleyball position this fall. Grunch was also a student teacher at the school before being hired permanently.

She will be assisted by Waja Dixon, also a former Rayder softball player.

Wendy Viles, junior varsity volleyball coach, will help Grunch get the softball program on its feet, like she has the volleyball program, as the new junior varsity softball coach.

Viles played softball throughout high school and has since played on an intramural league.

Brian Hawkins

She said her positive experience with the volleyball team prompted her to take the softball job.

"I really liked coaching volleyball, I liked the girls and most of them said they were going out for softball," Viles said.

Viles and her husband Dean have two children and both work full-time jobs. In order to balance time with her children, coaching and work, Wendy plans to have her oldest son manage the team, keeping stats and helping out, and her youngest son, work bat boy responsibilities.

At opening day of practice, the softball program had an estimated 40 girls try out.

The baseball team has also felt coaching turnover.

After one year holding the reigns of the varsity baseball program, high school Spanish instructor Pete Scholten resigned from the coaching position in January to spend more time with his family.

Stepping into Scholten's seat, is

New coaches hired for spring sports teams

COACHES

long-time junior varsity football and baseball coach Brian Certa. This year, Certa was named Assistant Football Coach of the Year for the State of Michigan by the Michigan High School Athletic Association.

Erik Lundteigen

"Brian Certa is a successful veteran teacher and coach. His students and colleagues respect him. He is an outstanding human being. I highly recommend Brian Certa for the varsity baseball coaching position," Kanine states in his recommendation.

Certa coached varsity baseball for 13 years and retired for five years. He returned last year to coach the junior varsity team.

He was planning to coach the junior varsity team again this year, but was approached for the varsity position and accepted for the short-term.

He played baseball through high school and is looking forward to an exciting rebuilding season.

"We have some sound returners and I think we look strong across the front. But numbers wise, we have to develop our depth. We are lacking experience in some positions," he said.

Certa has chosen assistant coach Don Richards to help out with the team. Richards recently joined the Charlevoix High School special education staff. John Hutchison will help shape the team's pitching skills.

Aside from his work with the sports program, Certa is also the construction technology instructor of 23 years at the high school and a father of five.

Replacing Certa at the helm of the junior varsity baseball team is Bryan Hawkins, high school history instructor.

Hawkins was the assistant coach last year, helping out Certa and Scholten. He was also a baseball player during high school.

"I am a big baseball person; it's something I have a passion for. I will do anything I can to help build the program here," he said.

The baseball team's first game is scheduled for April 11.

New coaches will take to the baseball and softball diamonds as well as the tennis court.

Erik Lundteigen, veteran Charlevoix Elementary School third grade instructor, and former high school varsity ski and tennis coach, has accepted the head tennis team coaching position at the high school.

This is no new ground for Lundteigen who coached varsity tennis for 14 years. But, after six years away he's ready for a come back. During his hiatus he has continued to run the summer tennis program at the Belvedere Club.

Lundteigen had 29 girls and boys come out for the team and has no intention of making cuts. He said positions will be earned through competitive challenge matches.

"I've never cut anyone. That leaves an improvement option open. I expect them all to work hard," he said.

Lundteigen replaces Garth Miller as varsity tennis coach. He will be assisted by Vinnie Klooster, head of the elementary enrichment tennis group.

Ken Plude will return as boys' track coach and Jennifer Peters will return for the girls' team. Mary Plude and Marilyn Morehead will help to direct those efforts.

Carol Madison is returning as the girl's soccer coach and she will again be assisted by Tom Conlan.

Rayders lose to McBain in intense match

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

There was no happy ending to this storybook season of high school basketball.

After a dream season where Charlevoix could do no wrong and no opponent could challenge the Rayders, the hope of a return trip to the state finals was dashed in a 71-70 loss to McBain in regional play March 12 at Cadillac High School.

The Rayders finished their season with a 23-1 record.

"You don't want to have one game define your whole season," Charlevoix coach Keith Haske said. "Not many teams go 20-0 in a season. If we had just one more minute to play, I think we might have won it."

The win by McBain avenged a 78-76 loss to Charlevoix last season in the regional at Cadillac.

For the second straight year, the matchup came down to a Charlevoix shot at the buzzer. Last year, the shot fell in for a Rayder victory. This year, it bounced off the board, the rim and back off the rim again, just missing.

"We haven't seen those kind of athletes all season long," Haske said. "The game was played a half step faster than what we've been used to. As a result we did a lot of things we haven't done all season long."

The game was tense throughout and the pressure was intensified by the noise created by the capacity crowd, more than half of who were Rayder fans. Charlevoix sold its allotment of 700 tickets in just seventeen minutes and most of those fans waited in line two hours before the game in order to get good seats for the game.

Throughout the first quarter, the teams traded leads with neither leading by more than four. After a lay-up by McBain's All-Stater Andy Bronkema gave the Ramblers a 16-12 lead with under a minute to go, Nate Teuscher converted a three-point play to cut the lead to one with 37 seconds left in the quarter. Twenty seconds later, Rob Boss scored on a short jumper to give Charlevoix a 17-16 lead with 17 seconds to go. Seconds later, McBain responded with a driving lay-up to take an 18-17 lead at the end of the first period.

Charlevoix used ten players in the first quarter while McBain used only five.

"I really believed that at some point, we'd make a ten point run and the game would be over," Haske said.

The Ramblers scored the first five points of the second quarter to extend the lead to 23-17 but the Rayder press forced numerous turnovers in a 10-0 run over a three-minute period to give Charlevoix what would prove to be its largest lead at 27-23 with 4:10 left in the half.

The surge followed by the third foul on Andy Gilde, a McBain starter, seemed to indicate that, as it had all season long, the Rayders' depth was wearing out another opponent. The Ramblers quickly dispelled this thought by scoring the last five points of the first half to leave the court with a 34-31 half-time lead.

Charlevoix was helped in the first half by 4 for 10 free throw shooting by McBain.

In the first possession of the second half, Gilde picked up his fourth foul. On McBain's ensuing trip down the court, the Ramblers missed two free throws.

Charlevoix's All-Stater Scott Parrish opened the second half scoring with a second-chance basket. Teuscher followed with a basket, then Patrick Gowell stole

Ski team honored

Several members of the Charlevoix High School varsity ski team have been named to the 2002 All State team, which is created by the Michigan High School Ski Coaches Association.

Susan Miller, coach of the ski team, said she is very proud of the Charlevoix skiers, especially since they came in as runners up for the state title and took second place in the regional tournament.

Ski team members named All State were:

- First team — Kelsey Barnard and York Smith.
- Second team — Chad Johnson and Roscoe Serrels
- Girls' team, honorable mention — Lexi Wilson.

"We had some falls and made some mistakes through the year, but we certainly learned and improved. Each one of the athletes has contributed to the team," she said.

The Charlevoix ski team was composed of Serrels, Wilson, Mike Dupuis, Smith, Chad Johnson, Taylor Fisher, Barnard and Annakate Trubilowicz.

HEALTH

Be aware of the symptoms of a stroke

Melodie Brown, M.D.

'Your health'

Stroke is localized brain damage caused by blockage or rupture of the vessels that supply the brain tissue. It is the leading cause of adult long term disability and the third leading cause of death.

About 85 percent of strokes are "ischemic" or caused by blockage. This blockage can occur by several different mechanisms. It can be secondary to a clot traveling from the heart, a small embolus from carotid artery plaque, or disease in the vessels in the brain. The goal of prevention is to prevent clots and atherosclerosis.

Symptoms include: unilateral weakness and/or numbness, slurred speech, difficulty swallowing or choking, partial visual loss, double vision, unsteadiness, nausea or vomiting, incontinence, personality changes or confusion or loss of consciousness.

A TIA or ministroke is an event marked by transient occurrence of any of the above symptoms. The symptoms may last from minutes up to 24 hours. If a ministroke occurs, one should seek medical attention as soon as possible, because it increases the risk for a full blown stroke. If the symptoms do not go away immediately, call 911!

During a stroke, neurons die within minutes. Some tissue could be saved if treatment is sought immediately. TPA is a "clot buster" that can potentially improve the long term outcome after a stroke, but it needs to be given within three hours of the initial symptoms. Therefore, the goal of stroke management is early treatment. Minutes count!

A physical exam, brain scan, blood work all need to be completed before this medication is used. TPA is not for everyone, it is risky, and there is a long list of exclusion criteria. The criteria that excludes most patients is not getting to the hospital soon enough.

Hypertension or high blood pressure, has long been linked to the development of heart disease and stroke. It is important to get regular medical attention, because hypertension is usually asymptomatic. To improve elevated blood pressure, you can diet, limit salt intake, lose weight, decrease stress, quit smoking and take your prescribed medication.

Cholesterol levels should be checked at least every five years in those over the age of 20, and more often in those with risk factors. Again, diet, exercise and smoking cessation can improve levels. Fats should be limited to 25-35 percent of daily calories and saturated fat less than 7 percent.

Exercise decreases hypertension, cholesterol and heart disease, and improves diabetes. Studies show that brisk walking 30-40 minutes three times a week can decrease the risk of heart disease by half.

ease, stroke, lung disease and cancer. Studies show that over half of heart attacks in women younger than 50 are related to smoking. This risk is completely preventable. Don't smoke! If you quit smoking you can decrease your risk of having a heart attack by one-third in two years. If you need help to quit, see your doctor.

Aspirin decreases clot formation. It can decrease the incidence of stroke by 25 percent, especially in those with a previous TIA or heart disease. It is not without side effects, however. It can cause bleeding. You should talk to your doctor before taking aspirin regularly.

Atrial fibrillation is caused by disorganized activation of the atria. It causes an irregular pulse. It increases clot development within the chambers of the heart which can travel to the brain. Those with atrial fibrillation who have the highest risk of stroke are those over the age of 65, those with hypertension, diabetes or heart disease.

Those at the highest risk may be candidates for coumadin therapy. Coumadin "thins" the blood and decreases clot development. Coumadin also can cause bleeding and needs to be monitored closely.

The bottom line is prevention. Take care of yourself, eat right, exercise, quit smoking, see your doctor regularly, and take your prescribed medications.

Prevent the risks and disease during good health, before the life altering or deadly event occurs.

Charlevoix stopped in its run for Breslin

RAYDERS

an inbound pass and fed Parrish for another hoop and a 37-34 Rayder lead with 5:11 left in the third.

Again it appeared things were finally hreaking right for Charlevoix and the Rayders might pull away as they had from opponents all season long.

"I thought two or three minutes into the third quarter that they might be tiring," Haske said. "I was really watching them closely to see how tired they were getting. They came out of time-outs bent over, breathing heavy. The more tired a team is, the more they turn the ball over."

McBain scored on its next trip and later a Bronkema basket put McBain back in the lead at 38-37. The two teams traded hoops twice then Gilde fouled out with 2:32 left in the third quarter.

The Rayders couldn't take advantage though and a 6-2 run at the end of the quarter left McBain with a 46-43 lead heading into the final stanza.

Scott Friske opened the scoring in the fourth to cut the lead to one and then Parrish answered McBain baskets twice with hoops of his own, one on a pretty spin move leaving his defender dead in his tracks.

The Ramblers then forced four straight turnovers with steals and a traveling call on Charlevoix and converted them into six points for the largest lead of the game at 57-49 with 5:07 to go.

Teuscher scored on a drive to start a Rayder comeback. He then stole the Rambler inbound pass and fed Parrish who was fouled and converted both free throws to cut the lead back to four with 4:18 to go.

Bronkema hroke the Charlevoix press, though, and went coast-to-coast for another lay-up to push the lead to 59-53 with an even four minutes to play.

Haske said, "I thought the difference in the game was Bronkema. We haven't seen an athlete like that. He made shots we hadn't seen like leaving his feet at the free throw line and making finger rolls."

The teams traded points for the next minute and a half as a Parrish jumper cut the lead to 65-61 at the 2:30 mark. McBain then scored four straight points to again push its advantage to eight with only two minutes to play.

Parrish again answered for the Rayders and following a turnover forced by Gowell, Boss scored on a putback to cut the lead to 69-65. Following another McBain miscue, Parrish grabbed an offensive rebound, drove to the hoop and was fouled. He converted the free throw to cut the lead to one at 69-68 with 59 seconds to go.

On a near turnover, the Rayders fouled McBain point guard Trent Mulder with 52 seconds left. Mulder put the Ramblers' prior free throw woes behind him by drilling two to extend the lead again to three at 71-68.

Charlevoix worked the ball into Scott Friske, who scored on a short jumper to slice the lead to one. The Rayder pressure on the inbounds play forced Bronkema into throwing a dangerous half-court pass that was intercepted by Teuscher.

The Rayders called time-out with 28.8 seconds to play and set up a last shot.

"It took them a lot longer to get tired than I thought," Haske said. "They were tired at the end. They turned it over quite a few times in the last two minutes."

Charlevoix looked to get the ball inside to Parrish, who had scored 15 points in the fourth quarter and 11 in the previous four minutes, but he was too closely guarded. The Rayders instead worked the ball around to Boss whose closely contested shot bounced in and out.

"Rob will be living with that last shot for a long time," Haske said. "But he had tremendous courage to put himself in that situation. He took the shot with the game on the line and was willing to live with the result. A lot of players wouldn't be able to even take that shot."

Parrish finished a brilliant high school career with 27 points and eight rebounds. Sophomore Scott Friske added 16 points and pulled down seven boards. Teuscher tallied 11 points and five assists. Boss had six points and seven rebounds while Gowell had six assists.

"Getting a group of seniors like this (Parrish, Boss, Gowell, Jim Shepherd, Ryan Rafacz, Keith Daly) is a once in a lifetime thing. They were very special not just athletically, but academically and as people," Haske explained. "I think their real legacy will be not just what they did on the court but the fact that they were very committed and didn't engage in off the court activities that would take away from their accomplishments or their place as people kids can look up to in this community. That will be something passed on to future generations of Charlevoix kids."

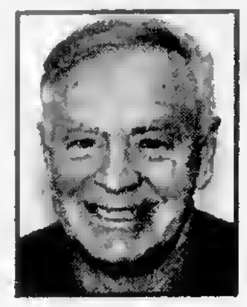
Sometimes a game is more than just a game

Dean Davenport



Charlevoix Courier guest column

The game's outcome was still in the balance and only seconds left. No one would have guessed of the controversy that followed.

The winner would advance in the Michigan High School Athletic Association's 1953 State Basketball championships. The lead had changed or was tied 30 times and there never was more than two points difference, except for one brief four point Charlevoix lead, between the two long time rivals, Charlevoix and East Jordan.

Taking nothing from the current Rayder boys' team that has had three of the most successful seasons back-to-back in Charlevoix hasketball history, the athletic heritage of Charlevoix High School was at a peak in the late 1940s and early 1950s. The football team went 48 games without a loss, the track team had won the conference championship for 18 straight years and the basketball team went to the 1952 state semifinals — losing a heartbreaker to champion St. Louis, 55-50 — on the way to winning its seventh straight conference title.

The Del Terrill coached Rayders had defeated East Jordan earlier rather easily by 16 and 17 points, racking up another conference title. But with second leading scorer Bobo Bennett home in bed with the flu, local Charlevoix fans suspected a very close game. They were right.

The game was rocking! At the time there were two Petoskey daily newspapers and excerpts from both papers painted the intensity of the well played game.

"With a score tied at 32 and 7 minutes left to play, it was still anybody's ballgame and it remained that way until the final whistle," said the Petoskey News.

"The game was a scorcher, in fact when the game ended, most people didn't know who was the winner," Petoskey Review.

The Charlevoix Courier reported, "The game was full of dramatic moments and for one brief moment at the end, both teams thought they'd won."

East Jordan's coach had Charlevoix well scouted. It seesawed back and forth until the final seconds when East Jordan finally went ahead on a free throw, 43-42. After we missed a shot, East Jordan began a stall. With around 8 seconds, we forced a jump call at center court.

My teammate Jim Lewis won the tip, but the ball headed for out of bounds near the scorer's table. I sprinted and saved it, spun around and quickly started dribbling up court.

Suddenly, an East Jordan player jumped in my path in an attempt to draw a foul. Seeing him, I fell sideways and at the same time spotted teammate Bill Mosier open under the basket, so I threw him the long pass and he made the lay-up, the apparent one point victory was ours. Or was it?

Bedlam broke out and the Charlevoix fans ran on the court to celebrate. Unknown to most everyone at that moment was that the trailing official's late call would nullify the basket and that he had called a traveling violation on me as I made the long pass.

He put three seconds back on the clock, gave the ball out of bounds to East Jordan, and, when the buzzer went off it was disappointing and one of the most controversial endings to any tournament game played in the north. To make matters worse, East Jordan advanced all the way to the quarter's before losing.

And now the rest of the story.

Now it is 35 years later and the disappointment and the heartache only occasionally reappears, mostly at tournament time. But on one day, Ferris State University was hosting a postgame reception for parents and relatives of current Bulldog players.

The name tag Al Bohn of Traverse City caught my attention and I introduced myself to a player's grandfather, mentioning I grew up in neighboring Charlevoix and I once coached basketball at Traverse City High before becoming athletic director at FSU.

"Charlevoix," he said. "I worked as a game official for many a great game in Petoskey, where Charlevoix always played in the district and regional tournament. In fact, he continued, the worst call I ever made was in a a Charlevoix game. I had called steps on a Charlevoix player, took away the winning basket and cost them the game. A bad call! Afterwards, my partner, who had the best view, said, 'There were no steps.'"

I asked him to tell my wife the story. After he did, she reached for her purse and pulled out a yellow, tattered picture from the Courier with the heading, "To no avail," and showed him.

"That is the game all right," he said.

I could not contain myself and said, "And I'm the guy you called steps on."

He grew red and stammered, "I am so sorry. It has been haunting me all this time."

He was visibly affected and close to tears, so I interrupted, "I'm over it. In fact, it was perhaps a blessing in disguise. I used it to motivate myself to play college basketball. I swore I wasn't going to end my career on that sour note and 'walked on' at Central Michigan University as a candidate for their team and ended up with a successful career as a Chippewa, as well as earning my degree. In fact, I returned later as a coach at my alma mater and have spent 36 years in athletics. So, you see, the 'call' served me well and turned out to be more of a positive than a negative."

We hugged and held each other for a brief moment. I could feel the tension leave his body and a wave of relief take place. I experienced the same. We both needed that moment of truth.

Shortly afterward, we parted with a firm handshake and I thanked him for setting me free from something only I had known for over 40 years. I had not taken steps, the basket should have counted. Charlevoix should have been the winner. And only now can I share it with others, especially my teammates, several of which still live in the area.

They include: Tom LaBlance, Joe McDermott, Duane Walker, Jerry Albright, Don Smith, Bill Golden, Gordon Mol, Bill Bennett, Jim Lewis, Mark White and Dave Glassford.

During tournament time, legends are born, heroes emerge and occasionally "goats" are labeled. But Rayder fans are special. Despite my disappointing loss, several took time to console me with notes, phone calls and they were all greatly appreciated and needed.

But now, being able to share the "rest of the story" with Charlevoix, there is closure for me and that game.

Now it is tournament time once again and all eyes were on the crimson and white. Charlevoix's expectations have always been high regarding the school's athletic success and in particular basketball.

Players agree it is a wonderful time of the year and the pride that emerges bubbles over. My advice is to cheer hard, give full support, and no matter what, be proud of the team for being from Charlevoix.

And remember always, it's great to be a Red Rayder!

Commissioners accused of meeting violation

MEETING

Kur discovered the meeting was taking place when she happened to glance into a room in the Charlevoix County Building. She said she noticed the Personnel Committee — made up of Commissioners Don Smith, James Behling and Carl Price — in the room with former county chief assistant prosecutor John Jarema. Smith, Behling and Price are all veteran commissioners with over 10 years of government experience.

Kur said at the March 13 commission meeting she had fired Jarema in February for a number of issues. Jarema was meeting with the Personnel Committee to discuss his dismissal.

According to Kur, the committee did not post the meeting and asked a representative of the County Clerk's office, Cecelia Borths, to leave.

Smith said they asked Borths to leave so the committee could talk in more "of an open discussion" with Jarema. Smith said he took minutes of the meeting.

Charlevoix County Clerk Jane Brannon said she did not know of the meeting until it was too late to post it in time. She added she usually attends all the meetings, but could not make this one because of a certification class she was attending, so she sent Borths in her place.

"I would not have left if I was there," she said of allegations that the committee asked Borths to leave.

As for not posting the meeting, Behling — who is chair of the committee — took responsibility for it.

"I didn't classify it as a meeting. All we were there to do was to just plain listen," he said.

Smith said Jarema was given a special meeting because he was unable to attend the regularly scheduled committee meeting the next day. Smith added neither he nor Jarema knew the meeting was unposted and a possible violation of the Open Meetings Act.

In addition to criticizing the meeting, Kur also told the board she was upset that they were talking with her ex-employee in the first place. She told the commission they have no say in who she fires or hires according to law.

"What happened here was I, as an elected prosecutor, legally and with proper justification fired one of my employees," she said. "Many of the reasons will not be made public."

Behling said they just wanted to keep the matter quiet by meeting about it.

Jarema was also present at the meeting and addressed the commission.

He said he has worked with the county for eight years and has tried over 120 cases, of which he won 80 percent of them. Jarema further said that he was concerned about the way the Prosecutor's Office was being managed.

He said he kept track of some of the mismanagement on calendars in his desk and had told Kur and Smith about the matter. But, he said someone took the calendars out of his desk the day before he was fired.

"Did the prosecutor terminate me for disclosing this?" he asked the commission.

Jarema added, "As of Feb. 27, I lost my wage, my pension, benefits and my reputation has been tarnished. I am asking the (commission) to do the right thing...." He further said he wanted his benefits and his wage back and something from the commission that could clear his name.

Jarema mentioned the possibility of litigation over this matter.

During the meeting, Smith said the commission could hire Jarema as its part-time civil counsel to avoid litigation. This would give Jarema a wage and benefits, he said.

Smith added he made that suggestion during the controversial Personnel Committee meeting, but no vote was ever taken on it.

Smith further said he believed Jarema did most of the work in the Prosecutor's Office and thought he was a good attorney. After the meeting, Smith said he is friends with Jarema's father-in-law, but this has nothing to do with his suggestion.

Other commissioners said they wanted to look into the matter further.

"I think we should look at both sides of this matter," Commissioners Shirley Roloff said. "I think it is up to this board to get together and find out exactly what is going on."

In response to Jarema's comments, Kur said, "In the nine years I have been with Charlevoix County, I don't know of one time a person has come to complain about my office. What you have here is one disgruntled and vindictive ex-employee. It is clear his claims are not true."

She also said the main issue she had with Jarema was one of disloyalty. She added he was undermining other attorneys and Kur to the support staff.

"The tension level was so high I could feel bunches in my stomach coming to work. Now that he has been gone for two weeks, it is a pleasure to go to work," she said to the commission.

As for Smith's suggestion, Kur said under state statue she is currently the civil counsel for the commission. To hire Jarema for the part-time position, the commission would have to fire her as civil counsel and create a new budget just for this position. If he was hired for this position, Jarema would have to also work with Kur.

She added two part-time employees she had working in her office did not get benefits. Kur also questioned why Smith would want to hire Jarema just to avoid litigation.

If a government body is found to have violated the Open Meetings Act, the law states any action taken at that meeting is not binding. Violations of the act are also a misdemeanor which is punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000.

Public officials that violate this act for a second time within the same term can be fined up to $2,000 and/or be imprisoned for not more than one year.

Township approves sewer line

Opposition to contest case due to last minute changes

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The city of Charlevoix has received approval from Charlevoix and Marion townships and the Charlevoix School District to extend its sewer system to the site of the new high school in Marion Township but residents opposed to the project are still fighting.

While the city was busy getting contracts signed, opponents of the project filed a contested case with the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ), calling into question the design of the sewer line.

According to Robert Mossman, a Marion Township resident opposed to the sewer extension, the contested case is a result of a last minute announcement by the city.

The city announced a design change at the March 11 Marion Township Planning Commission meeting.

Mike Wiesner, city manager, said, "a couple weeks ago," the city decided to abandon its plan to use a 4 inch force main pipe for 1,050 feet near the school where the gravity design was deemed inadequate by David Porter of the MDEQ.

"The original design was for the 8 inch and we felt it would still work and why not use it. The state requires there be a 4 inch and it will still be there," Wiesner said.

However, some Charlevoix residents including Mossman, feel the city's decision to use the 8 inch poses an environmental threat to Marion Township.

Chamber, city team up to combat traffic in the summer

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Numerous groups have formed an alliance to solve Charlevoix's traffic problem.

At Monday's Downtown Development Authority (DDA) meeting, the city of Charlevoix announced a new traffic project it plans to undertake and informed DDA members it will request funding for the project from the authority.

For this project, the city has teamed up with the Chamber of Commerce. The two, along with the Charlevoix City Police Department, an engineer and other experts, will study, and attempt to rectify, problems associated with summer traffic flow.

"I hear all the time, 'I hate the traffic.' Our goal is to make Charlevoix a little more user friendly for local residents and those who want to come to this wonderful community — to do something to lower the chaos," Roger Nesburg, chairman of the Chamber Board of Directors, said.

Nesburg is also a member of the Chamber's transportation committee which includes two other chamber board members, John Campbell and Curt Haas.

The committee has polled local businesses and received feedback from both businesses and residents following major events, like Venetian Festival.

Similar follow-up dialog is also entered into at meetings of the Chamber's Retail Promotions Board.

Nesburg said, at each discussion, the Chamber is hearing the same thing — Charlevoix has a traffic problem.

He explained the study is the first phase in Top 10 taxpayers in area are a variety

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Resort associations in Charlevoix are once again at the top of the area's list of major taxpayers last summer.

As was the case in the summer of 2000, the Belvedere Club and Chicago Club are the top two taxpayers in the city of Charlevoix for the summer of 2001. These two resorts were also two of the top five taxpayers in the Charlevoix School District last summer.

While the Belvedere Club and Chicago Club are composed of many homeowners, the homes in these resorts pay as one entity.

According to Charlevoix City Treasurer Rick Brandi the overall tax picture for the city is very good. The top 10 taxpayer list shows a variety in tax sources, making the city look good when it needs to get bonds.

"Rating agencies look at our top 10," he said. "Basically they want to know if we have one large employer. Obviously we don't have that kind of situation. It seems that the risk is spread out nicely."

Top 10 taxpayers, as of the summer of 2001, for the city of Charlevoix are:

10) Bruce H. and Susan Lynne Yuille (property owners in Charlevoix), with a taxable value of $891,500.

9) Citizen's Bank, with a taxable value of $943,785.

8) Charles and Patricia Koucky (property owners in Charlevoix), with a value of $998,021.

7) CPI Products LLC, with a value of $1,402,000.

6) David Guanci (property owner), with a taxable value of $1,452,152.

5) Harbor Industries, with a taxable value of $1,452,152.

4) LexaLite International Corporation (a business with two buildings in the Charlevoix Industrial Park), with a taxable value of $1,828,020

3) Leo and Maureen Quinn (owners of the strip mall Captains Corners), with a taxable value of $2,093,400.

2) Chicago Summer Resort, with a taxable value of $3,004,174.

1) Belvedere Club, with a taxable value of $6,498,884.

Brandi said it is not unusual for homeowners to be in the top 10 taxpayers list.

"We don't have that much industry within the city. I also guess we don't have that much concentrated commercial," he said.

The top 10 taxpayers in Charlevoix are based on the taxable value of the properties. These values are not the amounts the business or individual must pay in taxes, only the worth of the properties they own.

Brandi said the taxable values given to properties are based on the value of the property as of Dec. 31. In this case, it is as of Dec. 31, 2001.

Therefore, even if a business closes just after Dec. 31, 2001, they still would have the same tax.

Many of these same businesses and private property owners are also on the top 10 list of taxpayers for the Charlevoix Community School District. Like the city, because the list contains a variety of tax sources, this makes the district look good financially.

The top ten taxpayers for the Charlevoix Community School District, as of the summer of 2001, are:

10) Michigan Department of Natural Resources (a fishery), with a taxable value for the district of $1,935,691.

9) Leo and Maureen Quinn, with a taxable value for the district of $2,093,400.

8) Irish Boat Shop (a marina and business), with a taxable value for the district of $2,161,875.

7) American Mold Engineering (a business), with a taxable value for the district of $2,206,200.

6) Agree Limited Partnership (a strip mall), with a taxable value for the district of $2,724,582.

5) Chicago Summer Resort, with a taxable value for the district of $3,004,174.

4) Consumer's Energy (a utility), with a taxable value for the district of $3,673,239.

3) LexaLite International, with a taxable value for the district of $2,347,553. This number is higher than the city's valuation amount because the business has an additional building outside of the city.

2) Belvedere Club, with a taxable value for the district of $7,271,670.

1) Southdown Inc./Cemex (a cement company), with a taxable value for the district of $27,033,155.

Charlevoix School's Superintendent John Sturock said because this list is so diverse, the district has already been able to reap the benefits.

He said the school district recently refinanced and drove down the cost on interest payments. By doing so, Sturock said the district saved over $600,000.

"It was reasonable to do that because on paper we were in very good financial shape," he said.

It is time for board to make a decision

EDITORIAL

Three times is just too many.

This April 9, the Eveline Township Board will consider a request for a wind monitoring tower to be put on the property of Dawson Way near Ferry and Brock Roads. This is the third time this request has come before the board, after being tabled in the past.

Sure this is a tough decision for the board to make. They are facing a slew of angry residents in the township at their meetings, every move is being watched and any decision they make will make some people angry.

But that is the name of the game in politics. You are never going to please everyone all the time. And putting off decisions does not help.

Let's look at what the people are angry about, right to the heart of the issue. The people that jam these township meetings do not want a wind turbine tower. They insist that it will mess up the environment in this township in a variety of ways.

Let's set this issue aside for a different editorial, because the issue before the township board is whether to put up a wind monitoring tower, not wind turbine generators. This tower will be much smaller than a generator and is used to measure the wind in that area to determine if it is even feasible to place a generator in that area in the future.

Further on the plus side, for those opposed to the wind turbine generator, by placing this tower in this field it will give residents a small idea of what a generator would look like there. It is kind of like a small taste that will do no harm, unless measuring the wind is harmful in some way.

It is time for the township board to stop putting off this decision. It is time for them to face the crowd and put an end to this debate on the wind monitor.

Let's save the wind turbine generator debate for other township meetings.

We may not like them, however, they are vital

'Ear to the ground'

Taxes are never popular, especially not this time of year.

Something most people consider certain as death is not likely to be on anyone's top 10 favorites list. In the current political climate, a candidate promising to raise taxes will have a very slim chance of attaining office.

I've read varying reports of what proportion of our income we ordinary citizens pay in taxes. The figure runs from 30 percent to 50 percent or more, depending on which commentator you listen to. Precise numbers are hard to come by, since what counts as a tax differs from one situation to another.

We often encourage the belief that the government (federal, state, local) is taking our hard earned money from us and squandering it on worthless projects that favor only a few.

We hear questions like: Why do I have to pay taxes to support something I don't approve of? (Such as abortion or welfare.) Why should I pay taxes to support schools when I don't plan to ever have any children who would attend them? Why should I support the military if I am a pacifist? Although, in the past six months, fewer people have asked that last question.

A few years ago, a very conservative friend (yes, some of my best friends are conservative) said that the government was taking his hard-earned money away from him. I suggested that without that much despised government, there wouldn't he any money, and we probably owed them a little something for that.

Case in point: I have in my desk drawer a $2 bill issued by the Bank of Washtenaw in southern Michigan in 1854. It looks like money, it has an appropriate serial number and is signed by both the cashier and president of the bank.

It is, of course, worthless, except as a curiosity. It is good to have a stable monetary system, backed by "the full faith and credit" of the U.S. government. Taxes make that stable system possible, even for people or corporations who don't pay any taxes.

The question finally must be what we get for the taxes we pay. The easiest answer to what we get is, in one word, community. A community being a place where everyone to a greater or lesser extent helps support the other members of the community and thus doesn't have to expend all that extra energy standing alone.

Biological communities have been the subject matter of ecologists for nearly a century and researchers have learned a few things about how they work.

For nearly all communities (there are some deep sea exceptions) energy and substance are the mediums of exchange. Plants acquire energy from the sunlight and substance from the earth and make it into suitable food for all those things that eat plants. And those plant-eaters pass their energy and substance along to meat-eaters.

Every organism in the community eventually dies and its parts and molecules are recycled by still other organisms. The system works well and has for hundreds of millions of years.

What does this have to do with taxes?

For each of those diverse community members, there is a cost for being a part of the community. Each individual organism in a community grows less well than it might if given unlimited resources of energy and substance, but the whole community grows better and more certainly.

Taxes are the cost of living in a community. It is worthwhile to argue about just how much taxes should be paid and exactly what they are spent for, but taxes as an idea needs to be supported by anyone who does not wish to live alone on an isolated mountain-top without a cell phone.

Good job

Editor:

My name is Ray Ryan. I was born and raised in Delaware and still reside there. My friend, Richard Kings wife, Gail King is originally from Charlevoix. Her maiden name was Smith. She is the daughter of Clayt Smith.

She receives the Charlevoix Courier every week and then lets me read it when she is done with it. I thoroughly enjoy all of it. I especially liked the story her dad had in the Courier about the sickle that was embedded in a tree for all of those years. Keep up the good work. Also, congratulations to the high school basketball team on their great season.

Wind is not for sale

Editor:

We are responding to the "Wind monitor request tabled by township" article that appeared in the March 20 edition. We attended all four plus hours of the meeting and did not find it as described. "Angry crowd," "that meeting was out of control," "a rowdy crowd that was extremely upset and they had their chance to blow off some steam and say what they wanted to say." We have the opposite opinion. We thought it was a well managed meeting where all of the participants had a fair opportunity to have their say. We're not sure why the meeting would have been negatively characterized. Perhaps it was just that we had a standing room only crowd with many vocal township residents willing to say what was on their mind.

The Eveline Township residents truly do understand that the anemometer special use permit request and the potential permit request for wind turbine generators are two separate issues. We understand that only the anemometer request is on the table at this time. Our concern is why measure the wind when it isn't for sale?

More than 250 Eveline Township residents have requested in writing that the Eveline Township Board renotice our ordinance because we were harmed by the defective process that enacted the ordinance. We want to participate in building that crucial document so we feel confident our values, beliefs and quality of life will be protected. We are asking the Eveline Township Board to do the right thing. We are asking the Eveline Township Board to listen to us and to remember that our wind is not for sale.

Democracy missing

Editor:

Now the high school sewer is fact and Marion Township will have nothing more to worry about sprawl. Or so was said on Thursday night. Worry not, for nothing will happen unless the township approves it. Sounds nice; however, less than 24 hours later my daughter answered the first phone call about property we own. The man was very rude and not very astute. If he had studied your paper, he certainly would have never called our number.

These events remind me of what happened to my father's home. A very small man with a mustache looked across the Elbe River and saw a very nice, rural land, with lots of potential for "development." The little man made nice gestures and spoke of wonderful things for the people of the nice land. The people saw the little man for what he truly was. They protested to their government and looked to it for help. But the little man had lots of friends in the government and great power and influence. The people tried to stop the inevitable, but the little man became more and more powerful. The things he promised happened and other not so nice things. Finally, one day the little man marched his army into Czechoslovakia and two years later a world war started.

To compare Marion Center Road and the Sudetenland is not hard. We simple country folk have accurately forecast each and every turn of this convoluted story. The changes which have been started by these actions are only going to take us in one direction. Just as the little man irrevocably changed the world, what we once had is on the verge of being lost forever.

There were many speakers at the various meetings during the last two weeks. However, not a single township resident had anything to say but, "No," concerning the sewer issue. During the site plan approval Mr. John Adams admitted briefing the Belvedere Club a year ago on what was being presented to Marion Township as new. I am also wrong in my belief that I am a school entity. According to the city, I am actively involved in a real estate development of immense proportions for them. Unless it is housing for all of the deer nibbling on the corn stalks, I don't think so! It is strange that the city would go to Belvedere Club and work out issues in finite detail while it never approached other township residents. The city has also been successful in getting the DEQ ruling reversed so that an 8 inch sewer "gravity feed" system may be used. That is, as expressed at the meeting, "until it starts to pollute."

It was demonstrated that the needs of the school could easily be accommodated by an onsite septic system. However, the needs of the school seem to have never been any great significance to this whole event. Once again, a select group has deemed it worthy to make our decisions for us. A very interesting example of democracy not in action.

When did club have a pool?

Why is that ?

Q: When was there an indoor pool at the Chicago Club? (Bruce MacArthur, Charlevoix)

A: According to David Miles, of the Charlevoix Historical Society, there was an indoor pool at the Inn Hotel near the Chicago Club. This hotel was owned by the railroad and not the club.

The hotel was torn down in 1926 and was located about 40 yards south of the Depot Museum on the beach of Lake Charlevoix.

He said the pool was open to the public for a small fee.

Q: What criteria has been used in the past for naming streets in Charlevoix? (Dean Davenport, Charlevoix)

A: According to David Miles, of the Charlevoix Historical Society, the society does not know when and why many streets in town were named the way they are. He said several of the streets in town are named after people whose achievements are unknown to history.

However, the society does have the names of the people some of the streets were named after. They are: Auld Street, named after Dr. Auld; Belvedere Avenue, named after the Belvedere Club; Burns Street, named after George Burns; Carpenter Avenue, named after Egbert Carpenter; Crouter Street, named after George W. Crouter; Dixon Avenue, named after John S. Dixon; Eaton Street, named after J. Milo Eaton; Garfield Street, named after President James Garfield; Grant Street, named after President U.S. Grant; Green Street, named after Major E.H. Green; Lewis Street, named after Dr. Levi Lewis; Lincoln Street, named after President Abraham Lincoln; Mason Street, named after Seth Mason; Nettleton Street, named after David C. Nettleton; Newman Street, named after Henry Newman; Nichols Street, named after John Nichols; Palmer Street, named after Nels Palmer; Stover Road, named after Alben Stover; Upright Avenue, named after A.R. Upright and Wood Street, named after O.D. Wood.

While Miles does not know who Antrim and Clinton streets were named after, he said records show they were named in the mid 1800s.

For more information, please visit the Charlevoix Historical Society at the Harsha House Museum located on State Street in Charlevoix.

Hospital equipment helps throat diagnosis

Patients who have difficulty swallowing, suffer from chronic heartburn or experience acid reflux now have help at hand.

Thanks to some sophisticated technology and newly acquired equipment, two tests that can assist in the diagnosis and treatment of the conditions are now available at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The hospital recently purchased a mynometry system, computerized equipment that can perform precise diagnostic procedures to aid patients who suffer from frequent regurgitation or discomfort when swallowing. Part of the hospital's cardiovascular services, the procedures are performed on an outpatient basis under the direction of Mark Lame, M.D. and Richard Hagelberg, M.D.

One procedure, called an esophageal motility test, measures pressure within the upper and lower esophagus during swallowing. The 30 minute test can help identify the exact location of problems so they can be surgically corrected or effectively treated with medication.

The pH monitoring test measures acid levels during digestion. During the test, a patient wears a small recorder that collects information during a 24-hour period. Patients, who can be at home during the test, are asked to keep a diary of what they eat, their physical activity and any symptoms they experience.

The information collected is then downloaded to a motility computer for thorough analysis.

According to Dr. Lame, the mynometry system is the most advanced type of diagnostic equipment available.

He and Dr. Hagelberg, along with Cheryl Jacobs, director of the cardiovascular lab, and Heather Parrish, lab technician, attended an intensive training program to become certified in the procedures.

"The symptoms of acid reflux often mimic heart attack, so it's important to seek medical attention and get a clear diagnosis," Lame said.

"People who suffer from digestive problems because of poor diet, obesity or illness can be treated — and we're fortunate to have the means to do that, right here at Charlevoix Area Hospital."

District Court collections up for seventh year in a row

Richard W. May, Charlevoix County's 90th District Court Judge, recently announced that the collection of fines, costs and restitution were up for the seventh year in a row, exceeding $1.7 million.

The court collected $1,709,915 in 2001, an increase of $107,323 over 2000 and an increase of $740,684 over 1994.

May became the District Court Judge in 1995 and since that time has required the strict enforcement of the payment of restitution, fines and costs.

"The public interest requires a defendant to reimburse victims and taxpayers for the expense that their crime has imposed upon the community," he said.

In 2001 the district court paid out $58,926 to victims of crime and paid $290,894 to fund local libraries. Over $1 million was paid to the county's general fund and the balance to local cities, police agencies and the State of Michigan.

In 1996 May instituted a program requiring drunk driving defendants to reimburse the arresting police agency for the cost associated with their arrest and emergency response vehicles. Since that time, over $175,000 has been paid to local police agencies to help fund enforcement or drunk driving laws.

The district court's revenues have increased by 76 percent since 1994.

That increase can be attributed to three factors: First, the court has experienced a 17.5 percent increase in cases due to the rise in population and increased police road patrols; Secondly, the fines and costs have been increased to appropriately reflect the cost that the particular offense causes the community; Thirdly, strict enforcement of deadlines for the payment of fines and costs, and the requirement that defendants execute wage assignments if they are not able to pay at the time of sentencing.

Time to get ready for spring planting

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

While the weather is deciding if it wants to snow or rain, gardeners can start planning what they want to do in the upcoming planting seasons.

Charlevoix Master Gardening Instructor Janine Warner has divulged some insider's tips to starting the planting season off right.

Warner has been a Charlevoix resident for almost eight years. She became a gardener shortly after arriving — the land she and her husband purchased spans 10 acres and she didn't know what to do with it.

She started gardening to beautify her property and has since produced very large gardens. But Warner gardens daily for reasons beyond appearance.

She said gardening for her is a stress reducer and a way to cultivate inner peace.

"I pray in the garden. I talk to my flowers. And gardening is so good for you physically. I can't walk by without stopping and pulling a weed. For me, gardening isn't a hobby, it's an addiction," she said.

She suggests gardeners start planning by thinking damage control.

Warner said rabbits do a lot of damage, as does salt. She said most natural areas will recover from the animal and weather related assault.

Then, prospective gardeners should get to work, doing some pruning of shrubs and trees.

Flowers are what many are in it for but don't get too anxious, Warner said to achieve the best, safest results, plant after June 5, the last frost date.

Once you're ready to start working with the soil, Warner said don't Roto Till; the pressure and compacting can destroy your soil structure. Instead, she suggests "double digging."

Some beautiful flowers to plant this spring that will flower later this summer include: Lily bulbs, edelweiss and gladiolas.

When planting look for ideal conditions which Warner described to be an overcast day or early in the morning before the sun gets hot; don't forget to water what you plant and water in the morning.

Anything you buy from a greenhouse for outdoor planting needs time to acclimate to the outdoor conditions. Warner suggests alternating indoor and outdoor periods for a week to make the transition.

She also suggests using fertilizer. She said for annuals you keep in a container, like petunias, fertilize every two weeks.

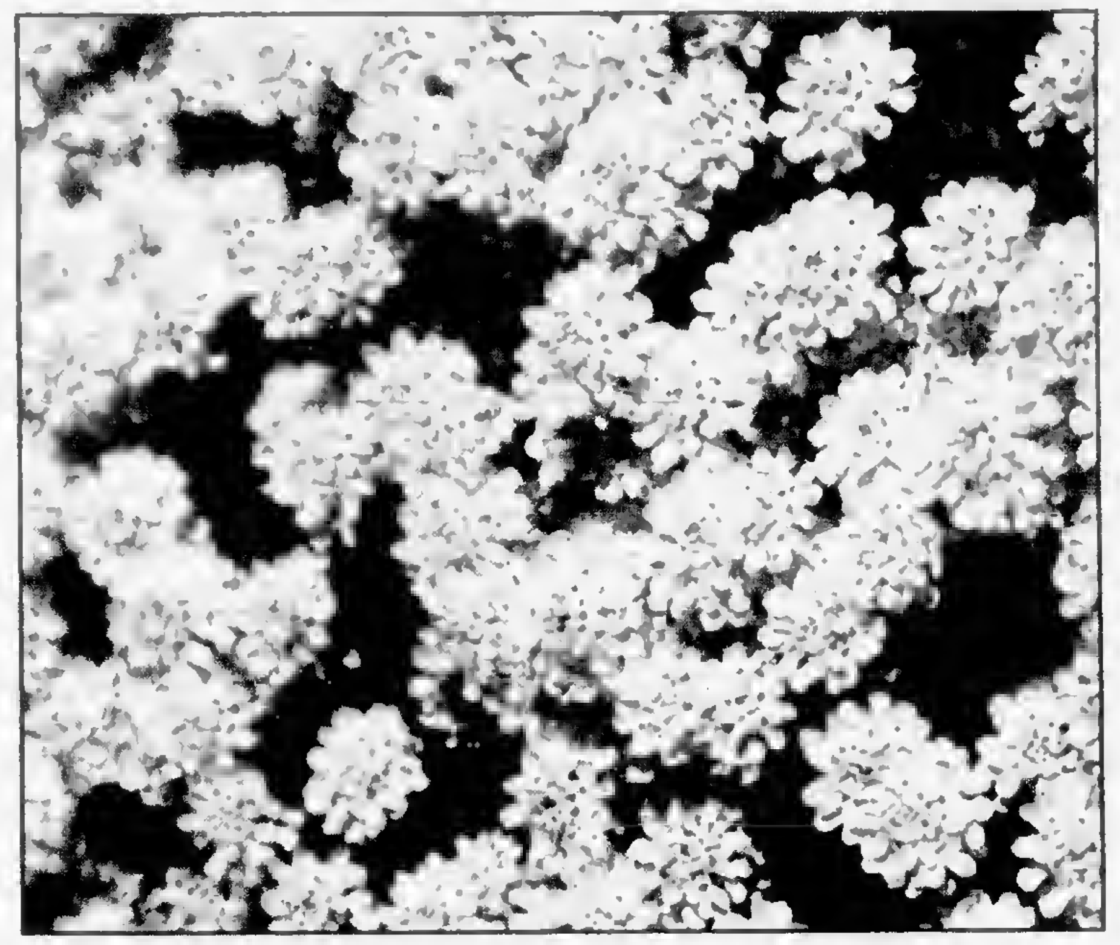
Fertilizing plants growing outdoors in the ground depends on your ground soil type and the nutrients that are present. Warner suggests fertilizing perennials in the early spring and then keeping a close eye on the plants.

"Look closely at your plants — your plants will tell you if they are suffering. Discoloration of the leaves is an indicator of its declining vigor," Warner said.

"These are stress signs that say the plant needs food or water. Your eyes are your best bet," she added.

Also, over the next couple weeks look for green sprouts from the tulips, hyacinths and narcissus you planted last fall. After the cold period they should be ready to come up this spring.

Happy planting.



It is time to start preparing for spring planting season to get flowers like this. (File photo)

Winner of fund-raiser for Hospice to get Beetle

For thc third time, Hospice of Northwest Michigan (HNM) is in the car business — this time with a 1973 Volkswagen Beetle, an icon in the automobile industry.

The winning raffle ticket for the Beetle prize will be drawn at the HNM auction June 7, 2002.

The Beetle was donated by Mark and Susan Grimme of Boyne City and Fort Thomas, Ky. The blue Beetle has been restored inside and out, complete with air conditioning, and has a value of $8,500.

The 250 tickets at $100 each are available at Great Lakes Motor Works, where the Beetle is on display, Ace Hardware in Boyne City, Primetime in Bellaire, Don's IGA in Charlevoix, Don's Market of Harbor Springs and at the HNM office in East Jordan.

The person holding the winning ticket does not have to be present to win.

The auction will be at 5:30 p.m., June 7 at the Boyne Mountain Convention Center in Boyne Falls and will include silent and live auctions, door prizes, hors d'oeuvres, cash bar and live entertainment.

Questions about the Beetle or the auction can be directed to the HNM office at (231) 536-2842.

HNM is in partnership with the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, which is a certified agency providing the clinical component of the hospice program — which includes nursing, social work, home health aid, chaplain and therapies. HNM handles the volunteer, bereavement and fundraising component.

Severe Weather Awareness Week good time to prepare

March 31 through April 6 is Severe Weather Awareness Week in Michigan. The state's storm season runs from April to August with the peak season from May to June.

Michael Stewart, AAA Michigan assistant vice president of Homeowner Claims, warns, with volatile weather conditions likely in the spring and summer, state residents need to take steps now to be prepared. To help homeowners and car owners protect their property, AAA Michigan offers the following severe-weather safety tips:

Home

- Check roof condition.
- Replace loose shutters, eaves troughs and downspouts.
- Make sure downspouts direct rainwater at least 3 feet from house.
- Trim dead branches off trees.
- Test the operation of the sump pump.
- Seal any cracks in basement walls.
- Clean out basement window wells of debris that prevent proper drainage.
- Fill above ground pools with water so high winds won't blow the sides in.
- Replace glass storm doors with screens.
- Unplug all electrical appliances during storms.
- Use surge protectors on computers and unplug during storms or before vacation.
- Secure patio furniture, or put in garage when storms are predicted.
- Tie down mobile homes and arrange for emergency underground shelter.
- Keep items off basement floor and keep floor drains clear.

Auto

- Park car in garage or carport if possible.
- In event of hail, cover vehicle with a tarp or blanket.

AAA Michigan recommends you keep these items in your basement in the event of severe weather:

- Two flashlights (with batteries)
- Extra batteries
- Portable, battery powered radio.
- Bottled water
- Blankets
- Snack items
- First-aid kit
- Emergency phone numbers

AAA Michigan urges residents to review tornado safety procedures and monitor rapidly changing weather conditions.

Historical Society to show off a century of clothing

The Charlevoix Historical Society will present A Century of Clothing with guest speaker Candace Eaton, on Tuesday, April 2, at 7 p.m., in the historic Depot at the east end of Dixon Avenue, Charlevoix.

Eaton, executive director of the Little Traverse History Museum in Petoskey, will bring some of the costumes from the museum's extensive textile and clothing collection and talk about the changes in style and taste of the last one hundred years.

Call the Charlevoix Historical Society at 547-0373 if you need more information about the event. The public is invited to attend at no charge.

Pool to auction off movie posters

With a nod to the seventy-fourth anniversary of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Oscar Awards, "Sunday Night at the Movies" is the theme chosen by the Charlevoix Area Community Pool for its annual auction Aug. 4.

Prizes will be given to movie star look alikes or movie characters, both male and female.

The donation of a number of vintage movie posters from The Last Moving Picture Company sparked the idea. Former Chicago Club member, Morris Everett Jr., owns the firm. He was also instrumental as a consultant in the successful million dollar capital campaign a few years ago to build the pool.

Some of the posters will go on display in downtown Charlevoix stores to offer a preview of those to be auctioned off.

The auction, in its twelfth year, again will be at the Charlevoix Country Club.

Michael Dow, pool board president, said the auction is a vital part of the organization's fund-raising effort. Over $70,000 was raised in each of the last two years, which made it possible for the pool to break even and thereby offer affordable swimming in the Charlevoix area.

Scott MacKenzie, as auctioneer, will once again auction off vacation packages, cruises and gourmet dinners.

Those wishing to make a donation to the auction may call the pool office at 547-0982.

Tone Soup to perform for church series on April 7

The Sundays at Four concert series will present Tone Soup at 4 p.m., April 7 at the First Congregational Church, 101 State Street, in Charlevoix. The musical group features Barbara Stow, Tim Burke and Linda Mueller blending various types of music from the Beatles to Gershwin. Tone Soup's vocals are influenced by folk, pop, swing and jazz.

The public is invited to attend. No admission will be charged. Refreshments will be served immediately following the program.

For additional information call (231) 547-9122.

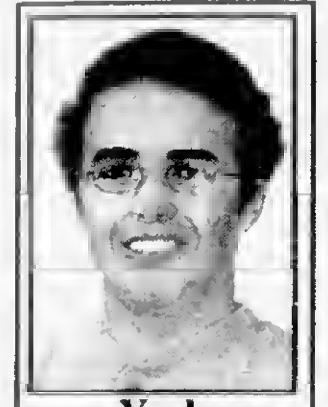
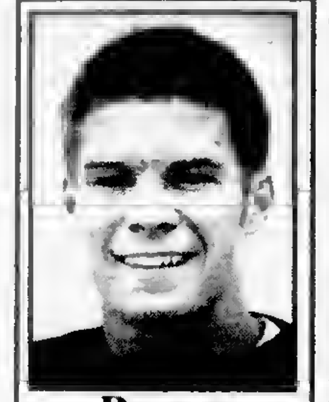
Charlevoix skiers travel to Junior Olympics

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Two Charlevoix students recently took part in the 2002 Rocky Mountain/Central Region Junior Olympics Feb. 25 through March 5 at Beaver Creek, Colo.



York Smith



Roscoe Serrels

York Smith, 16, of Charlevoix competed in three out of four events. Roscoe Serrels, 17 of Charlevoix, went to the event to compete in the Giant Slalom.

Serrels ended his competition with a bad fall four gates from the finish, which sent him into a fence and gave him a cut on his knee. He was unable to compete after this.

Smith placed 65 out of 90 racers in the Super G race and did not complete his run in the slalom. He fell five gates from the finish.

In addition to him, 48 other racers fell in this event, out of 106.

However, in the Giant Slalom, Smith started in the ninety-first position and finished twenty-fourth overall. For this, he received the "Bibo" award — meaning he beat 67 racers by moving up the most spots.

Smith said skiers are honored for finishes such as this because when you start later the course conditions are harder.

"It is almost as good of an accomplishment as a gold, silver or bronze," he said.

Smith said the Beaver Creek event was a lot of fun. Additionally, he said the weather and skiing was great.

"The Junior Olympics is the cream of the crop," he said. "It is a lot of fun to compete with racers from across the United States."

Smith started skiing at a young age, as it was a family hobby. Both of his older brothers — Ryan, 24, and Troy, 19 — also ski and got Smith interested in racing.

While he is still young and has not put much thought into where he would like to go to college, Smith said he is positive he would like to continue his skiing career and compete at higher levels, such as the U.S. Nationals.

"Eventually, I would like to take a shot at the Olympics," he said.

While in Beaver Creek, Smith was interviewed for a spot on the Outdoor Life Network. It will be featured during the station's coverage of the competition at 3 p.m., April 13 and 12 p.m., April 15.

Smith is the son of Steve and Mary Lou Smith of Charlevoix. Serrels is the son of R. Douglas and Cindy Serrels of Charlevoix.

BASKETBALL BANQUET WAS A FINE AFFAIR

Capacity Crowd Paid Honor to Charlevoix's Champion Cagers

A capacity crowd estimated at two hundred attended the basketball banquet given in honor of Charlevoix's Red Rayders by the Pythians at the K. of P. Hall Thursday evening.

Coach Ray Kipke reviewed the team's outstanding record and records of previous teams during his 10 years as coach here. He introduced individual members of the 1937-38 squad, runners-up in state Class-C competition, who responded with brief remarks. Dick Bergman's statement: "There have been Bergmans before me and there will probably be Bergmans after me," virtually brought the house down.

Coach "Buck" Reed of Western State College, Kalamazoo, MIAA champion, gave an interesting talk on basketball particularly and athletics generally. The affair was altogether a very enjoyable one.

Hospital Does Much For Less Than Cost

What the Charlevoix Area Hospital means to the community was made much clearer to the Kiwanians Monday night when they attended the regular monthly meeting of the Hospital Board.

The club members met there, were served dinner by some of the nurses and nurse's aids pinch hitting as waitresses. After the meal, the Hospital Board held its regular meeting while the Kiwanians listened, interrupted to ask questions and took down figures.

Highlights of the meetings were:

Under strict economy, the per day cost of caring for a bed patient has been brought down to $9.72. The hospital rates are: Private room, $10; semi-private room, $7.50; ward, $6. Thus, only the private rooms pay the cost of operation. The others, often taken by those less able to pay, are a definite operating loss.

It is to make up such deficits that help from the public is needed. Dr. G. B. Saltonstall explained that no hospital in the country is paying its own way today, and that most Detroit hospitals have a per day cost of $20 a bed.

The hospital employs 29 now, including eight nurses. In January, it had 76 paying bed patients, five county and three state patients. Twenty-two babies were born there. Peak load was 29 adults and four babies.

Food for January cost $833.48; heat and lights, $286.34; supplies and operating costs, $1,483.35. The payroll was $3,554.75; a total for the month of $6,157.92.

The January earnings were $4,973.20, although total receipts were $6,046.22.

The reports were given by E. J. Edwards, Mrs. Pauline Campbell, Mrs. Ethel Hamlin. At the start of the meeting, Dr. F. F. McMillan gave his definition of a hospital:

"It is a specialized hotel with highly trained help caring for guests who have to come there."

Buck Deer Rescued From Lake Michigan Ice Floes

Robert Bergman, Dale Bradley Risked Lives to Save Stranded Animal Sunday

What might have been one of nature's tragedies was averted Sunday afternoon when Robert Bergman and Dale Bradley rescued a small buck deer stranded in slush ice about a mile off shore north of the pier heads in Lake Michigan.

The two men dragged flat-bottom steel rowboats over the treacherous moving ice cakes to reach the animal. Frightened by their approach, the deer jumped out into open water, but the men herded it back into the ice again, lassoed it first then tied its feet securely with ropes and hauled it into one of the boats. They rowed nearly to South Point, where absence of ice allowed a landing.

According to reports, Mrs. George Smith witnessed the deer walking down the beach behind their Michigan Avenue residence, and saw it frightened onto the ice by a swooping bald-headed eagle. It fell repeatedly after reaching the outer slush ice and finally laid down, apparently either injured or exhausted.

An attempted rescue by Captain Charles Allers with Michigan patrol Boat No. 1, now in harbor here, failed. Also, a party composed of George Smith, Don Swinton, Cliff Gregory and Bergman failed to reach the deer in the morning, and it was not until late afternoon that Bergman and Bradley completed the rescue.

The two men dragged their boats, one containing the deer, across the ice to the shore drive near Boulder Park. A road has been plowed by the county road commission to this point and the animal was transferred to a truck and brought to Hooker's stables, where he occupied a stall during the night. Monday morning, conservation officer Ed. Deuel released the animal in the woods at the Waller farm, north of the city.

Hundreds of people had watched the deer and efforts to rescue it during the day.

Sewer gets the OK from Marion Township

SEWER

Their concem is based on a letter Porter sent to Wiesner in January of this year. Porter pointed out the 8 inch sewer line's design flaws that could lead to pollution if installed to service the school.

Porter explained fluids would not move quickly enough through part of the line to clean it. The minimum velocity considered to provide cleansing of sewage solids in an 8 inch pipe, as is proposed, requires over 300 gallons of fluid per minute to flow through it moving two feet per second.

Porter told Wiesner, without the movement solids would accumulate and decay, releasing hydrogen sulfides, which could potentially dissolve the concrete and cause odor problems.

As a result of the letter, in January, John Adams and Associates, the Ypsilanti based project engineer, changed the design to include a 4 inch force main that would run 1,050 feet of the project where the gravity system failed to meet the MDEQ's specifications.

The plan was to connect to the 8 inch line once the necessary flow is achieved.

However, the design change has since reverted back to its original 8 inch status, with the 4 inch force main running alongside, unused.

The residents' contested case will be heard by administrators with the MDEQ who will review the city's application. No date has been set for the review.

In the meantime, the sewer extension project is full speed ahead. The city of Charlevoix has received all approvals for the project.

The Marion Township Planning Commission granted the project site plan approval and approved its Section 10 specifications March 14.

Then, the Marion Township Board met March 18 and unanimously approved the contract and franchise agreement. Bud Boss, Marion Township Supervisor, explained the contract approval allows the city to run the sewer line and maps the responsibilities of the parties involved. And the franchise agreement says the city can use the road right-of-way and spells out how things are to be taken care of.

The Charlevoix Township Board met March 20 and also approved the contract.

The administrative representatives of the school district approved the contract March 25, with an addendum.

After the district decision was made, city council approved the engineer's contract, the environmental review and awarded the construction contract to Corvette Construction of Grawn at a special meeting March 25.

The city also approaved the addendum approved by the school board.

The addendum protects the city if there is a stop work order resulting from the lawsuit currently pending in the Michigan Court of Appeals or if the MDEQ decides to revoke the permit it issued.

The school district would be required to pay the construction costs incurred.

solving Charlevoix's seasonal traffic problem. And it will be conducted by a professional engineer, who will look at both vehicular and pedestrian traffic.

"We want to come up with a definition of the problem before we offer solutions," Nesburg said.

The groups plan to employ two Michigan State University tramsportation engineers. They will be in Charlevoix in the next couple of weeks to work out details.

The city/chamber traffic study will start this summer and Nesburg said they may be able to test some of the engineer's proposed solutions in early October during Apple Festival.

They hope to have the engineer return from the study with two to three recommendations. Some possible solutions Nesburg highlighted include reprogramming stop lights and the implementation of a crossing guard.

Mike Wiesner, city manager, said the project is unrelated to proposed renovations to East Park and the Michigan Department of Transportation, owner of Bridge Street, will have input in any decision made.

City to lose ship?

The Acacia is slated to leave. (File photo)

> Commander Doug McCann,
> U.S. Coast Guard Ninth District

The city of Charlevoix will no longer have a Coast Guard cutter in its harbor after 2006, according to the Ninth District Commander.

According to Commander Doug McCann, of the Ninth District, the Coast Guard buoy tender Acacia — currently docked in the harbor — will be decommissioned in the summer of 2006 and the government will not place another cutter in Charlevoix. He said plans for this were finalized in early February.

"This is a done deal. This is a firm decision," he said.

McCann said the Coast Guard is in the process of replacing the current 180 foot buoy tenders on the Great Lakes — including the Acacia — with a new class of 225 foot buoy tenders. The new ships will be faster, therefore they can service more buoys than the current ships, he said.

Because of this, the Coast Guard will be placing only two of the ships on the Great Lakes. Additionally, a new ice cutter named the Mackinaw — which will replace the current Mackinaw stationed in Cheboygan — is being built and will also have buoy tending abilities. The new Mackinaw will arrive in 2005.

McCann said the Coast Guard has decided the two new buoy tenders will be stationed in Duluth, Minn. and Port Huron. The Port Huron ship will arrive in June 2004, while the Minnesota ship will arrive in September 2006.

"These new ships are more capable, longer, faster and can service more aids. Plus, the new Mackinaw is also a buoy tender, so we had to select," he said.

The reason the new ships will be on the Great Lakes before the

CHIP Counseling Center to drop service

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

After over 25 years in business, the role of Chip Counseling Center will change — starting April 12, the agency will no longer provide substance abuse and mental health counseling.

Scott Hickman, executive director of the counseling center that services Charlevoix, Emmet, Antrim and Cheboygan counties, said the change is a result of financial difficulties the agency has faced.

"As with changes in any agency or business, it boils down to finances. We made reductions earlier in the year hoping to avoid this situation but weren't able to turn it around," Hickman said.

He said the financial downturn is related to a number of factors including a decrease in the number of clients the center provides counseling services to.

"Part of it is a sign of the times. Some people are struggling to keep a job and aren't going to ask for time off to go to an appointment, they are doing what they have to do to maintain their employment and their livelihood," Hickman said.

He added that the center has also had fewer referrals from community corrections and has faced state funding changes.

Hickman said the four county program currently services an estimated 1,500 clients each year and making referrals won't be easy.

"We're doing the best we can, but unfortunately in Charlevoix County there aren't a lot of places to refer clients to," Hickman said.

He added that the agency's Charlevoix County mental health patients will most likely be referred to Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency.

Hickman hopes to see a new provider come through the state of Michigan provider panel for substance abuse counseling services.

All of the eight employees at the four county offices will retain their positions. Hickman's position will be reduced to part-time. He has found a position at North Central Michigan College.

The center will continue to provide prevention services in all four counties. The Charlevoix office will remain its hub, Emmet and Cheboygan counties will be serviced through an Emmet County office and Antrim County will be serviced from a home office.

Hickman said the prevention services reach an estimated 1,800 to 2,500 children each year.

Chip Counseling Center has provided substance abuse and mental health counseling to residents of Charlevoix County since 1976. Charlevoix County was the first to be serviced and the programs then spread into the other three counties previously mentioned.

The prevention services being offered are closely related to education. For more information about prevention services provided through Chip contact Linda Stolt at (231) 547-6552.

What should be done with school?

EDITORIAL

It seems that every native resident of Charlevoix has a story, or two, about the Charlevoix Middle School.

Whenever the subject is brought up, Charlevoix natives smile as they recollect times spent on the playground in their youth, classmates they knew, teachers they respected and lessons they learned. The school definitely has a wonderful history in Charlevoix and is a representation of everything good about the community's past.

But, now the future of the building is clouded. With the building of the new high school on Marion Center Road and the old high school being turned into a middle school, this leaves the Charlevoix Middle School building without a purpose at this time.

Will it be turned into a community center, a small business center, a new library or will officials just tear the building down and make a park (which we hope they do not do)? School district officials are just not sure what to do with it.

But, you have a chance to help them decide.

The Charlevoix School Board is seeking comments from residents on the fate of the Charlevoix Middle School at its regular meeting April 8 in the study hall of Charlevoix High School.

They want residents to attend this meeting and give them ideas for the building. One rule to this is whatever use is picked must be self-sufficient, therefore not drawing any funds out of the district's budget.

We urge residents to attend this meeting with a list of their ideas. It is a chance to save a historic building in Charlevoix, give input to your elected school board officials and create a great new use for the old middle school that will benefit many.

The trials, tribulations of being a grandmother

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

Now is the time people start making vacation plans for the summer. Kids are registered for camp and parents are circling dates for a visit to Grandma's.

Expectations are high, for the bond between generations is a given. Grandma's freezer will be filled with favorite family dishes. Beds will be made, surprise toys will be stashed away and plans for special outings are being penciled in on the calendar — Venetian weekend, a boat ride, a picnic on the beach. All winter Grandma has been looking lovingly at pictures of her angelic grandchildren's clean and smiling faces set in charming little frames on small end tables in the living room.

That's when memory plays tricks on grandmas!

Grandma never seems to remember wet underwear on the bathroom floor, sandy feet traipsing through the kitchen, the screen door left open, neglected phone messages, shoes in the middle of the room or sticky finger marks on the windows.

When she asks, "Why do you come to the table with dirty hands? You know I always send you back to wash." Her grandchild replies, "Well, once you forgot!"

Also forgotten are the dinner table scenes, "Elbows off the table," and, "Yuck, I'm not going to eat THAT!"

But even worse than entertaining visiting small fry is to baby-sit grandchildren while their parents are away. Three new, young grandmothers shared these true confessions with me over lunch the other day.

"I was already packed and almost out the door when my son and daughter-in-law returned."

"Why are you leaving so soon, Mom? Can't you stay and visit with us for a while?"

"'Not for one more minute,' was my immediate reply as I headed to the car."

All the grandmothers nodded in agreement.

"I know exactly how you feel. I'm on the couch for two days with tranquilizers after I return home," another grandmother chimed in. "I always catch the kids' colds when I visit them and they last for weeks."

Then she added, "Did I tell you what I'm getting Dottie for her birthday?"

Trying to abide by a daughter's house rules helps us understand why seasoned grandparents find other amusements — like trips to elder hostels and lecture cruises, instead of babysitting.

"I don't know where Joan gets all those fancy ideas! I never raised her that way."

How I was raised is a moot question, but last summer my house was filled for weeks with four generations. The baby pictures in my bedroom are now towering teenagers, or parents of toddlers.

And memory played tricks again when I try remembering who belongs to whom, so I end up saying, "You there in the kitchen, please bring me a dish towel."

Finally, my vacation cure all, when people are kicking each other under the table or pulling the dog's tail is to announce cheerfully, "Let's all go to the Dairy Queen!"

It works every time. Pass it on.

Where is coverage?

Editor:

On March 20, 2002 the Charlevoix Elementary School had its annual Spring Musical. It was the thirtieth musical that Mrs. LaBlance, the music teacher, put together. In an age where some schools have little or no arts education, we would like to take this opportunity to thank the Charlevoix Public Schools and in particular, Mrs. LaBlance and Ms. McGraw for their continual passion for educating children in the arts, a passion that manifests itself not only in the musical, but also on a daily basis.

We were saddened, however, that the Charlevoix Courier did not cover this community event. For that indeed is what it was. Five hundred plus children spent weeks preparing a stirring tribute to our country, including armed forces participation and then 1800 plus Charlevoix area family and friends came to witness a celebration of our country's heritage and our nation's future — our children.

We hope that the Courier will cover this event next year, so that our children will see that, along with athletic accomplishments for example, Charlevoix is proud of their musical contribution to our community.

Recycling tips

Editor:

This letter is for all the citizens that use the Recycling Bins here in Charlevoix at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department. Thanks so much for using it.

Recycling has started off very well and we certainly hope it continues for many years. To do so, we must ask for your help! It's really easy; please take a pamphlet located at the end of the bin home with you.

We have two large divided bins - the first one holds newspapers, magazines and catalogs only! (Please no hard-bound books, junk mail or copy paper).

The second half holds number 1 and number 2 plastic jugs or bottles only! It's that simple!

The second divided bin holds tin and aluminum. (Smash your cans, it will make room for more.) The other half holds clear glass only!

Cardboard - pick up days are Tuesday and Saturday - residential only. (We hope to have a place for commercial soon).

These boxes must be broken down (no pizza boxes - no pop cartons). It may take you a little longer but it will certainly help save the tax payer money and keep things rolling.

We are doing our part. Please do yours!

Sewer questions

Editor:

During the course of the Marion Township meeting on March 18, I was allowed to hear the wonderful opportunities that a sewer system would provide for the new school and the township. I was assured that it was not a harbinger of expansion and sprawl. The city oozed warm and fuzzy feelings about their great work. However, when questions were finally allowed, I asked what the cost for an individual hook-up to the sewer would be. Then I was greeted by complete and utter silence ... finally Mr. Scott Beatty, the township legal counsel, suggested to Mr. Mike Wiesner that he answer my question.

Mr. Wiesner stated that an individual hook-up would cost $8,600. He explained this amount included "$1,500 in various fees, an access charge of $3,600, effective April 1." Previously the amount had been $2,100, and $2,700 for a "grinder-pump," required for each property to utilize the sewer line. Those figures only amount to $7,800; either I misunderstood, or there are other fees involved. I also asked what mechanism would fund future expansion — there was no answer.

Since the stated plan for recouping expenditures is through future hook-ups to the sewer line, I wonder how this can be without preplanned further development? It has been stated throughout all of the "warm and fuzzy" sewer acceptance meetings that there are only 14 individual properties that could access the sewer. Strangely the city couldn't identify these properties when asked. In any event 14 times $8,600 equals $120,400. If the estimated cost of the sewer is $550,000, that leaves a shortfall of approximately $430,000. This does not include the $50,000 that the school gave MICHCON for a gas line past the high school to a fairly strategic location on Marion Center Road, close to Veenstra Road. The same way that there is a sewer connection recently constructed along US-31 and Stover Road, for quick access to the high school. How far-sighted to plan ahead, even before any public hearings! MICHCON had no problem disclosing that amount, nor the other fees that they would collect for any hook-ups to the gas line. It remains to be seen how long it is before the sewer becomes a Hydra and snakes further down our little country road.

It was also mentioned during the township board meeting that the township counsel was being paid for by the school and the city. A very interesting business arrangement to say the least.

Thank you

Editor:

As another spring season approaches, I would like to thank Dave Johnson for allowing the Exceptional Rider's program to use the Bay Harbor Equestrian Club for our riding program.

This is a riding program for handicapped boys and girls in the spring and fall. On behalf of all riders, we would also like to thank the Equestrian Club Manager, Sam Cadwell and trainers, Jakki Balter and Alicia Byberg. Without their help and the many volunteers that work as leaders and sidewalkers, this program could not exist.

Last, but not least, we would especially like to thank Barbara Lane-Harrington, the president of the Exceptional Riders Program and our certified instructor. This continues to be a collaborative effort on the part of volunteers from both Emmet and Charlevoix counties and all of the Exceptional Riders are most appreciative.

Try Wagbo Peace Center

Editor:

Once again the non-profit Wagbo Peace Center brings to your table the freshest foods from local family farms.

In anticipation of the upcoming 2002 growing season, the staff at Wagbo Peace Center is planning a virtual cornucopia of fresh, healthy foods for you and your family. The garden plots are mapped out and greenhouse seeds are being planted in preparation for this season's Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) program.

CSA is already in over 100 communities and is a relatively new concept in the field of agriculture. It works by connecting local people interested in fresh, high quality foods to local farms using sustainable farming practices. In this "partnership," shareholders pay in advance for their food, just like a magazine subscription. This allows farmers to purchase supplies and labor without loans and to market their products prior to the busy growing season. By committing to a share, the shareholder is willing to accept the risk with the local farmer if it is a poor growing season or the benefits of a great season's bounty. Supporting the economic health of a local sustainable farm is the key.

This year, Wagbo Peace Center's "Multi-Farm" CSA program will include over 15 family farms. Additional items will be available to vegetable shareholders and to the general public. Shares such as fresh rainbow trout from the Jordan Valley Trout Pond, a bouquet of fresh cut flowers from Hart's Irish Acres, naturally raised meats including your Thanksgiving turkey, glass bottled milk, pasture-raised eggs, Shitake mushrooms, sweet corn and honey are just some of the products that will be available for summer shares.

There are countless benefits in a CSA program. By buying local, CSAs keep financial resources in the community and cut energy usage incurred in shipping products from other bioregions. People become more connected with the land, feel more secure in actually knowing where their food is coming from and how it is grown and have the satisfaction of knowing they are helping to preserve the environmental integrity and produce food free of genetically modified organisms, growth hormones and synthetic chemicals. In participating with local CSAs, shareholders help to support a traditional small family farm in competing with the mass industrialization of today's modern agriculture.

Find a CSA close to you and reap the economic, ecological and health benefits of supporting a local family farm! Remember the old but true cliché, "you are what you eat."

Charlevoix Middle School has a rich history

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix School District is faced with a hard decision — what to do with the old middle school on Grant Street which will be abandoned this fall.

The site has historic value and Dr. John Sturock, Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, has expressed the district's interest in keeping the building. But the school district doesn't have the money to continue to pay for it, so its future use must be self-sustaining.

Education files kept at the Charlevoix Historical Society's Harsha House Museum in Charlevoix, reveal that in the past, when new building projects were taken on, old buildings were torn down.

Formal education in Charlevoix started in the fall of 1861 in a stick school house insulated with moss and mud, that was built near the old Belvedere Hotel.

Mrs. M.J. Stockman was the first teacher and according to Dave Miles, of the Charlevoix Historical Society, her memoirs prove being a school teacher in pioneer days was less than a comfortable experience.

Stockman taught anywhere from 20 to 30 students between the ages of 3 and 20 and made about $1 a week. Schools weren't publicly funded at the time and each parent paid according to the number of children they sent to school. Needless to say, Stockman's school bag was full of "IOUs."

The school house was replaced in 1868 by a school that, if still standing, would sit close to the property Oleson's is on now. Then in 1873 a third facility was built which was lost to a fire in 1889.

A few school houses later came the reality many current Charlevoixans can relate to, a need for more room, a gymnasium and an auditorium.

On April 12, 1927, after the community voted down two building proposals, a bond issue for $125,000 was passed.

A new building project started and on May 3 and 4, 1928 the new building, our current old middle school, was dedicated.

It connected to a school built in 1902 by way of an underground tunnel and the two schools shared the gymnasium. The building built in 1902 was torn down in 1961, but if still standing would sit where the portable classrooms currently are, off Mason Street.

Students in grades seven through 12 attended school at the older of the two buildings and kindergarten through six grade students went to the new facility, now our old middle school.

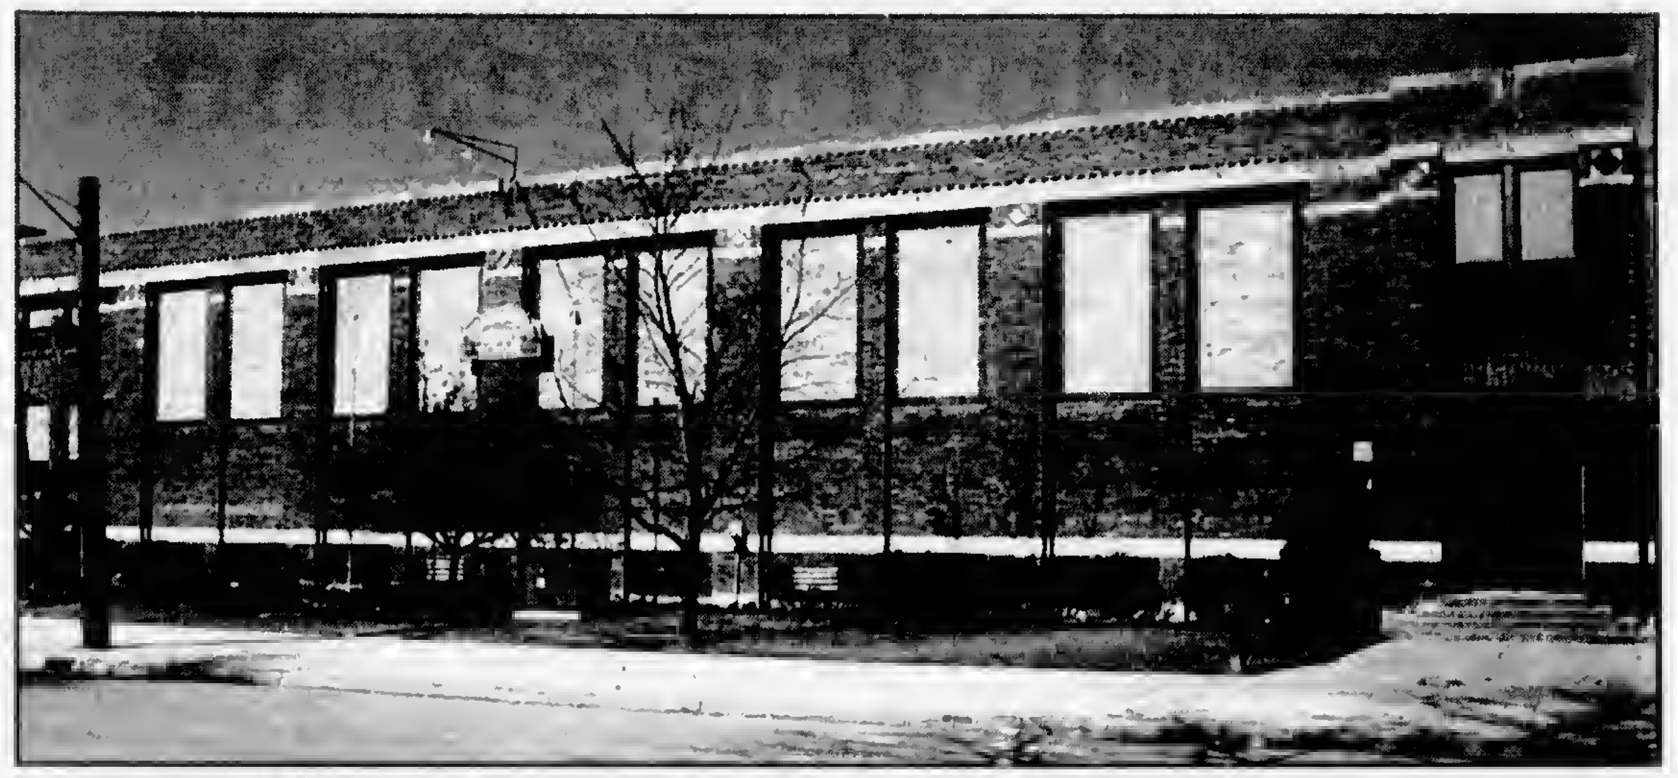
The school was converted to middle school student use only in 1968 when the current elementary school on the north side, off Division Street, was built.

During the current middle school's long history as a school Miles said it has been used for everything: movie viewing, concerts, musicals, plays, community meetings, speeches and even donkey basketball.

He said the donkey basketball was only a one time deal, "for obvious reasons."

Now, almost 80 years later, the Charlevoix Public School District is again undertaking a major building project, the new Charlevoix High School. And this time is contemplating uses for its old facility.

See page 9 for information regarding ideas the school district has generated for use of the old building.



Charlevoix Middle School has been a part of the community for many years. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

APR 2002

Prepare your home for a tornado this season

Even if you live outside "tornado alley," the area of the country that runs north from Texas through eastern Nebraska and northeast to Indiana, you are still very vulnerable to tornadoes.

While some parts of the nation see more of these unpredictable and dangerous storms, the rest of the country gets its share of twisters.

You don't have to be blown away when nature lets loose. It's never too early to prepare and you can take several basic steps to protect your family and home from disaster.

When a tornado threatens, you can improve the odds of surviving high winds by taking the following steps:

- You should decide in advance where you will take shelter. When a tornado approaches, go there immediately.
- If your home does not have a storm cellar or in-residence "safe" room and you have no time to get to a community shelter, head to the centermost part of your basement or home — away from windows and preferably under something sturdy like a workbench or staircase. The more walls between you and the outside, the better.
- Also become familiar with your community's severe weather warning system and make sure that every family member knows what to do when a tornado "watch" or "warning" sounds.

Then, have an emergency kit together which should include; a three-day supply of drinking water and food you don't have to refrigerate or cook; first aid supplies; a portable weather radio; a wrench and other basic tools; flashlight; work gloves; emergency cooking equipment; portable lanterns; fresh batteries for each piece of equipment; blankets; prescription medications; extra car and house keys; credit cards and cash; and important documents.

- When authorities announce a tornado "watch," move anything in your yard before a storm strikes that can become flying debris. If a tornado "warning" is announced, leave it all alone.
- Don't open your windows. This won't save the house, as once thought, and it might make things worse by allowing wind and rain to get inside.
- Don't try to ride out a tornado in a manufactured home. Even with tie-downs, these structures have light frames and offer winds a large surface area to push against. Also, their exteriors are vulnerable to high winds and wind-borne debris.

When building or remodeling, here are a few tips to help protect your family and home as much as possible:

- If you are replacing existing windows, install impact-resistant window systems. This applies to all glass doors too.
- Make sure your doors have at least three hinges and a dead bolt security lock.
- Garage doors, because of their size and construction are highly susceptible to wind damage. A qualified inspector can determine if the door and track system can resist high winds and, if necessary, replace them with a stronger system.
- If you are replacing your roof, take steps to ensure that the new roof covering and sheathing it attaches to will resist high winds. Your roofing contractor should: Remove old coverings down to the bare wood sheathing; remove sheathing to be sure that rafters and trusses are securely connected to the walls, then replace the sheathing; seal all roof sheathing joints with self-stick rubberized asphalt tape to provide a secondary moisture barrier.
- If your home has more than one story, make certain the upper story wall framing is firmly connected to the lower framing. This is best done during the original construction or when you remodel.

Future uses for school brainstormed

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The fate of Charlevoix's historic Middle School will be discussed at the April 8 school board meeting in the Charlevoix High School study hall.

The current Charlevoix Middle School was built over 70 years ago and has always been used to educate area students, but now, with a new high school on the way and middle schoolers making a move to the old high school, it's time for the school district to decide what the building's new role will be.

Dr. John Sturock, Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, said whatever choice the school board makes, it must follow a few guidelines. First, the use must not be a draw on district funds and second, there must be a class inside the building for code updates to be waived.

"People who have grown up in the community and have gone to school there would like to keep the building out there. But, the school district can't afford to lose money — that would cost programs for our students," Sturock explained.

So, for the building to stay, whatever it's used for must support its operating costs.

One improvement the facility will need if the district opts to keep it, regardless of its use, is a new roof. But, funding and costs associated with renovations weren't the focus of the middle school use brainstorming session March 26, where all possible uses were discussed.

At the meeting, members of the school board were joined by county, township and city officials and other members of organizations in and around Charlevoix.

The groups came up with a list of 50 different ways the building could be used.

Many of the ideas could work in tandem with one another. The building is 41,700 square feet and could accommodate several organizations, businesses, residents and students.

One commonly discussed idea has been to relocate the Charlevoix Public Library to the site. Hugh Mason, chairman of the Downtown Development Authority (DDA), echoed this concept and added a twist.

"The library is squeezed to the hilt, why not move the library to the middle school and further open up East Park by moving the Chamber of Commerce to the old library (on Clinton Street)," he suggested.

Both Mary Anne Chew, a library board member, and Valerie Meyerson, library director, expressed interest in a land swap with the school district. The current library facility was donated and, under the agreement made, is required to remain an educational facility.

Sturock said the school board is open to all options including a land swap or trade.

The DDA and the city of Charlevoix are currently in the midst of conducting a convention center study. The possibility of converting the gym into a meeting area was mentioned.

Another option is a community center where intramural sports coordinated through the city recreation department could be accommodated, along with the community lunch program, the food pantry, boy and girl scout meetings, day care, senior programs, community education classes, a community computer lab, relocation of the local BASES program, a teen center or a teen drop center.

Charlevoix is also home to several festivals. In the event of uncooperative weather during those festivals it was suggested the crafters, artists or growers be moved to the school. Or, to enhance the local scope of businesses, some mentioned opening the building as an incubator business location, as a gallery or as a site for office space rental or housing.

Education options were also discussed, including using the school as the new elementary school, moving the central office in, making it the location of a charter school or use as a satellite college campus.

Sturock said one of the school district's long-range concerns is inadequate accommodations at central office — an issue the administration plans to tackle after the new high school is complete.

If the board decided to go the route of tearing the building down, park options were also discussed.

The school board will review these and other options at its meeting scheduled to take place at 7 p.m., April 8 in the current high school study hall room. Out of that meeting Sturock said he foresees a process being established as to how the decision will move forward.

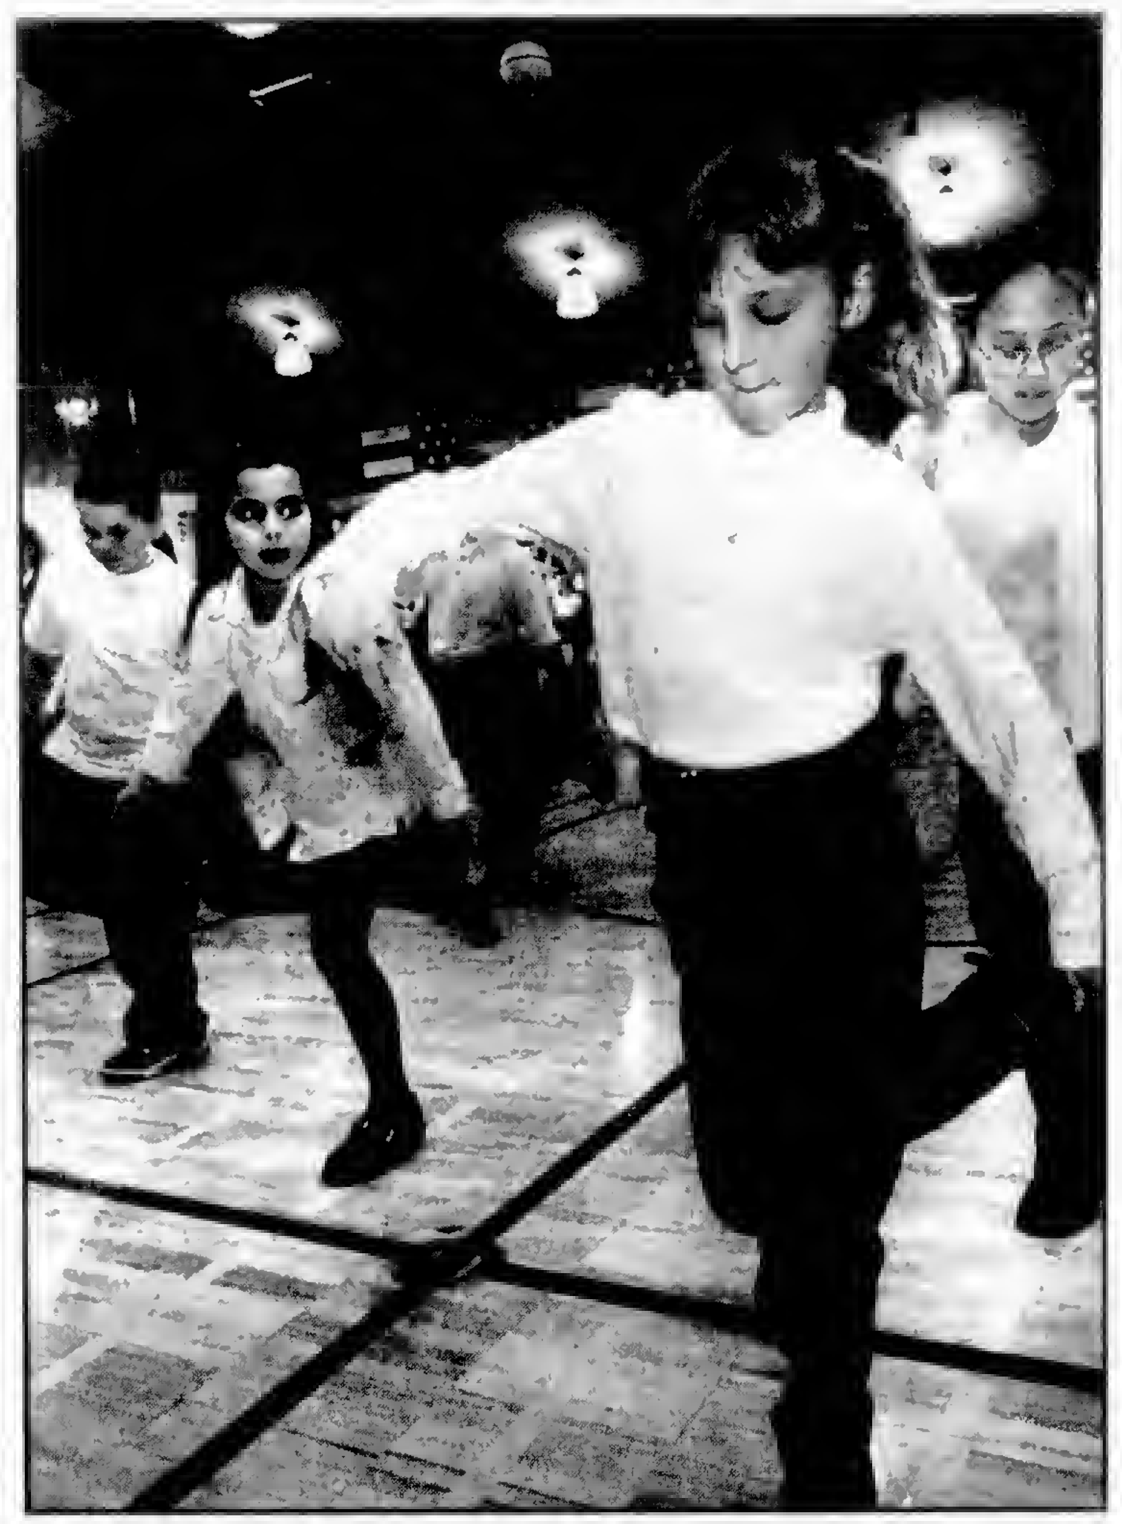
Thirty years of musical magic

Charlevoix Elementary School students marked 30 years of its annual Spring Musical under the direction of Marina LaBlance March 20 at the Charlevoix High School gym. The theme for the performance was "America the Dream Goes On," complete with patriotic performances. Local military personnel were invited on stage for a tribute. (Photos by G. Randall Goss of the Petoskey News-Review)



Above right and left, in addition to showing off their singing skills, students danced for the crowd composed of parents and community members. Left, over 500 students sang their hearts out during the performance, that was complete with a drum and fife corp (above). Flags were draped across the back wall of the gym highlighting the patriotism of the night.

HEALTH

There are many myths about sleeping habits

The National Sleep Foundation has complied a top 10 list of myths about sleep in recognition of National Sleep Awareness Week, April 1 through April 7.

Myth: Snoring is a common problem, especially among young men, but it isn't harmful.

Fact: Although snoring may be harmless for most people, it can be a symptom of a life threatening sleep disorder called sleep apnea, especially if it is accompanied by daytime sleepiness. Sleep apnea is characterized by pauses in breathing that prevent air from flowing into or out of a sleeping person's airways. People with sleep apnea awaken frequently during the night gasping for breath. The breathing pauses reduce blood oxygen levels, can strain the heart and cardiovascular system and increase the risk of cardiovascular disease. Snoring on a frequent or regular basis has been directly associated with hypertension. Obesity and a large neck can contribute to sleep apnea. Sleep apnea can be treated; men and women who snore loudly, especially if pauses in the snoring are noted, should consult a physician.

Myth: You can "cheat" on the amount of sleep you get.

Fact: Sleep experts say most adults need between seven and nine hours of sleep each night for optimum performance, health and safety. When we don't get adequate sleep, we accumulate a sleep debt that can be difficult to "pack back," it becomes too big. The resulting sleep depravation has been linked to health problems such as obesity and high blood pressure, negative mood and behavior, decreased productivity and safety issues in the home, on the job and on the road.

Myth: Turning up the radio, opening the window or turning on the air conditioner are effective ways to stay awake when driving.

Fact: These "aids" are ineffective and can be dangerous to the person who is driving while feeling drowsy or sleepy. If you're feeling tired while driving, the best thing to do is to pull off the road at a safe rest area and take a nap for 15-45 minutes. Caffeinated beverages can help overcome drowsiness for a short period of time. However, it takes about 30 minutes before the effects are felt. The best prevention for drowsy driving is a good night's sleep the night before your trip.

Myth: Teens who fall asleep in class have bad habits and/or are lazy.

Fact: According to sleep experts, teens need at least 8.5-9.25 hours of sleep each night, compared to an average of seven to nine hours each night for most adults. Their internal biological clocks also keep them awake later in the evening and keep them sleeping later in the morning. However, many schools begin classes early in the morning, when a teenager's body wants to be asleep. As a result, many teens come to school too sleepy to learn, through no fault of their own.

Myth: Insomnia is characterized by difficulty sleeping.

Fact: Difficulty falling asleep is but one of four symptoms generally associated with insomnia. The others include waking up too early and not being able to fall back asleep, frequent awakenings and not waking refreshed. Insomnia can be a symptom of a sleep disorder or other medical or psychological/psychiatric problem, and can often be treated. According to the National Sleep Foundation's 2002 Sleep in America poll, 58 percent of adults in this country reported at least one symptom of insomnia in the past year. When insomnia symptoms occur more than a few times a week and impact a person's daytime functions, the symptoms should be discussed with a doctor or other health care provider.

Myth: Daytime sleepiness always means a person isn't getting enough sleep.

Fact: Excessive daytime sleepiness is a condition in which an individual feels very drowsy during the day and has an urge to fall asleep

Charlevoix resident ready to fight terrorists

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

During the past six months in Charlevoix, residents have watched our country's battle against terrorism unfold on television, in newspapers and over the Internet — but, when local soldiers are called to duty, the war marches right into our community.

Sean Roberts

Charlevoix resident Sean Roberts, 22, joined the Army over a year ago and will soon be deployed to engage in his first Infantry mission.

At a recent safety briefing, that took place at Fort Riley, Kansas — where Roberts has been stationed for over a year — he and others in his company were told by their commanding officer to take a mandatory leave.

Roberts said the officer was indirectly telling the soldiers to spend time with their family and friends because it was time to deploy on a combat mission and there is no guarantee they would he coming home.

Most shudder at the thought of being told its time to go to battle. But Roberts said this was part of the agreement he made when he signed on and is the reality he faces daily.

He said he didn't join the Army to earn money toward college or for any other government perks that could come his way, he joined because he's always wanted to serve the United States.

So, when the country was attacked, Sept. 11, 2001 Roberts didn't look for a way out, he and many other members of his platoon were angry and ready to defend democratic ideals and the American people.

"One tragic event can't change my decision and desire to serve my country," he said.

Since he signed on, his mission every day has been to prepare for combat. Now, it is time for his platoon and the rest of the company of 175 men to go to work.

When asked whether he's ready for the next six to eight months overseas, Roberts said you're never fully prepared, but fear and pain are the factors that actually keep you together.

"War and combat make everyone nervous, everyone will have the jitters no matter how you prepare. But, it's the things you do when you're nervous or scared that define who you are. Fear and pain are arguably the two most important things in a battle situation. Fear keeps you alert and pain lets you know you're still alive," he said.

For the last year, at Fort Riley, he has trained to do his job. He described the base as a self-contained fort with qualification and exercise ranges where the soldiers are familiarized with everything from M-16s to heavy artillery.

Roberts has taken part in action briefings and was at the National Training Center at Fort Erwin, Calif. in September and October of 2001 where the men practiced desert and mountain terrain action.

"The command station there (at Fort Erwin) did everything within its power to make sure we are ready to do what we have to do," Roberts assured.

However, he also admitted that preparing for the physical task is easier than gearing up for battle mentally.

"You can never totally mentally prepare yourself for the reality of possibly not living to see your family and friends again. But, like in any other situation, once your faced with it, you deal with it as best you can," he said.

During his recent leave, Roberts spent time with his mom Valerie Pedersen, classified advertising manager for the Charlevoix Courier, and Danielle, his little sister, and worked out, ate well and relaxed.

But, he didn't watch a minute of the news. He said he intentionally avoided news information, because his next briefing would come soon enough.

His final destination was most recently decided to be Kuwait or Yemen, but this information is not set in stone, the company's orders change often. One thing is for sure though, these men, including Roberts, one of Charlevoix's own, will soon be deployed.

Once he's reached his final destination he and his platoon will be deployed as mechanized infantry in a light armor vehicle called the Bradley. The Bradley is equipped with a 25 millimeter cannon, missiles and port firing weapons. The driver is called the gunner and the commander calls the shots.

Aboard the Bradley there are also "the dismounts," like Roberts, who leave the vehicle on foot by way of a ramp that is lowered to the ground. The dismounts are armed with M-16s and engage in squad style tactics and combat.

They will only have their courage, skills, guns, body armor and each other to protect them while on the ground.
